But it is the law of change. And in this current situation we have to live with it ourselves.

Incidentally, Mr. Lougheed's statements don't have anyone's endorsement, at least overtly.

They are viewed probably as bare-rattling; there is confidence that the oil will be available and that the important Sarnia project will go ahead.

But perhaps not until after the federal election.

Archbishop Of Canterbury Once Taught In Toronto

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Thomson News Service

It's not everyone who has the opportunity to take lectures and rub shoulders with an Archbishop of Canterbury.

But when I did with Dr. Frederick Donald Coggan, who was formally appointed by the Queen a few days ago, he was a long way from this exalted post, but a good distance along the path of scholarship in Semitic languages when he came to Wycliffe College at the University of Toronto in 1937.

Dr. Donald Coggan (he has dropped the Frederick apparently) was invited to Wycliffe by the former principal, that college, Dr. Ramsay Armitage in the year he became its head. Armitage, always an intense Anglophile, was highly partial to English professors in Wycliffe. Coggan being only one of several appointed over the years.

And at that time, of course, the Anglican Church of Canada was still called The Church of England in Canada.

Dr. Coggan taught courses in New Testament to a determinedly few group of candidates for the Anglican ministry who probably did not appreciate they were under the care and tutelage of an outstanding Hebrew scholar.

Wycliffe, like its sister college Trinity across Hoskin Avenue in the heart of the University of Toronto campus, still produces most of the personnel for the Anglican Church in Canada.

Next door to Wycliffe in University College of the University of Toronto is one of the outstanding departments of Semitic languages anywhere with whom Dr. Coggan liaised during his years (1937-1944) in Canada.

I remember his crisp, inspirational yet entirely profound analyses of both the Christian and intellectual challenge of the gospels. He was equally inspired by Arabic as scholar who related the new Christianity to the old Semitic beliefs.

This is something that a few years ago would have been unthinkable, and which still may be regretted at some time.

But it is the law of change. And in this current situation we have to live with it ourselves.

Incidentally, Mr. Lougheed's statements don't have anyone's endorsement, at least overtly.

They are viewed probably as bare-rattling; there is confidence that the oil will be available and that the important Sarnia project will go ahead.

But perhaps not until after the federal election.

Fear of Communists Dumped Mitterand

French President Won with Conservative Vote

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS (AP) — Valery Giscard d'Estaing scrambled to the French pinnacle, aided by youth, charm, a fine-edged mind and an appeal for change without risk. Four young voters of seeing Communists installed in the government, as defeated Socialist Francois Mitterrand had promised, also may have helped Giscard d'Estaing.

By most political yardsticks, Giscard d'Estaing would be an unlikely winner in left-leaning France. He is wealthy, aloof, an egghead specializing in economics. He was burdened by a long term as finance minister when inflation was devouring the franc.

A tall, lanky man, youthfully trim for his 48 years, Giscard d'Estaing waged a long battle to break out of his appearance as a cold intellectual.

He was seen sur television wearing a sweater at work, had his picture taken riding the subway and played an accordion solo at a convention of the independent Republican party of which he is leader.

He allowed TV cameras in after he took a shower following a local football match in Chamalieres, the town in central France where he has been mayor since 1967.

His campaign included use of Giscard d'Estaing's buttons and car bumper stickers. He is likely to bring a touch of informality to the presidency.

Opinion polls indicated Giscard d'Estaing drew majority support from women and elderly voters, traditionally the more conservative elements of the electorate.

In many ways, he seemed bound to succeed almost from birth. A grandfather was a judge, another was a deputy. His father was a leading official of the French high command in Germany during the occupation after the First World War. Giscard d'Estaing was born in Coblenz.

He went to leading schools—Lycees in Paris and Clermont-Ferrand, the famed Polytechnique Institute and the National School of Administration, training ground for high French officials.

He performed what he describes as minor jobs for the Second World War Resistance, did his military service with the French army in Germany in the closing days of the war and finished as a tank commander.

For six months he taught at the Stanislas College in Montreal to earn money. Then he spent one term at Oxford University studying economics.

Economics he is one of the few Frenchmen who have studied ministerial level to speak excellent English and he has no hesitation in using it.

Schooling ended in 1952 and Giscard d'Estaing was assigned as an inspector of finance, a choice job for graduates of the National School of Administration. The same year he was married to Anne-Aymone de Brantes, member of a wealthy family of steel industrialists.

Within two years he became a close adviser of Finance Minister Edgar Faure. Another two years—at 28—he was elected a deputy, taking over a National Assembly seat vacated in his favor by his maternal grandfather.

By 1959, Giscard d'Estaing was secretary of state, a subcabinet post, in the government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. In 1962, after the departure of Antoine Pinay, Giscard d'Estaing moved up to finance minister, one of the youngest in French history.

His first big setback came in 1965 when de Gaulle diminished him as finance minister. To combat mounting inflation, he had instituted a tough price stabilization program. The economy slowed and unemployment increased. Giscard d'Estaing had to pay the political price for the unpopular result.

For three years he was on the sidelines. But his most critical move came in 1969 when he recommended a "no" vote on the complex referendum on regional reform submitted by de Gaulle. The vote was unfavorable to de Gaulle and he immediately resigned. The Gaullists never forgave Giscard d'Estaing for what they called sabotage of their hero.

After Georges Pompidou became president, he named Giscard d'Estaing to his old place as finance minister.

Recalling the old differences, diehard Gaullists refused to line up behind Giscard d'Estaing at the outset of the presidential campaign. Former premier Couve de Murville-Delmas won endorsement of the Gaullist UDR party.

But when Chaban-Delmas finished a distant third in the first round of voting, Gaullists sprang to the side of Giscard d'Estaing to oppose Francois Mitterrand. It was an uneasy partnership. The Gaullists offered only lukewarm support and Giscard d'Estaing apparently did not press for any warmer relationship since Gaullism as a personality cult force seemed to have been already dealt a death blow.

Davis Out On Hustings For PCs

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Premier Davis has made it evident that he intends to lend his shirt-sleeves as far as possible in this federal election.

In his first speech following the election announcement he was attacking the Trudeau government, and both in and out of the house he has continued to key in on the federal field.

And through these activities he has made it further evident he will be all stress one point: increased federal spending.

The premier is on rather curious ground when he gets on this point.

It is a good point. A forecast increase of 22 per cent in spending by Mr. Turner's budget certainly was alarming and has been widely attacked.

Along with this he case is strong in that though Ontario also has increased its spending since 1971 it has been the lowest in the country except for Newfoundland, which predicts a boost of 21 per cent.

But also along with this he really isn't in a position to shoot too loudly, though on federal spending is up by an alarming degree, the Ontario spending is up by and the province doesn't win any laurels for economy.

In fact the whole government attitude towards spending in Canada is disheartening.

The Financial Times had a survey a short while ago on what it termed the government spending spree.

And this showed that not only was all government spending going up but that it was mounting at a great pace.

The peak is being hit in Alberta, where the forecast is for a gain of 34 per cent.

But other provinces also are topping the federal government's 22 per cent, with 26 per cent in B.C., 25 per cent in Saskatchewan and 29 per cent in P.E.I.

Such spending can properly be classed as irresponsible in these times of high inflation.

Government is not only not giving proper leadership through example, it is feeding a "what the hell" spending impulse by the general public.

It is true that a lot of the revenue from Ontario's increase will be handed over to the municipalities. But they will be spending it, too, and they increase the spending on their own account.

LOOKING BACKWARD

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

May 23, 1944

Belleville residents are again reminded of the outstanding band concert to be staged in Belleville Collegiate auditorium Tuesday evening by the combined bands from the naval training centre at Toronto.

40 YEARS AGO

May 23, 1934

Fighting grey trout, that elusive denizen of Salmon Lake and neighboring waters, had a change of heart over the weekend and succumbed to the lures of a host of anglers, which brought back a total of 27 pounds of delectable fish. The haul included beauties which tipped the scales at three pounds and one-half; four; three and one-half and one pounds respectively.

IMPORTANT NEWS FOR PEOPLE WHO OWN CANADA SAVINGS BONDS

Effective May 1, 1974, the average annual yield to maturity on all unmatured Canada Savings Bonds has been increased to 9%

The higher yield will be obtained by means of cash bonus payments which for income tax purposes will be considered as capital gains.

Who is entitled to receive cash bonus payments?

Every holder of unmatured Canada Savings Bonds is entitled to receive cash bonus payments provided that he holds his Bond up to the date that such payments become due.

When do the cash bonus payments become due?

On all Canada Savings Bonds maturing on or before November 1, 1979, a cash bonus payment becomes due on the date of maturity of the Bond.

On all Canada Savings Bonds maturing after November 1, 1979, holders will be entitled to receive two cash bonus payments. The first will be payable on November 1, 1979. The second cash bonus will be payable on the date of maturity of the Bond.

What is the amount of the cash bonus payments?

The actual dollar amount of each cash bonus payment varies with each Series. However, in every case the dollar amount payable will be sufficient to provide a yield of 9% per annum for the period May 1, 1974, to maturity of the Bond.

Where Bonds mature after November 1, 1979, the first cash bonus payment will provide an average annual yield of 9% from May 1, 1974, to October 31, 1979. The second cash bonus payment will also provide an average annual yield of 9% from November 1, 1979, to the maturity date of the Bond.

How do I receive my cash bonus payments?

To receive your cash bonus payments you simply present your Bonds to any authorized Issuing Agent of Canada Savings Bonds (including any Bank or authorized Trust or Loan Company and Caisse Populaire) on or after the date on which the payment becomes due. Of course, a bondholder will not have to cash his Bond when claiming a cash bonus payment which becomes payable before the Bond matures.

How do I treat the cash bonus payments when completing my Income Tax Return?

The cash bonus payments will be considered as capital gains. When receiving your cash bonus payments a statement will be issued to you indicating the amount of the cash bonus. This will eliminate any confusion which might arise when completing your Income Tax Return.

Can I still cash my Canada Savings Bonds at any time?

Yes. Your Canada Savings Bonds can still be cashed at any time at their full face value plus earned interest. Interest is calculated at the appropriate annual coupon rate for each full month which has elapsed since the date of the last matured coupon. These values are shown on the back of your Bond. It should be remembered, however, that your cash bonus payments are payable only on or after specific dates and you will not be entitled to them unless you hold your Bond to the date that such bonuses become due.

Will the Compound Interest Feature be affected by these changes?

No. The compound interest feature on outstanding issues of Canada Savings Bonds will not be affected by these changes. Bondholders who are taking advantage of the compound interest feature may continue to do so and will continue to be paid compound interest in the amounts specified at the time of issue of each Series. These amounts are shown on your Bond.

Will any of the other features of Canada Savings Bonds be affected by these changes?

No. Your Canada Savings Bonds continue to retain all of the features that they offered at the time you bought them. Canada Savings Bonds currently being bought by instalments under the Payroll Savings Plan and the Official Monthly Savings Plan are entitled to the cash bonuses. Payment schedules connected with such instalment purchases remain unchanged.

Can I still buy Canada Savings Bonds?

Yes. You can still buy the 1973/74 Series of Canada Savings Bonds at prices as specified under the original terms of this issue. Purchasers of this Series will be entitled to cash bonuses which will be payable on November 1, 1979, and at maturity on November 1, 1985.

Hog Producers to Get Guaranteed Return

OTTAWA (CP) — A new national hog stabilization plan will guarantee hog producers a margin of $22.41 a hundredweight of pork between the wholesale cost of feed and hog prices, Agriculture Minister Eugene announced Wednesday.

The plan, which will cover all hogs marketed between April 1, 1974 and March 31, 1975, is aimed at helping hog producers "caught in a squeeze between rising feed costs and falling hog prices," Mr. Whelan said in a news release.

But the plan would not interfere with either feed prices or hog prices.

"The market will be free to follow its normal course, based on supply and demand, but pork producers will be able to plan production with renewed confidence because there will be a guaranteed minimum margin."

The margin guarantee of $22.41 a hundredweight of pork, which works out to a guarantee of about $27 a hog, was based on the five-year average of wholesale feed costs and the national average pork price for the same period ending April 1, 1974.

Hydro Alters Land Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro said Wednesday it has revamped its land purchase policy for land acquired for high-voltage transmission lines.

The announcement follows opposition criticism in the legislature that Hydro negotiated widely-varying prices with farmers affected by the Arnprior dam project in eastern Ontario.

A Hydro spokesman said Wednesday that past policy has been a "mixed bag."

"We would try to negotiate a purchase and if that failed we would go to expropriation."

The new policy offers owners the option of selling the property or granting an easement with compensation based on fixed rates.

"Compensation for perpetual easements is to be based on 75 per cent of market value of vacant land for the basic right-of-way, plus an additional payment for structures."

Woman Bandit

ST. THOMAS (CP) — A woman bandit robbed the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada here Wednesday after giving a teller a note saying she had a bomb.

The teller gave the woman the contents of her till, estimated at between $1,000 and $1,500.

Home Owned

TORONTO (CP) — Barbara O'Handley's hope of claiming "squatter's rights" to a vacant two-storey house she recently occupied in west-end Toronto appears to have faded.

The semi-detached house, empty for six years, has an owner, lawyer G. Clifford Devitt said Wednesday.

He said the owner is Helen Motiram, who lives on the same street as the house Mrs. O'Handley and her seven-year-old daughter occupied.

Guindon May Resign To Enter Federal Field

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Labor Minister Fernand Guindon said Wednesday he is considering leaving his cabinet post to seek the Progressive Conservative nomination for Stormont-Dundas in the July 8 federal election.

The federal seat was held by Lucien Lamoureux, Speaker in the last Parliament who recently announced he would not run again.

Copied TV

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgary boy's hanging death resulted from his attempt to imitate a mock-hanging performed by a rock music star during a television program, a coroner's jury ruled Wednesday.

The jury, investigating the death of 14-year-old David Andrew Coombes, called for "definite and immediate steps to ban these programs of violence" from television.

Girls Killed

COTEAU-DU-LAC, Que. (CP) — Four teen-age girls—two of them from New York and two from Connecticut—were killed Wednesday when their car plunged into a canal after colliding with another car in this community 20 miles southwest of Montreal. The girls, all in their late teens, were apparently touring Quebec, a provincial police spokesman said.

Sugar Cheaper

TORONTO (CP) — Wholesale sugar prices are dropping and officials of two refining firms expect they will go even lower.

Redpath Sugars Ltd. reduced its wholesale price 75 cents a 100 pounds Wednesday, making it $39.40.

Quebec Language Bill Likely Election Issue

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec's French-only language legislation threatened Wednesday to become an issue in the July 8 federal election campaign.

Equalled in criticism since it was tabled Tuesday in the national assembly, the bill provoked reaction during the day from three of the four national party leaders: Only Social Credit Leader Raoul Caouette made no public comment.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called the bill divisive and urged Premier Robert Bourassa to abandon it unless significant changes are made.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who promised Tuesday night to make sure that Quebec "does the right thing," discussed the subject with his cabinet Wednesday and told reporters afterward Ottawa will stand by its freedom-of-choice policy on French and English.

NDP Leader David Lewis said no one should panic over the proposed legislation.

He also said he hoped the legislation would not become an issue in the federal campaign.

"We shouldn't get too excited," he said on an open-line radio show during a 10-hour stop in Vancouver. But the New Democratic Party leader said he would regret greatly if the Quebec government does anything to make the use of English more difficult.

He told listeners he has not seen the proposed legislation but it seems to reflect concerns that French will erode unless it is protected.

"They are an island of five or six million French-speaking Canadians among 220 million English-speaking North Americans, and that worries them..."

The "proposal...if approved, will make French the sole official language in Quebec and require that it be used in business and on all public signs.

Mr. Trudeau said the federal language policy includes freedom of choice for immigrants and that he was pleased Premier Bourassa does not intend to press ahead with his bill until hearing from interested groups.

"Mr. Bourassa has asked for representations so we're making ours early in the game."

Mr. Stanfield, who remained in Ottawa Wednesday, said he sympathizes with the desire in Quebec to "assure and strengthen the future of the French language . . ."

"But, in a number of respects, the language bill [illegible] a bad bill. The arbitrary powers, for example, given to the minister in relation to language instruction are surely quite unacceptable," he said. Unless changed, the legislation would damage the cause of bilingualism.

U.S. Lake Cities Soon To Treat Most Waste

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States will provide "adequate" municipal waste treatment for more than 80 per cent of its population in the Great Lakes basin by late 1976, Canadian environmental officials were told Wednesday.

By the end of 1978, about 7 per cent of the population in the American side of the lakes likely will be served by wastetreatment facilities that measure up to standard, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) estimated.

Agency officials gave these figures at a semi-annual meeting of representatives from the two countries concerned with implementation of the 1972 Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement.

Russell McKinney, economics minister at the Canadian embassy and head of the Canadian delegation, said later the Canadians "were provided with more—and more detailed—information than we have ever had before" about U.S. progress in implementing the Great Lakes agreement.

But he added he "wouldn't want to make a judgment on it till the experts have digested the material."

The Canadian government, he added by Ontario, has expressed serious concern in the past whether delays in funding waste-treatment programs on the U.S. side of the Great Lakes would leave the U.S. behind its commitments to clean up the lakes.

Cooking Couple

Jim and Joan McCulloch demonstrate wok cooking techniques with chicken chop suey which includes bean sprouts they grew themselves. The stir-fry technique is healthful and fast the pair told members of the Belleville Garden Club Tuesday.

The Sprout: Five Days in the Dark

There's a vegetable you can grow in five days, without soil, in the dark.

Joan and Jim McCulloch showed members of Belleville's Garden Club how Tuesday when they discussed sprouting mung beans and wok cooking at the group's monthly meeting.

Displaying the bean sprouts at various stages of growth, Mrs. McCulloch told the group that to sprout beans for chinese dishes you need, only to soak ½ cup of mung beans overnight then place them in a clean new flower pot — cover the water hole with cloth — and rinse them once or twice a day with water. They must be kept in the dark. In five days, they'll be ready for use, she said, and they can be stored in the refrigerator for two days.

Mung beans; a type of soy beans, are available at 63 cents a pound from health food stores.

The pair then demonstrated wok cooking.

"We've both here because one of us just can't manage it alone," Mrs. McCulloch said.

In stir-fry cooking, she explained, things must be done so quickly, they find it takes two.

"Stir frying — in an inexpensive wok — is fast and very healthy because there's little meat, the vegetables are cooked quickly so vitamins are retained."

The McCullochs prepared several batches of their chicken chop suey for sampling.

The recipe:

¼ lb. chicken (raw)
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
salt and pepper
½ cup sliced mushrooms
two tbsp. black bean sauce or soy sauce
¼ tsp. MSG
two tbsp. corn starch in half cup water

Heat two tablespoons of oil over high heat in a wok. Add a little salt. When smoking, add chicken which has been cut in ½ inch pieces and stir ten seconds. Remove chicken and add vegetables in order given, stirring 10 seconds after each addition. Add water and corn starch and roast and cook two to three additional minutes.

Shrimp or beef may also be used.

Study School Food

WINNIPEG (CP) — The founder and director of Counterweight, a weight control organization, is conducting a cross-Canada survey of foods available in school cafeterias. Adelaide Daniels of Toronto said the project arose from the idea that obesity is partially related to poor eatings habits developed during childhood and adolescence. Nutrition may be taught in classrooms, she said, but nutritious foods may not always be available in the cafeteria.

The Experts Say

Shoes Need Special Care

MONTREAL (CP) — With the higher cost of leather, your shoes need all the care they can get to help preserve their good looks and extend their life span, says Del Foxton of Tana Co. (Canada) Ltd.

"In the old days it was spit and polish; today, with many different kinds of leathers and finishes available, each one needs a special kind of care."

Mrs. Foxton, who spends much of her time advising salesmen about shoe care, said in an interview that special "shoe cosmetics" are available and advised customers to inquire about them when buying a new pair of shoes.

"If the man who is selling you the shoes does not know how you should care for them, then whom are you going to ask?" Good shoe care is an extension of good grooming, she said. "You take care to clean your clothes according to the type of fabric they are made of—whether they are machine-washable or need dry-cleaning. The same applies to shoes."

Mrs. Foxton said a lot of glove leather is currently being used for shoes which needs a coat of protection before the shoes are worn.

"If glove leather is not protected before use, one splash from a drop of rain can leave a permanent stain Because that kind of leather is very absorbent."

Dyed shoes, particularly dyed peau-de-soie shoes worn for formal occasions, can have their life span extended if they are treated with a protector before being worn.

Without a protector, a scuff mark can permanently stain the shoes and water can take out the dye.

Suede shoes can also be given a coat of protection but should also be brushed regularly to remove dirt.

"Another problem with shoes is that people's feet perspire during the day," Mrs. Foxton said. "If the shoes are left damp at night they dry up, harden and eventually crack."

Sprays are available which can be used at night to alleviate the problem. The shoes should be sprayed and allowed to dry on shoe trees.

Ann Landers

Reader Says Depressed Just Need Better Food

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick and tired of people who write to Peppy in Pittsburgh yes with epidemics of depression. They describe their feelings of insecurity, low blood sugar, hypos, apprehension and suspicions. Most of them are confused, angry and suicidal.

You encourage them to seek full, professional help. Talk to a crisis clergyman. Get counselling. See a psychiatrist. Why in the world is a person who is suicidal don't you tell them the truth?

The real cause of 95 per cent of the depressed, suicidal, miserable, immotivated people in this world is that their diets are deficient.

Just as a car needs fuel to keep running, the human body needs vitamins, minerals and proteins.

Most doctors don't know anything about nutrition because in medical schools they dwell on sickness instead of health. They teach physicians how to cut people up and fill them full of pills instead of suggesting that they eat nutritious food to combat illness and build energy.

I am a perfect example of a person who has found good

Dear Pep: I agree that good nutrition can make a whale of a difference in how a person feels. The body and the mind are in very close alignment.

Fat, vitamins, protein and minerals can help dispel deep depression, nor can they cheer a psychiatrist. Why in the world is a person who is suicidal.

Medical schools do teach mostly sickness, especially since obesity has been linked with the biggest killer, heart disease. But it's a well-established fact that the person who eats a balanced diet doesn't need store-bought vitamins or any of those other widely touted supplements that make millions for the people who sell them. And, friend, if you get an attack of appendicitis, please call your doctor, not your grocer or your druggist. If peritonitis should set in, you'd be in deep trouble.

Dear Ann Landers: One Who Cares is typical of those guilt-ridden people who must blame others when their pet is killed.

Keeping a pet is certainly an inconvenience, so there are all sorts of excuses as to why their dog or cat was running loose when someone accidentally ran over it. So why do you call a driver "inconsiderate" and "heartless" when he doesn't stop and try to locate the owner of the animal he killed? What causes do you have for the owner of the pet who allowed his dog to be hit by the car? And what about that free-running animal who now lies squashed on the street? Was he happy to be free Was his "freedom" worth the price he paid for it

It is a compassionate person who troubles himself to help someone else's pet when the owner is not around, but the person who doesn't stop and try to locate him should not be blamed. The real issue is that dog and cat owners must accept the responsibility of keeping their pets safe at home or suffer the consequences.—D.M.A. Of Durham, N.C.

Dear D.M.A.: Of course the owner bears the initial responsibility. But two wrongs don't make a right in a civilized world. And unfortunately there are too many symptoms of incivility and downright cruelty wherever one looks these days.

Successful Living

Reader Defends Today's Music

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: A correspondent wrote to you about the lyrics of some of today's songs, obviously being distressed by them. She called them immoral and disgusting.

Now while I agree there is a preponderance of sloppy romantic stuff geared for 14-year-olds, there is still some thoughful and good music being written. It may not be appreciated by everyone, but somebow I see that as a point in its favor!

As I remember the letter, there were lines from songs quoted, one of which was "Give me life, keep me free from birth." Taken out of context I can see how perhaps it could be misinterpreted as a pro-abortion song. Actually, the song has nothing to do with abortion. The title is 'Give Me Love — Give Me Peace On Earth." The artist is George Harrison and it was from the album, "Living In The Material."

George Harrison strikes me as a deeply religious as well as humanistic man. His religon includes a belief in reincarnation, so I suppose the song is referring to a desire for an end to the toll of continous cycles of re-birth as animal or man.

The search for God and for understanding is one that George Harrison has explored in many of his songs.

J.M.

Dear J. M.: I would be the last to term any truly reverent song as "immoral". The correspondent who wrote in will appreciate your explanation.

Perhaps you will grant that when a song like "Dead Skunk In The Middle of the Road" can become a hit, even briefly, some modern music is in need of improvement!

Dear Doris: Thank you for your helpful letter. I clipped your articles out of the paper and have now pasted up four scrapbooks with them.

When I get too bored or lonely, I drag them out.

Rose Grateful: It's good to hear that I help, but aren't you living the shadow of a life if you solace your lonely times with mere words on a page? See if you can't stir yourself and get out. I'm sure that is what my last letter suggested to you, and it still goes.

Dear Doris: I am 11 years old. My trouble is my brother. Sure, almost all brothers and sisters fight, but not like us. If I'm lying on the sofa he'll push me off and he punches. He's older than me so it hurts. My mother suggested ignoring him but it doesn't work. Please help me.

Hopeless.

Dear Hopeless: Better try having another talk with your mother. It is up to her to explain to your brother that it is cruel to be so rough with a younger sister. If talking won't convince him that he should stop hurting you, some form of punishment my be necessary.

There are times when a parent simply must step in, and this is one of them. It is an unequal battle.

(There is helpful Canadian literature which may shed light on your problem. Write to Doris about it, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.)

Food Prices Up 20 Per Cent

TORONTO (CP) The cost of the Ontario Food Council market basket went up by 4.6 per cent this month compared with April.

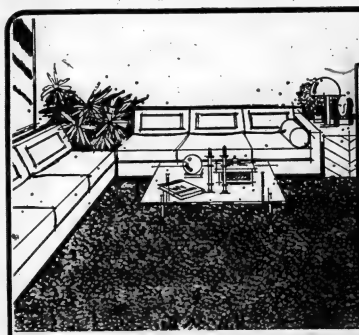
That is a 19.7-per-cent increase over a year ago, statistics released by the council Thursday show.

The cost of the basket this month was $82.13, up from $78.49 in April.

"Imported products such as grapes, grapefruit, oranges, sugar, coffee, chocolate, celery and lettuce are responsible for over one-third of the increase in the basket," the council report said.

The balance of the increase came from small price increments for several items, including 40 cents for the meat component of the basket.

The market basket comprises 67 food items which are typical of consumer-purchasing patterns.



Volume Climbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales volume in the United States for 1973 was more than 12 billion, an increase of 14.6 per cent over the preceding year. The American Bankers Association reported a 11.2-per-cent increase in cash advance volume to a total of more than $1.4 billion.

Changing Work Styles Sound Death Knell for Siesta Time

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Modern pressures and changing work styles are sounding the death knell for Latin America's cherished afternoon siesta.

And the current world oil crisis is hastening its end. .

The after lunch nap lingers on in many parts, especially rural areas, even though at times it is a privilege only for the merefolk.

In the most large cities the siesta has long been a thing of the past and, in fact, in most of Brazil it was never known. Unlike the Spaniards, the Portuguese did not take the habit to their colonies.

The siesta is becoming a luxury even for the prosperous businessman in Spanish-speaking Latin America where executives take time off for "business" lunches while the lower echelons grab a quick snack or a sandwich.

The main reason for the siesta as an institution is that Latin Americans traditionally have a heavy lunch and then need a rest to digest it.

The nap is a ritual in the Mexican provinces—but only for the father of the family.

In Mexico City itself, as in Buenos Aires and other large cities where distances make it impracticable for workers to get home for lunch, the trend is towards shorter lunch breaks and earlier-ending shifts.

The oil crisis is extending this fiercely resisted tendency to other areas.

Lima, the Peruvian capital, was one of the few South American capitals where the siesta was still in force on a honored institution.

But the lunch break was recently banned by decree throughout Peru and offices, shops and factories were ordered to work a straight-through timetable to save fuel.

Honduras were also hit by a no-lunch break decree to save fuel. But in the rest of Central America even the cities grind to a halt for two to three hours in the early afternoon.

So does the central Argentine industrial city of Cordoba despite a no-lunch-break decree.

The decree was issued shortly before a change in the provincial governorship and the new authorities balked at becoming unpopular by enforcing it.

Argentine provincials see no reason to forgo, if not their siesta at least their lunch break, and the farther they are from Buenos Aires the longer the break.

The Chileans prefer a quick lunch and back to work. The siesta, except for the old and the very young, has long disappeared in Chile and, even farm workers only take a short break for lunch.

A two-hour break is customary in La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, and in Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital, although workers find little time for a snooze.

In Montevideo, as in Rio de Janeiro, during the summer months office workers try to fit in a quick visit to the beach during their midday break, even if it means forgoing lunch.

In Colombia, a straight-through timetable is enforced in Bogota and some other cities but the siesta survives in the countryside.

In neighboring Venezuela, workers take a three-hour lunch in Caracas—but not with a siesta in mind.

Because Venezuela, unlike most other Latin American countries, has no fuel problems and almost everybody has a car, office workers have barely one hour left for eating lunch.

The other two hours are taken up driving to and from their homes through traffic-jammed streets.

Paraguay will probably be the siesta's last stronghold in Latin America. Even Asuncion, the capital, seems like a ghost city from midday to three in the afternoon.

Most government offices begin working at 7 a.m., closing for the day at noon.

One businessman said a post office box is essential in Paraguay because mail to a street address is likely to be dumped in the river if a postman has not finished his rounds when his lunch break is due.

Woman Fired As Too Pretty

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — A Moline woman said she was fired from her job at International Harvester because the company felt she was too pretty has been reinstated, a company spokesman said Friday.

Peggy Hughes went back to work early this week, the spokesman said.

The company still refused comment on her dismissal.

"The case has been resolved," the spokesman said.

Miss Hughes, 20, was fired March 15.

She said union officials were told she received "too much male attention." An investigator for the Rock Island human relations commission said "male co-workers found her so attractive they were distracted from their normal duties."

Time Proving Enemy Of Acadian Folklore

HALIFAX (CP) — The collection of authentic Acadian folklore, remnants of a time when a gentle farming people suffered painful eviction, has another enemy—time.

One expert suggests that time will eventually defeat attempts to preserve the vestiges before the job can be finished.

Rev. Anselme-Chiasson, 64, native of Chéticamp, N.S., and now the archivist at the Acadian Study Centre, Universite de Moncton, has been hurrying to help the centre complete its collection of folklore.

"We will not be in time, I'm afraid," he said.

Father Chiasson told a conference that Acadian folklore is different.

There were differences from French-Canadian folklore, marked by subtle variations and a more nostalgic tone, recalling the tragic expulsion in 1755 of Acadians from lands in Nova Scotia the English coveted.

Father Chiasson said the culture has survived so far because Acadians have chosen to live in isolated settlements since their return from exile.

The culture remained intact until the mass media made their incursions.

Now, the hundreds of songs known by heart among earlier Acadians were in danger of disappearing since radio was introduced to the Cheticamp area the centre.

In 1940.

Father Chiasson began a collection of 25 Acadian folksongs for Cheticamp residents around that period. Three subsequent publications made the songs popular and widely distributed.

Later, Father Chiasson spent six years with the Museum of Man in Ottawa collecting Acadian history from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and the Magdalen Islands.

The resulting work has since been used by other scholars in their study of the Acadian people.

The Acadian Study Centre opened its own Acadian folklore division in 1971 and now holds more than 258 tapes totalling 5,148 Acadian songs, legends and traditions.

Father Chiasson still is working on cataloguing 60 other tapes contributed by students at the centre.

Clean-up Clean-ups Common

NEW YORK (AP) — Communities around the United States are taking advantage of an increase in the value of scrap steel to clean up financially while cleaning their streets of a persistent problem—abandoned cars.

"A year ago there were a lot of places where you literally couldn't give a junked car away," said Dr. Hershel Collier, executive director of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel. "But now because of a heavy demand for scrap steel, junked cars are going for $30 to $60 each at the junkyard."

An Associated Press check showed communities are getting much less than that from dealers who haul abandoned autos off the street. But Collier noted a major expense in the junk business is towing costs.

The change in prices means that New York City, for example, is paid $5 to $15 for each car a junk dealer hauls away. Last year the city paid the dealer $10 each to remove the estimated 70,000 autos abandoned in New York.

A few years ago it cost St. Louis $20,000 for the removal of abandoned cars. Last year the city made a $55,000 profit.

The scrap is needed for production of new steel. Steel mills used to meet the demand out of the waste produced at their plants but greater demand for steel has upped demand for high-grade scrap.

In 1971 the steel industry bought scrap at auction for about $24 a ton but in 1972 the figure climbed to between $80 and $90. Recently it went beyond $150, but it has settled at about $120.

Some officials said another advantage of the higher scrap prices is a noticeable decrease in the number of cars abandoned because it has become worthwhile for owners to take them to junkyards. A spokesman for the city of Dallas said most persons now haul away their own cars after only one warning.

The higher prices also have solved a major problem for Owyhee County, Idaho, with its huge expanse of unpopulated desert and mountains. Because of distances it used to cost $120 to remove a car, said Sheriff Tim Nettleton. Now scrap companies are hauling away the hulks on their own.

However, transportation costs from some other far-flung areas to steel mills have left some communities with continued troubles and no profit. Communities in Alaska, for instance, are still clearing up derelict cars under a state-subsidized program.

In Allegheny County, N.Y., the new price structure has been a boon to someone other than government. A recent car cleanup effort netted a group of service clubs $42,500.

Dozens Die

PATNA, India (AP) — A bus full of passengers plunged into the Ganges River Tuesday, drowning dozens of passengers, official reports said here Wednesday. The reports said the bus driver was trying to back the bus on to a ferry when the mishap occurred. Officials said about 50 passengers were on the bus and that only a few managed to swim to shore.

Roblin Resigns

MONTREAL (CP) — Duff Roblin, former Manitoba premier, resigned Wednesday from his post as president and director of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. He plans to seek the Progressive Conservative party nomination in the Ontario riding of Peterborough for the federal election July 8.

Role in Cil Sands May Be Denied Ottawa

EDMONTON (CP) — Don Getty, intergovernmental affairs minister, said Wednesday that rejection by the federal government of Alberta's plans for a petrochemical industry in the province might jeopardize Ottawa's participation in development of the Alberta oil sands.

Mr. Getty made the statement after federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Ottawa would use its export-licensing powers to lever Alberta into supplying feedstock to the proposed Petrosar Ltd. petrochemical plant at Sarnia, Ont.

Mr. Getty said the Alberta government, which is determined to build its own petrochemical industry, was disappointed, but not surprised" by the federal attitude.

The federal government had indicated it was eager to participate in oil sands development through its newly-established Crown corporation, Petrocan.

"Now we are going to consider the warmth of our reception to Petrocan in the Alberta oil sands in light of this rejection of coming to Alberta on a petrochemical basis," said Mr. Getty.

Meanwhile, in the legislature, Premier Peter Lougheed said that he expects candidates across the country in the July 8 federal election will take a stand on the development of the petrochemical industry.

He said discussions will continue with officials of the federal government and Petrosar and he expects to present Alberta's view to federal Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

Haste Makes Waste

NEWLYN, England (AP) — When teacher Bobby Waters decided his car needed a new paint job in 1969, a friend recommended Harold Thomas's garage in Camborne, Cornwall, for "slow but thorough" work. Water is still waiting for his car. Meanwhile, Thomas lends him cars, "calls me Bobby and invites me in for tea," said Waters. "Each time he tells me the car is nearly ready."

Lewis Busy on Radio

VANCOUVER (CP) — Plunging for the third time in as many days into a New Democratic Party-governed province, NDP leader David Lewis campaigned by radio Wednesday for the July 8 federal election.

The 64-year-old socialist leader crammed two open-line and two interview shows into a 10-hour stop in this radio-conscious city, plugging party policies and issues on the fourth of a 10-day cross country tour.

As aides hustled him from one station to another, Mr. Lewis complained good-naturedly about another bloody open-line show."

"What else do people do out here but listen to open-line shows?"

Stanfield's Campaign Will Open in Winnipeg

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Stanfield starts the first official leg of the Conservatives' election campaign today and indications are he will run as hard as he did in the 1972 campaign.

A detailed itinerary of the first leg of what Conservative officials say will be a 35-day campaign for election July 8 shows Mr. Stanfield delivering his first speech tonight in the Winnipeg South constituency of Defence Minister James Richardson.

From there, Mr. Stanfield flies, mainstreets and talks his way through Montreal to New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island before returning to Ottawa for a brief rest.

The Conservatives are the last of the four major parties into the campaign. There have been indications that the party deliberately slowed its start to prevent Mr. Stanfield from "peaking" early.

PM: Decision Made, but Discussions Continue

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has taken a decision on the controversial Dow-Dome petrochemical and pipeline proposals but is continuing discussions with Alberta on the matter, Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday.

He told reporters following a cabinet meeting that "we've decided, but we have no announcement."

Talks would be held with Alberta before any public statement is made on the decision.

The National Energy Board has recommended approval, with some modifications, of applications by Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. and Dome Petroleum Ltd. for approval to build an ethane-ethylene plant and pipeline system.

Dome and a subsidiary have asked the government to approve its plans to build ethane and ethylene pipelines from Alberta to plants in Eastern Canada and the United States. Exhibits of correspondence from federal and Alberta officials were released last week, showing that the province is reassessing its earlier support for the Dow-Dome application.

Plans by Petrosar, a consortium of companies operating in Sarnia, to build an ethylene plant using crude oil as a feedstock are being opposed by Alberta officials, who have told Petrosar officers they should not plan on using Alberta crude oil.

Architecture School Relies on Rebellion

VANCOUVER (CP) — In his 13 years as director of the school of architecture at University of British Columbia, Henry Elder has developed an educational system unique in Canada.

The system relies heavily on students' initiative and even rebellion for its driving impetus.

But he has always been modest about his part in the school's accomplishments.

"The director of the school is only the vassal of change. The first director of the school (Fred Lasserre) produced some very good architects of that period. I took the position that the school had to determine the nature of architecture."

Mr. Elder said social change makes demands on the profession.

"If a profession fails to change at the rate of society, it becomes redundant. It is necessary, then, for the profession of architecture and architecture itself to change. We offered to be leaders in this school and find out what the contemporary problems are," he said.

To produce students qualified to become leaders, Mr. Elder initiated a new prerequisite for entrance to the school—a degree in some other university discipline.

"What matters is what is brought into architecture. It is not a discipline of its own. The diversity of types that come into this school means what comes out of the school is equally diverse. The students have become agile of mind and creative, with the courage to face the future," said Mr. Elder.

The UBC course takes three years following four years of undergraduate study. Most other schools require no previous degree; they immerse high school students directly in five years of architecture.

The first year starts with an excursion which may take students to the Gulf Islands, up a glacier or along the B.C. mainland coast to Ocean Falls.

"At one time architecture was buildings, now it is man's environment, inside and outside buildings. It is concerned with putting human beings back into buildings," he said.

"We have to plan cities around people, not motor cars. Cities are behaving like human beings; they are becoming obese, the heart of them is dying and they are collapsing. Architecture has to put back exercise and human response.

"The architect has to understand the character of an area and begin to design around it.

"Buildings which possess sentimental value and those which are architecturally beautiful are important . . . this is 'Vancouver: this is its history and background."

CPR Line Relocation Discussed

The Subordinate Planning Advisory Committee of city council has recommended that a study be made to consider the feasibility of relocating the CPR tracks away from the city's southern sector.

The recommendation, passed at Wednesday's meeting of SPAC will now go to city council.

Any study done would be under the provisions of Bill C-27 recently before the House of Commons which would provide financial assistance for rerouting of railway lines from urban areas.

Under the bill, the senior government may pay 50 per cent of the cost or a study and 50 per cent toward the cost of relocation.

Quinte Planner Bert Kenny attended last night's meeting of SPAC and said in his opinion relocation of the CPR tracks should be considered.

Relocation of the CPR tracks from the north end has been an off-and-on discussion at city hall for many years.

One of the principal proponents of the idea has been Alderman Arthur Keegan who maintains that track removal would provide an economic shot in the arm for the city's Foster Ward district.

At Tuesday's city traffic Keegan said that Trenton, as well as Belleville, has a problem with the CPR tracks.

He noted that in Belleville city the CPR would be affected by any track relocation. Spur lines serving area industry would remain.

The matter of a possible study to investigate track removal was referred to city council for determination of possible costs to the city.

Canada Cord Presentation

Karen Twiddy, a 15-year-old member of the First Avondale Girl Guide Company, Belleville, was presented with the highest award available in the Girl Guide program, the Canada Cord, during a special Brownie-Guide fly-up ceremony at Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School last night. Karen, centre, received her award from Girl Guide Commissioner Yvonne Gallivan, centre left, while her mother Margaret Twiddy, centre right, proudly looks on. The First Avondale Company's Captain, Ann Rose, was joined in admiring Karen's award by a young Brownie, Susan Hoyle, 8, and by another Girl Guide, Karen Jones, 13.

Suspect Arrested

Belleville police ended a three-day crime spree of a youth who knocked down a woman and stole her purse Monday night when they arrested an RR 1 Consecon man this morning and charged him with robbery with violence.

Bernard Peter Lajeunesse, 20, has been charged in connection with the Monday night incident in which Mrs. Lucia Vandervelder, of Catharine Street, Belleville, was knocked to the ground as she walked home from a store.

On Monday police said that Mrs. Vandervelder had been assaulted by a youth, who was described as being five feet eight inches tall with shoulder length brown hair and wearing a nylon stocking mask.

The assailant knocked the woman to the ground and stole her purse which contained $20 in cash along with some personal papers.

Detectives Sam Morgan and John Ashley worked on the case for three days and found the woman's purse, minus the money, on the side road near the Bay of Quinte, near Rossmore on Tuesday.

At 2.15 this morning the two detectives and constables George Archer and Hugh Brennan arrested Ladoucer in his car at the corner of Lewis and Yeomans Streets.

Ladouceur is being held in custody and will appear in provincial court on Monday.

Thurlow Taxes Rising

Taxpayers in Thurlow will be hit hard this year by a sharp increase in over all mill rates as council struck a $1,105,381 budget for 1974 Wednesday.

On the average, public school supporters face an over-all 37.03 mill increase while separate school supporters must pay out an extra 4.28 mills.

Taking up the lion's share of the increase are elementary school tax levies — 7.31 mills against commercial and 6.5 mills against farm and residential properties. This marks a rise from 3.69 and 3.41 mills in 1973 respectively.

County school board bites are followed closely by an increase in township levies. Up from 10.99 mills, farm and home owners will bear a 3.19 mill increase —while commercial property owners will be facing a lesser 4.56 mill hike.

Marginal increase of less than 1.5 mills over-all elementary separate and secondary school tax levies are levied on the rate increase picture.

The Hastings County requisition is up this year, treasurer Clare Horton told council Wednesday. But application of provincial grants has cut cash flow from township to county coffers from over $200,000 to $166,619.

The procedure permitted a 1.14 mill decrease in the 1973 county levy of 34.41 mills.

During the council meeting, Mr. Horton said that the budget this year can be considered "tight." The township is standing pat. Major expenditures have not been added to the municipality's budget.

This year's budget is only $16,410 higher than that $1,088,971 budget in 1973. However, over-all mill rates set to cover township spending are up for the first time in years. The telegraph received an average six-mill reduction.

The substantial increase in Thurlow's levy is blamed on the loss of Quinte Centre Lodge Ltd. tax dollars this year. In 1973, the township received $2.6 per cent of the company's $145,854 total tax bill — or approximate 17 per cent of Thurlow's entire 1973 tax take.

The loss of the company's tax dollars forced an increase in the township levy. The plant's operations were moved east to Bath. Remaining buildings are now being demolished.

In breaking down the township major expenses, nearly 46.6 per cent — the major portion — is applied to education costs. Hastings County's share of Thurlow tax dollars amounts to $166,646. Close to $100,000 is slated for public works that include improvement of roads, sidewalks and traffic control. Provincial road collection take a $36,546 chunk out of Thurlow's coffers while general office administrative costs take a $40,445 bite.

Break-in Foiled

The night watchman at the H. J. McFarland Construction Co. Ltd.'s offices on Highway 14, just north of Highway 401, spoiled a break-in attempt early this morning.

Officers at the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police report that they received a call at 2.15 a.m. today informing them that thieves had been found trying to slip a chain from a sliding door on the east side of the office-warehouse complex.

Apparently the thieves were frightened away by the company's night watchman, police said.

Mood to Be Nude Nets Student $225

What started out to be a rather dry presentation of a Mediterranean cruise turned into a rather wet one.

This morning at Centennial Secondary School auditorium over 600 students were assembled to watch a presentation of slides based on this year's Mediterranean cruise by some students.

Shortly after the presentation began, a male grade 12 student streaked his way across the stage and broke the entire assembly into tears of laughter.

A spokesman from Centennial related that the streaker picked up almost $225 for being in the mood to run in the nude.

Festival of Values Seminar

More than 100 businessmen and women from the Belleville area attended a dinner party and sales seminar at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel last night as part of The Intelligencer's Festival of Values sales promotion campaign. The dinner guests listened attentively to Mack Dorf, an internationally known sales analyst, during an after-dinner discussion period.

Key Punch Operators Stage Protest at UIC

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Sixty-five key punch operators at the regional office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission in Belleville failed to report for work Wednesday to protest the current state of contract negotiations.

All supporting data processing department of UIC called in sick at the beginning of "each of the three daily" shifts.

After negotiations lasting since September 1972, the members of the Economic Security Employees' National Association, an affiliate of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, were offered a 7 per cent increase, for the first 14 months of their upcoming contract and 6 per cent for the next 14 months. The $500 cost of living bonus announced by treasury board chairman C. M. Drury, was not written into the collective agreement.

Key punch operators' salaries vary from $4,200 to $6,000 annually, but the average wage of the Belleville worker is $5,000 said A. I. Stewart, third vice-president of the PSAC.

The treasury board says its offer is final, said Mr. Stewart from Ottawa. However, since last week the board has indicated its willingness to include the $500 in the agreement.

The $500 cost of living bonus was awarded to all civil servants except those whose contracts are under negotiation, and those who have settled since April 1.

All employees were back on the job today.

"I support the employees," said Mr. Stewart. "The treasury board's attitude was taken without realizing the frustration of employees, when an increase of at least 10 per cent is warranted. We would not put a contract like that (7 and 6 per cent), out to ratification. It would make a mockery of our ratification system."

The contract was in the process of going to compulsory arbitration Wednesday.

There are about 1,800 key punch operators across Canada in the ESENA affiliate.

The impetus for the data processing employees said their withdrawal from work today was calculated to prove that their services are essential. One estimated that cheques ready for the mail on Wednesday would take all day to process, an operation the key punch operators could be completed in two hours.

"The public must understand the basic rate of the employees' salaries," said Mr. Stewart, "A 10 per cent increase in a $5,000 wage is not very much."

Letter Carriers Will Meet Here

Ontario letter carriers will meet in Belleville this weekend "gathering fuel" for posial negotiators next fall.

About 65 delegates — representing 2,500 letter carriers — will attend the two-day sessions here to contribute local concerns to the national negotiation platform. These negotiations between the postal unions and the government will begin Sept. 1, says Jim Campbell, president of Belleville's letter carriers.

Mr. Campbell described the meeting as a "preventive maintenance" , to get our demands ready for the negotiating committee.

Delegates will represent Canada's District Five, stretching from Cornwall to Oshawa on the lakeshore, north to Sudbury and east to Malvern. There are nine districts across the country.

Contract negotiations begin two months earlier this year, "to provide more time for talks before possible disruptions in mail service," said Mr. Campbell. The last negotiations required 13 months before they were concluded.

Mr. Campbell said the results of the meeting here are strictly confidential and will be sent immediately to Ottawa union headquarters to be compiled with the results of the remaining eight districts.

Professor Desmond Morton, faculty member of the University of Toronto and past provincial secretary of the New Democratic Party, will be the keynote speaker for the Saturday night banquet being held in the Four Seasons Hotel.

Mortgages Tighter

Quinte area money lenders have tightened their purse strings another notch this month with mortgage interest rates climbing and availability of funds diminishing.

According to a survey taken by realtors A. E. LePage Ltd., 10¼ per cent is the maximum mortgage money available, representing virtually a full per cent increase from one month ago.

National Housing Authority housing ranges 10¾ to 11% and funds are available.

All other mortgage classifications show similar or higher interest rates ranging at 12 per cent for resale homes, apartments, industrial and commercial.

With the exception of the NHA mortgages, availability of funds for other categories shows nil to very limited for new homes and townhouses, nil to fair for pre-sold and resale homes, nil to limited for conventional apartments and town houses nil to limited for builders' loans, and nil to poor for industrial and commercial.

UCS Administrator Now on the Job

Belleville is new to him.

Ralph Mullin of Community Services and his job as its newly-hired administrator-fund raiser is new to him.

With only three days on the job under his belt, Gordon Mullin hasn't yet had the opportunity to learn the ropes. What he is doing at present

"I'm getting used to the climate here, both inside and outside the agency," said Mr. Mullin in an interview Wednesday. During the same evening, he got a better look at part of that climate as the United Way co-ordinating agency held a reception for Mr. Mullin at the Belleville YMCA.

Ways to correct problems the United Community Services has uncovered in raising money for its annual October United Way campaign he has not yet considered: "I don't consider that at this point because I don't see the problems yet."

Mr. Mullin assumed his duties as UCS administrator-fund raiser Tuesday this week after completing work with the Federated Appeals of Greater Montreal fund drive earlier this month.

Prior to accepting an administrative position with Federated Appeals in 1968, he worked with United Red Feather Services for nine years. From 1952 to 1959, he held posts of registrar with the Montreal Boys Association and assistant director of the Society for Protection of Women and Children.

How does Mr. Mullin see his present $16,500 a-year job?

"It's not only one of formulating plans— saying, you go out and you go out — but one of action," he said. "This position is one in which the opportunity exists to go out and speak to groups."

Speaking to Belleville's numerous organizations should help in improving UCS' public relations as well as distribute information as to what the agency accomplishes in the community, he felt.

Education, not only of the community but of volunteer United Way canvassers figures largely in his conception of his new job.

"I don't know what the training program has been for canvassers," Mr. Mullin said. "But you have to have the tools to do the job— you can't sell the product unless you know the product."

Mr. Mullin said he recognizes his lack of knowledge in accounting for the drop in United Way revenues in the past three year, but feels it can be combated by improved recruitment and training techniques.

One aspect of the UCS is as a fund raising agency. I think that, also, there is a need for social planning in the community. Both these things should be done in co-operation with other agencies and institutions."

Gordon Mullin, getting to know Belleville.

Former Calvary Pastor Killed

Funeral service will be held in Toronto Saturday for Rev. Laurie H. Price, of Etobicoke former minister of Calvary Temple in Belleville who was fatally injured in a two-car head-on crash on the Queen Elizabeth Way near Kipling Ave.

The accident occurred about 2 p.m. Thursday when Mr. Price's car veered into the path of an oncoming vehicle. His car was his only vehicle and he died four hours later in hospital.

Mr. Price, the associate minister at Kingsgate Temple, Dundas St. East, Toronto, was returning from a church board meeting with another minister when the accident occurred.

A native of Campbellton, N.B. Mr. Price was ordained in 1947 and held pastorates in Verona, Belleville and Toronto.

With Rev. Hope Smith he was the co-founder of Calvary Temple in Belleville where he served for many years. He leaves his wife, the former Hannah Srong, two daughters and a son.

Bayshore Study Considered

Moira River Conservation Authority resource manager Bryan Boyce has requested Sidney council to decide whether the township wants inclusion in a proposed study of Quinte shorelines.

A council decision is expected within four weeks.

Primary purpose of the study, said Mr. Boyce, is the eventual formation of a plan of attack directed at preserving bayshore access by the public in future.

The study to be done by a consultant, would identify hazard lands, waterfront control areas and possible recreational areas.

Roughly bounded by Bayside, Highway 401 and the Tyendinaga township western boundary, the study would be staged over a several-year period.

Bridge Study

Traffic was held up at the Bay Bridge for close to half-an-hour this morning when an unknown mechanical failure caused the swing bridge to stay partly open.

Police said traffic on the Prince Edward County side and the Belleville side began moving again around 11.30 a.m.

Cotton Candy

A circus isn't just something you experience with your eyes and ears. Sure, the sight of elephants, horses and clowns and the sound of roaring lions and lively music are an important part of any circus. But just as important is the taste of a circus. The popcorn, the cold drinks and of course the cotton candy as these youngsters discovered yesterday during a performance of the circus put on by the Jaycees.

Circus Attracts 4,400

The circus came to town yesterday. It came complete with trailers with far-away license plates carrying lions, tigers, elephants and funny clown costumes.

And when they had travelled on, a total of about 4,400 people, most of them children, were left entertained, amused and happier.

The circus was the Garden Brothers Circus and it was brought to town by the Belleville Jaycees who organized the three performances.

The matinee performance at 1 was for school children while the second and third performances were for the general public.

And a full three-ring circus it was. There were pretty girls in sparkling costumes balancing on their partners' shoulders. There were white horses who went precisely through their paces and there were the clowns.

The children watched intensely and laughed as the clowns sprayed each other with water or threw a well-aimed cream pie in the face of a partner.

It had to be the clowns, the elephants and the horses that brought out the best response from the young audience.

Two young visitors to the afternoon performance of the circus had a double treat. Twins Roxin and Stephen Mulligan celebrated their seventh birthday by having their party take in the circus along with the regular birthday celebrations.

Roxin said she liked the horses best of all at the circus but her brother Stephen, said he thought the clown with the small car that wouldn't start was the best thing he saw.

Brewer Fans Unload

Beer Shower for Horton

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fans at Milwaukee's County Stadium gave outfielder Willie Horton of Detroit Tigers an early shower Wednesday night.

They drenched him with beer cans when he made catches against the left-field wall in the ninth inning after hitting a two-run homer that powered the Tigers to a 6-4 win over the Brewers in an American League baseball game.

In Wednesday's other American League games, Baltimore came off rookie Bill Travers and landed in the left-field bleachers where, he said, the fans had cursed him a night earlier.

"I'm used to people getting on me," Horton said. "In fact, I enjoy it. It's part of the game. I don't even mind profanity, but not when there are kids around.

"Yesterday when they were cussing me out I called time and had an usher go up there and make them stop using that language in front of kids."

Twice in Wednesday's ninth inning Horton backed to the wall to grab long drives.

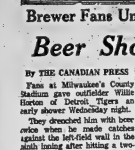
"Tonight I got something—it smelled like beer—down my face and the back of my head," Horton said. "You can hurt a person's eye that way. It burned my eye."

Bob Coleolo's two-run homer in the ninth narrowed Detroit's lead to 5-4, but Mickey Lolich held on to win his third in a row and end a four-game Tiger losing streak.

Paul Blair's run-scoring single for Baltimore followed Boog Powell's double and an intentional walk to Brooks Robinson in the 12th inning. Ross Grimsly blanked Cleveland on eight hits.

Cecil Cooper and Bernie Carbo drove in fifth-inning runs as the Red Sox posted their eighth victory in a row over the Yankees at Fenway Park. Boston has beaten New York in 17 of 18 games since August 1972 at Fenway.

Reggie Jackson drove in five runs against the Twins with his 13th homer, a double and a single and Joe Rudi socked a three-run homer, his 11th of the year, in the ninth inning for the As.



Mickey Rivers escaped a run-down between third and home to start a three-run first inning for the Angels when the umpires ruled Kansas City shorts top Fred Patek missed Rivers with his tag.

Frank Robinson and Joe Lahoud hit homers for California.

Jeff Burroughs, who leads the major leagues with 45 runs batted in and homered in the first game, hit a two-run triple in the nightcap and Ferguson Jenkins struck out 10 as the Rangers beat the White Sox.

Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston singled in the first run in a tie-breaking four-run seventh inning as Wilbur Wood won his fifth in a row for the White Sox in the opener.

The Tigers play in Milwaukee again this afternoon. Tonight's schedule has the Angels at Kansas City, the Rangers at Chicago and the Indians at Baltimore.

WILLIE HORTON

MICKEY LOLICH

Orioles edged Cleveland Indians 1-0 in 12 innings, Boston Red Sox dumped New York Yankees 6-3, Oakland As downed Minnesota Twins 7-4, California Angels beat Kansas City Royals 5-4 and Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with Texas Rangers, winning the opener 6-2 and losing the second game 8-2.

Horton's seventh-inning tie-breaking two-run triple and the ninth inning for the As.

Expos, Bucs Rained Out

May's Bat Powers Astros

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Catcher Milt May of Houston Astros may have a negative altitude about the Astrodome but he is certainly getting positive results there.

May beat San Diego Padres Tuesday night with his first homer of the season in a game that ended the Astros' 10-game losing streak.

Wednesday night he beat the Padres again, hitting a grand slam homer with two out in the ninth inning to break a 1-1 tie to give the Astros a 5-1 win in a National League baseball game.

"I have a negative attitude in this ball park," said May, obtained in an off-season trade with Pittsburgh Pirates for pitcher Jerry Reuss.

"The Astrodome is such a large ball park. I never know whether or not it (the ball) is going to go out.

"I'm not a home run hitter. Like tonight, I was just trying to hit the ball up the middle.

"They were playing me to pull the ball and there was a big gap up the middle. All I was trying to do was get the runner in from third and win the ball game."

LOCKED IN DUEL

Claude Osteen, 5-4, of the Astros and Randy Jones, 7-1, were locked in a pitchers' duel going into the ninth.

Bob Watson hit a leadoff single and, after Bob Gallagher came in to run for Watson, Jones was lifted in favor of Vicente Romo.

Lee May grounded to Romo, who fired wildly to second, putting runners on first and third.

Cliff Johnson was walked intentionally, filling the bases. Romo retired Doug Rader and Tommy Helms on strikes, but he couldn't get past Milt May.

In Wednesday's other National League games, Atlanta Braves downed San Francisco Giants 6-2, Chicago Cubs defeated New York Mets 8-5, Los Angeles Dodgers trounced Cincinnati Reds 6, Philadelphia Phillies beat St. Louis Cardinals 7-1 and a game at Montreal between the Expos and Pirates was rained out.

MILT MAY

Hank Aaron broke a 1-1 tie with a run-scoring double that started a four-run sixth inning for the Braves. Johnny Oates hit a two-run single in the inning.

The Giants gave Aaron special police protection after he was hit on the head by an orange thrown in to the Atlanta dugout Tuesday night.

Jerry Morales, who drove in three runs earlier in the game with a homer and a two-run single, hit a three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning to give the Cubs their win against the Mets.

Steve Garvey drove in four runs with a double and a single for the Dodgers and Al Downing and Mike Marshall combined to stake Pat Rieh, who fell nine games behind Los Angeles in the West Division race.

In the Dodgers' three-game series sweep, Marshall was credited with two saves and a victory.

Del Unser backed Ron Schueler's two-hit pitching by driving in three runs with a homer and a single for the Phillies against the Cardinals.

The Giants' Mike Caldwell goes after his eighth win when the Dodgers invade San Francisco tonight.

The Cubs are at New York for a 4-day game. Other night games see the Phillies at Montreal and the Reds at San Diego.

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton defeated London 5-1 in an Ontario Football League game Wednesday.

Winning pitcher Wally Dick, who struck out 15 batters and allowed four hits, was also one of the hitting stars of the game with two hits and three runs driven in.

Losing pitcher Joe Adams allowed five hits but only one earned run. London made five errors during the game.

16 Records Broken At Quinte Track Meet

By ALAN TESWORTH

NAPANEE — A total of 16 Bay of Quinte records were set in meet here on Wednesday, nine in the boys' section and seven in the girls'.

The only banami record set was in a new event, the 100 metre hurdles, where Shawn Doyle of Centre Hastings was clocked in 17.2 seconds for the distance.

In the Midget division, the 100 hurdles went to Ken Tanner of Trenton with a 15.5 time. Also in Midget, John Stacey, a student at Trenton as well, broke the existing mark in the 1500 metres with a time of 4:39.4.

Steve Gummo of Trenton set a new mark in the 300 metres with a time of 45.2 seconds.

Davey Gutosky of Moira Secondary School high jumped a personal best and a new record of 6'4" in the junior class. He also broke his own COSSA record of 6'2½" with the jump.

In the senior class, four marks were broken. Nick Alexander of Trenton set a mark of 15.4 in the 110 metre hurdles, with Andy Hetzberger of Albert College running the 1500 metres in 4:12.2.

Barry Ray of Quinte Secondary, took the steeplechase in a new record time of 4:42.4, while the Trenton senior relay team took only 3:39.5 to take the 4 by 400 metre relay.

In the girls' section, the midgets took four of the seven records set.

Hilary Wright of Trenton took the 80 metre hurdles with a clocking of 13.9 seconds, while Mary Cutler of Napanee ran the 200 in 27.3 seconds.

Cathy Bonvie of Napanee won the 800 metres in 2:26.4, while Lorie MacDonald of Centennial set a mark of 25.34 metres in the javelin.

The only junior record to fall was in the 80 metre hurdles, where Mary LeBarre of BCI ran a 12.7 seconds.

Judi Meeks of Centennial checked in with a 5:24.1 in the 1500 metres, while Marsha McAdams of Trenton threw the javelin for a new record 30.27 metres.

In individual performances, Kathy Bonvie was top girl in the midget division, based on her performance in the 800 metres.

Top junior girl was Becky Graham, BCI with a 5' high-jump, while Karen Hodgson of Bayside Secondary was top senior with a 13.5 performance in the 80 metre hurdles.

In the boys' section, Shawn Doyle of Centre Hastings was first all-around, based on his 18.7 in the 100 metre hurdles.

In the midget division, a discus toss of 144'2" was good enough to get Allan Thompson of Napanee top spot in individual awards.

Gutosky's record high jump in the junior section of 6'4" earned him top honors in that division, while Alexander's 15.4 in the 110 metre hurdles gained him top spot.

The top four finishers in each event earned their way to the Central Ontario meet, to be held in Napanee, Tuesday.

One of the 16 records broken at the Bay of Quinte track and field meet yesterday was in the senior Girls' javelin. Marsha McAdams of Trenton was the author of the record, a toss of 30.37 metres.

Records were the order of the day at the Bay of Quinte track and field meet held at Napanee yesterday, with this jump by Moira Secondary School's Davey Gutosky no exception. The lanky Gutosky jumped to a personal best of 6'4" to set a new record in the junior division, one of 16 records set at the meet.

Branch 99 Bantams Battle Back for Tie

TRENTON — Belleville Branch 99 spotted Trenton State Farm an early 3-0 lead but battled back to earn a tie and come very close to pulling out a win in Eastern Ontario Baseball Association bantam play at Centennial Park here Wednesday.

Trenton scored twice in the first inning and added another in the second but that's all Belleville left-hander Gary Stapley surrendered as he went the distance, looking more impressive as the game progressed.

Branch 99 got back in the ball game in the fifth inning, counting twice on Trenton miscues and Mike Burke's smash off the first baseman's shins.

Ken Revoy supplied the equalizer, belting a solo home run to deep left-centre field in the ninth inning.

In the top of the seventh, Stapley was inches away from giving his team the go-ahead run. He wasn't out by much on an attempted steal of home.

The State Farm squad went down in order in the bottom of the seventh and final inning. With darkness closing in, no attempt was made to play extra innings. It is expected the game may be replayed at a later date.

Chris Walsh allowed four scoreless innings for the Trenton team with Darcy Wilson taking over for the last three frames.

Trenton got hit the visitors 7-3 but after the first two innings, Stapley was in command. He gave up a leadoff triple to Bruce Patterson in the bottom of the fifth but came through in the clutch to get the next three men and leave the runner stranded.

Bill Healy had three doubles to pace the 10-hit UIC attack, with Ron Embury bagging one. Joe Clark had two singles, with Clint Halliday Peter Lloyd, Al Walker, and Dale Ducarme each stroking one base hit.

Jack MacDonald had a double and Lou Rivers and Larry Bilham two singles each to lead Brooke Bond, with Ron Straiton, Don Goodfellow and St. Jules each hitting safeties.

In the other game played last night, Stewart Warner fell to Canadian Tire 9-5 at Sir MacKenzie Bowl.

Home runs by Steve Beare and Grant Collet led the way for the Warnermen, with Ken Whitney tripling. Wally Dainard and Dave McKay each had three singles, with Jim Henn, Carl Keens, and Paul Genereaux collecting two each. Rod Bennett rounded out the 16-hit attack with a single.

Andy Prudden had the only extra base hit for Canadian Tire, a triple, while John French stroked three base hits.

French also picked up the win for the Firemen, allowing 18 hits but only six runs. He walked two and struck out three. Fred Davis started for Stewart-Warner, going three innings, giving up four runs on five hits. He walked two and struck out a pair.

Dave Marvin came on for two and one-third innings, with Canadian Tire collecting five runs off three hits. He issued four free passes while whiffing two.

Rod Bennett finished the game, giving up but one hit.

McTaggart 2-hits Cannifton Squad

The South Hastings Baseball League got into full swing Wednesday night with the end results almost what was expected.

Melrose defeated Cannifton 1-0 in the seventh inning. Shannonville upset Latta 3-2 and Read trounced Foxboro 11-serve 13-3.

In Cannifton it went right to the wire the top half of the seventh-before Bruce Pascoe crossed home plate to give Melrose the victory. Pascoe led the way at the plate for the winners collecting two of his team's four hits with a double and a single. Scott Melaren and Ron McTaggart added a single apiece.

McTaggart took the win, pitching the full seven innings allowing just two hits while striking out seven and issuing a pair of free passes.

Bob Robb took the loss for Cannifton. Robb came into the game in the seventh, relieving Garnie Adams, who to that point had pitched shutout ball. Robb fanned three and walked none while Adams lowered six and allowed four free bases.

Ken Abrams and Bob Nelson hit singles for the loser.

Tim Reid was the big man for Shannonville as he scored one run and collected two RBI to lead his team to a 3-2 win over Latta. Reid had a pair of singles for the winners while teammates Wayne Sager and Blain Lott added one each.

For Latta, Kirk Short singled twice. Wayne Harrison and Dale Bamber cranked a triple.

Reg Johnston was the loser and Bob Reid the winner.

Peter Enright banged out a triple, two doubles and a single to lead the 14-hit Read barrage in their 13-3 drubbing of the Reserve. Carm Milligan was next with a double and two singles. Larry Cutler and Pat O'Connor hit a pair of singles and Peter Walsh, Gerard Farrell and Pat McKinney each had one single.

Dave Cooper got the win pitching the full seven innings allowing just two hits while striking out seven and issuing a pair of free passes.

Cooper got a strong pitching performance from Garry Eardley and Wayne Clarke Wednesday, on the way to a 9-1 Prince Edward North Shore Softball League win over O'Brien's Tree Service.

Eardley worked four innings, allowing one run off just one hit. He fanned one and walked four. Clarke took the rubber for three innings of no-hit ball. He struck out two and walked one.

Pete Scott took the loss, going the distance while scattering 11 hits. He struck out two and walked as many.

Leading the Consecon hitters were Art Keller, Larry Herrington, Jack Boyal and Stan Clarke with two safeties each. Wayne Clarke, Bob McLeod and Lionel Adair had the others. Grant Mumby was the only O'Brien's player to solve the slants of the Consecon pitching duo.

In other league action Wednesday, Dwayne Dextator drove in the winning run in the top of the ninth inning to push Bayview Orchards past Reserve 13-12.

Winning pitcher Don Bonter was touched for 12 hits over the nine innings. He fanned nine and walked nine.

The Pat Marsden, Jr. and Sr., shared the Reserve pitching chores. Pat Sr., toiled eight innings. They allowed 16 hits, struck out seven and walked six.

Doug Mason helped himself to three hits for the winners with two each for Mitchell Dextrator, Dale Dempsey and Garry Mason.

Tops for Reserve was Carson Selman with three safeties. Gary Thompson and Herb Latchford each had a pair.

NHL Will Hold 'Closed' Draft

By Telephone

NEW YORK (CP) — If President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League has his way, the only outsider who will know what's going on at the amateur draft next week will be a wiretapper.

Campbell disclosed Wednesday night that the NHL for the first time will conduct its amateur draft by telephone starting May 28 and will not make public the order of the selection of junior players.

Individual clubs, however, can if they wish release the names of only the players they have drafted.

Campbell called it a "closed" draft and said he would be on the end of the telephone line in Montreal supervising the entire operation.

"There will be a "completely closed line in which no one will be on the line except myself as the conductor of the draft and the person or persons designated by the club."

The rival World Hockey Association will hold its junior draft in Toronto May 31. The NHL decision to remove publicity from its own junior draft is in line with demands from some NHL clubs that want to protect their picks from possible tampering by the WHA.

The NHL's board of governors and general managers went through a busy all-day session here Wednesday.

Campbell also disclosed:

—The annual all-star and awards dinner will be switched to June 11 in Montreal instead of January, the usual mid-season break in the schedule.

This season's all-stars and winners of the trophy awards will be honored soon after they are selected. "We don't want to end up with a June designation and a January recognition. It's stupid. We want to find and these awards right then."

Scoreless Tie in BQSA

It was a strictly feast or famine night in Bay of Quinte Soccer Association action Wednesday.

Play featured a scoreless draw; a 5-1 decision and a 2-1 squeaker.

At the Ontario School for the Deaf pitch, Belleville Parsons' Rick Hurst and Trenton Whitey Insurance's Terry Hore hooked up in an exciting goalless duel. And neither gave in. Final score was 0-0.

Playing at East Northumberland Secondary School, Brighton, Cobourg Tony's turned it on in the second half to record a 5-1 win over Brighton.

And at Bain Memorial Park in Trenton, Cooney's Haulage of Bayside shaded Trenton Fancies 2-1.

It was a night for mutual admiration societies in Belleville. Coaches Dudley Hillier, Parsons, and Ray Hore, Whitley's took turns praising the other's team.

Both sides showed strong defensive units as Hore and Hurst recorded shutouts. It was the second of the young season for each goalie.

Parsons' defenders Brian Preston, Peter Koutsobis and Phil McSherry backed Hurst's alert play with strong efforts.

Whitley's standouts on defence were young Dennis Woodcock, a graduate of the Trenton Minor Soccer Association program, Harry Lamers and Robert Arsenault.

Trenton had the best chance to score in the first half when Len Tait sent the ball to Ron Cannons off a throw-in. Cannons relayed to forward Jim McDonald but he couldn't crack the Belleville defence.

Tommy Britton, a high school student had Parsons' big chance in the second half. Left unguarded in front of the Trenton net, Britton forced Hore to a sprawling save.

In the game at Brighton, the enthusiasm and young legs of the home team kept it in the contest for the first half. It was 1-0 Cobourg at the interval, with the visitors' Ron Fischer the only shooter to get the ball past a capable Carman Herrington in the Brighton goal.

Tony's experience began to tell in the second half and the team held a 4-1 edge in scoring.

Alex Exsert, John Howard, John VanBoxlen and Ben Veenhof each added a goal for Cobourg.

Brighton's Jerry Wallers put his team on the scoresheet, finding the mark after picking up the ball from an indirect free kick taken by teammate Jack Thompson.

Too Much Attention Given Brawls-Juckes

WINNIPEG (CP) — Secretary-manager Gordon Juckes of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) levelled a strong blast Wednesday against television networks that overemphasize violence in hockey.

Speaking after a report on violence was presented to the 68th annual CAHA convention, Juckes said the federal government has the power and the obligation to prevent television crews from paying more attention to fights than goals in hockey games.

"I know the government can force television not to pay so much attention to brawls," he said. "The government can stop objectionable commercials and can rule that certain movies and other programs can't be shown while children are likely to be watching.

"The television networks exploit the violent aspects of hockey. It has to be stopped. The government can stop it."

Juckes said violence in professional rankes has increased because intimidation is a recognized tactic.

"Intimidation is one more weapon in a coach's bag of tricks—and television panders to it by making sure everybody sees a brawl, three or four times, complete with stop - action and an unofficial judgment about who won what round of what fight."

He said he expects that Marc Lalonde, federal health and welfare minister, will be informed that the CAHA believes too much emphasis on the violence of professional hockey contributes to increased violence among younger players.

In other developments at the convention expected to end today, steps were taken to strengthen minor and senior involvement.

A committee headed by Lem Poore of Fredericton, N.B., was to ask a plenary session today to approve a proposal to allow intermediate clubs to play for the Allan Cup, the national senior championship.

Poore said the committee wants the nine branches that do not have senior leagues to provide their best intermediate clubs for the Allan Cup playoffs. The manner in which competition within a branch would compete for the Hardy Trophy, the intermediate championship.

Only British Columbia, Ontario and Newfoundland have fully-operative senior leagues.

Juckes said earlier this week that something must be done to restore the Allan Cup, Canada's oldest amateur trophy, to its former prominence.

A special development council was established to speed progress of minor hockey players. The group will be given autonomy equal to that already held by councils administrating hockey on other levels.

"It means the development group won't have to go from one meeting to another for approval of its programs," said Murray Costello of Ottawa, who works on special projects and marketing with the CAHA.

To help administer the expanded program, for which the CAHA this week allocated $250,000 in a one-year commitment, Dennis Mcdonald, formerly of Winnipeg, has been named technical advisor.

He succeeds Cec Eaves, formerly of Calgary, who is returning to University of Windsor after a one-year leave of absence.

McDonald said he hopes to integrate the CAHA project with school recreational programs and to improve the capacity of coaches to teach young players.

Delegates also approved a one-year increase in the junior age limit to 21.

Randy Novak Scores Six For Etobicoke

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Randy Novak scored six goals to lead Etobicoke TCOs to a 20-17 victory over St. Catharines Legionnaires in Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A action Wednesday.

In the only other game, Dave Legree scored seven goals to lead Mississauga PCOs to a 19-14 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

At St. Catharines, Mike Fisher added four goals for Etobicoke. Other scorers were Wally Clorza, with three, Paul Murdoch, Barry Pilow and Brian Howe, with two each, and Dave Piroe.

Scoring for St. Catharines were John Howe, with four, Bruce Richardson and Mike McGraw, with three each, Tom Patrick and Roger Dunkley with two each, Joe Martin, Vic Gingras and Dan Atkinson.

At Mississauga, George Chandler scored four goals for Mississauga while Bob Gimmell, Tom Campbell and Dave Fitzenberg had two each and Tom Dougaley and Brian Imis one apiece.

Rick Dudley – 4-goal Night

Three-way Tie For First Place

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Carm Collins and Terry Davis led Philadelphia Wings to a 24-14 win over Rochester Griffins Wednesday that moved the Wings into a three-way tie for first place in the National Lacrosse League.

A Syracuse crowd of 1,266 saw Collins score four goals and Davis produce two goals and six assists.

Brian Robinson and Tom Parnell each had three goals for Philadelphia while Bruce Murdock scored four times for Syracuse.

At Montreal, a crowd of 4,194 saw Rick Dudley score four goals and pick up two assists as Rochester Griffins defeated Montreal Quebecois 19-12 in Wednesday's only other game.

Guidolin Seeking Security

BOSTON (AP) — Managing director Harry Sinden of Boston Bruins said Wednesday coach Bep Guidolin has gone home to Barrie, Ont., to consider whether he'll return to the team next year.

Guidolin's contract with the Bruins expired before the National Hockey League playoffs.

"He's going home and sit down with his wife in a peaceful atmosphere and we'll meet again next Monday," Sinden said after a short negotiating session with Guidolin.

The Bruins generally offer coaches one or two-year contracts but Guidolin has been holding out for a five-year agreement.

"I have to think about some security," he said. "It's got to be a long-time deal, and if it isn't you can say that I won't be back."

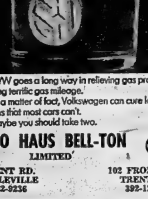
Guidolin has maintained that building a good hocker club depends on working with young players over a period of time.

"I feel we should go with younger kids—20 or 21—and build a strong hockey club for the future," Guidolin said.

"If I'm to be around for a long while, it means that I have to go with youth. This is the future of your hockey club."

"If I can't come together with the Bruins, I'll probably go back to Canada and coach kids next year in junior."

The Bruins finished first in the East Division this year and had the most points in either division, but lost to Philadelphia Flyers in the Stanley Cup final.



Contracts For Toros

TORONTO (CP) — Goaltender Gilles Gratton, right winger Tom Simpson and defenceman Steve Coddie and Mike Amodeo have signed multi-year contracts with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

A. J. (Buck) Houle, Toros' general manager, who announced the signings Wednesday, said: "These are the type of youngsters needed to blend with veterans to provide the club with a winning combination."

The signing of Gratton ended speculation that he would sign with Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League.

Public Purse Abused Argues NDP Member

TORONTO (CP) — The Progressive Conservative chairman of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission (ONTC) was accused Wednesday of abusing the public purse.

Bud Germa (NDP—Sudbury) made the accusation during discussion of ONTC spending policies and bookkeeping practices after James Jessiman (PC—Fort William) told the legislature's public accounts committee that he authorized a $25,000 salary to be paid for consulting services neither used nor asked for.

The $25,000 payment went to Kenneth Passmore, a former managing director of Star Transfer Ltd., a wholly-owned trucking subsidiary of the ONTC.

Mr. Passmore resigned shortly after discovery of a bookkeeping error which had been called a "possible conflict of interest" by the provincial auditor's department. An investigation revealed no dishonesty.

Mr. Passmore was a major shareholder in a Timmins shopping centre which encountered financial difficulties. One of the creditors was Star-Transfer.

Although he took out a third mortgage on the shopping centre as security for the creditors, the debt was written off on Star Transfer books.

Committee members asked whether the regular salary paid to Mr. Passmore as a consultant by the ONTC after his resignation was severance pay under the guise of a consulting fee.

"I felt we should do this and we did," said Mr. Jessiman. When Pat Reid (L—Lab-Rainy River) asked whether Mr. Passmore was forced to resign, Mr. Jessiman said the decision was reached after some consultation.

The committee also learned that Star Transfer allowed certain employees to fill their private cars with company gas on the honor system, a practice now discontinued.

"For an outfit that says it follows good business practices, you sure do some funny things," said Mr. Reid.

$4.54 Billion Hydro Outlay Okayed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Energy Board has recommended government approval of Ontario Hydro expansion plans totalling $4.54 billion of Hydro's $7.43-billion generating proposals for 1977-82.

In an interim report made public Wednesday, the board says it accepts the need for doubling Hydro's Pickering plans and construction of generating projects at Wesleyville, near Bowmanville, and a third heavy-water plant at the Bruce generating site.

The board also says it will not question the need for doubling power output from the Bruce generating plant but might suggest a one-year deferral of the project after considering recent studies.

A. B. Jackson, board chairman, said the projects approved will have little impact on Hydro rates for 1975 but will affect future rates.

The recommendation to Energy Minister Darcy McKeough followed hearings which began Jan. 21.

Hearings on rates and additional expansion plans continue next month and the board expects to make a full report in August, Mr. Jackson said.

Energy Board Wants Further Pipeline Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trudeau government's timetable of bringing Western Canada crude oil into Eastern Canada by late 1975 may have been disrupted Wednesday by a decision of the National Energy Board.

In a surprise move, the energy board said it was not satisfied with environmental studies conducted by Interprovincial Pipe Line Ltd. on the Quebec leg of the proposed 310-mile line from Sarnia, Ont., to Montreal.

W. A. Scotland, presiding over the six-day hearings into the proposed extension of Interprovincial's line which starts at Edmonton, ordered new studies into alternative routes for the 55-mile Quebec leg.

Until these studies are done by Interprovincial in co-operation with Quebec, the board hearings into the proposede extension are adjourned indefinitely.

At the hearings, Quebec lawyer Jean Piette objected strenuously to the proposed route which had the pipeline cross the Lake of Two Mountains at a particularly wide section and which brought it close to 21 intakes bringing drinking water to a number of Montreal-area communities.

Quebec also objected to the pipeline entering a provincial park which attracts thousands of Montrealers weekly and to the effect it would have on the province's land-use plans for the St. Eustache area.

An Interprovincial official said in an interview that he was not sure whether the board decision would delay company plans to have the line in operation by the heating season of 1975-76.

Quebec wants the route changed so that the crossing of the Lake of Two Mountains occurs farther upstream from the water intakes.

Tower to Be Less Bloody

England's famed Bloody Tower, a section of the Tower of London that once housed condemned prisoners, is being remodelled as a memorial to Sir Walter Raleigh. When it reopens in about two years, the block and axe and torture instruments will have been replaced with memorabilia on Raleigh. (CP Photo)

Dig Into Past

LONDON (CP) — Energy Minister Eric Varley has appealed for a country-wide search of attics and desk drawers for forgotten mining documents which may disclose vital information about coal mine safety. Last year's Lofthouse colliery disaster in which seven persons died might have been averted by careful study of a Victorian geologist's report, surveyors said.

Victoria Woman Runs Interpreters' Service

VICTORIA (CP) — A Punjabi seaman in trouble on the Victoria docks was helped by a Japanese astronomer he had never met.

The link was Patricia Sinnamon of Victoria, who runs a sort of mini-United Nations. She has 32 interpreters on call and translators qualified in 27 languages.

Twenty-six of these languages run through the alphabet from Arabic to Ukrainian, including Bengali, Korean, Macedonian and Serbo-Croatian. The 27th is the deaf-mute sign language.

The service began when the astronomer, Dr. Yasumasa Yamashita, boarded with Mrs. Sinnamon and her husband from 1964 to 1966. Through him, Mrs. Sinnamon became interested in Japanese language and culture. She studied Japanese at the University of Victoria and with private tutors.

In 1967 Mrs. Sinnamon obtained her first practical interpreting experience when she assisted the Canadian Forces as an interpreter for crew members on Japanese ships making official visits to the nearby Esquimalt base for Centennial celebrations.

When Louis Finmore, then manager of the Empress Hotel, commented on the need for good interpreters to cater to the rapidly growing number of Japanese tourists coming to British Columbia, Mrs. Sinnamon began to think about forming a company for interpretation and translation services.

She launched the Nichi-Ka-nada Japanese Interpreting Services in January, 1973, with six Japanese friends ready to tackle interpreting or translating chores. Last September she decided to offer multilingual services.

Mrs. Sinnamon said the business has developed in ways she did not expect.

There has been less work than anticipated with tourists and the provincial government and more from the courts and in commercial and legal translation.

For informal and tourist interpreting she charges $15 for the first hour, $5 for each additional hour and a maximum daily rate of $40.

For medical, commercial, technical, legal, academic or cultural interpreting it is $25 for the first hour, $19 each additional hour.

Business conference interpreting costs $20 for the first three hours, $15 each additional hour.

Mrs. Sinnamon said one of the most rewarding aspects of the project has been getting to know interesting people, such as some of her interpreter-translators who have worked for the UN and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Food Under Ice

LONDON (Reuter) — Explorer-scientists just returned from the Antarctic say they have discovered a vast area of rich food resources under its ice.

Their research ship, the John Biscoe, docked in Southampton after two years' work in the south polar region.

They returned with large quantities of marine specimens, including spider crabs and molluscs.

Dr. Richard Laws, director of the British Antarctic Survey, said vast quantities of plankton were discovered, "probably due to the over-fishing of whales in the Antarctic."

Laws said it was still too early to say how vital this discovery was.

Machine Converts Waste Into High-grade Fertilizer

OTTERVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Johanna Sollinger, a 44-year-old Toronto engineer, has developed a waste disposal machine that "gobbles up so much animal manure and sewage, you wouldn't believe it."

"It has taken eight years to perfect the process and now the machine is running 24 hours a day," he said in an interview. "All the bugs are ironed out."

Mr. Sollinger's plant in this community, 32 miles southeast of London, employs 12 persons and converts 150 tons of animal manure a day into 90 tons of high - grade fertilizer, bagged and ready for shipment.

Mr. Sollinger said his machine, one of about 30 waste-disposal systems the Ontario government is studying for use in conjunction with Metropolitan Toronto's sewage treatment plants, heats the waste to 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit, killing all the bacteria without combustion.

That is the patented secret behind the process, he said. It uses intense heat without allowing any burning to occur.

"However, there still is a problem to be worked out, the hesitation the government is showing about my work," he said.

"All kinds of American organizations are offering me money to set up plants in their cities but the Ontario government, which first looked at the process long time to complete its report on my work.

"We had a visit recently from a Chinese trade delegation. They want to use the process in Asia. And Omaha, Neb., with the world's largest stockyards, also wants it."

The Swiss-born engineer said his company plans to establish a plant at the Ontario stock yards in Toronto, but that he is waiting for financial assistance promised by the province before he starts construction of the Toronto plant.

Universal Postal Union Now 100 Years Old

By SCOTT THORNTON BERNE (Reuter) — The world's central postal authority is 100 years old this year but it is not expecting a flood of congratulatory telegrams.

The Universal Postal Union, (UPU) founded here in 1874 by 22 states, is one of the largest intra-governmental organizations in existence. Its decisions affect the daily lives of people in 150 member countries but it is resigned to playing a Cinderella role.

"It is sad but the public is inclined to take little interest

Dane Uses Styrofoam For Carvings

VICTORIA (CP) — A few years ago all Nick Sorensen needed was a chunk of wood and a chisel—now it's a razor blade and a piece of foam rubber.

Mr. Sorensen, a craftsman with a vivid imagination, produces carvings in relief of animals in flight and Indians in rubber foam, burlap and glass fibre.

He paints the carvings with quick, deft strokes, preferring acrylics to oils which he says take too long to dry. Sometimes he sketches his figures with a felt pen before he paints.

Mr. Sorensen, 31, experimented with alcohol, glue, water and paint and found a mixture that adheres to foam rubber.

Born and brought up in Aalborg, Denmark, Mr. Sorensen practised woodcarving before he was 10 years old and then made it his trade. In his hometown he set up a shop equipped with more than 300 carving tools and employing six workers.

However, faced with the high Danish taxes, Mr. Sorensen decided to move to Stratford, Ont., where he set up shop again carving statues and producing props for the Stratford Festival Theatre.

Unable to make a good living, Mr. Sorensen branched out into styrofoam, notching, cutting and scraping until he finished article gave no indication of its humble origin.

In, or at least to be unaware of, the problems involved in ensuring the flow of postal traffic. A UPU spokesman lamented.

From its headquarters in a modern seven-storey building here the UPU issues guidelines for the smooth running of the world's postal services, a global industry which employs 4.5 million people and uses 150,000 post offices.

UPU Day on June 14 will be dedicated to postmen the world over and the rest of the staff who help move an estimated 250 billion postal items every year.

The celebrations this year will be modest. A commemorative plaque will be placed in the union's headquarters at Weltpoststrasse (World Post Street) here, special postage stamps will be issued and a centenary book will be published.

"We hope that on UPU Day people will spare a thought for their mail service but it is a fact that for most customers the circulation of mail is like the presence of oxygen in the air," the spokesman said.

"It is only when it stops that they realize how essential it is to life."

The size of the UPU's overseeing task can be gauged from its latest statistics. About 4.5 tons of mail are dispatched daily from Copenhagen Airport, some 25 billion newspapers and magazines are delivered direct annually to subscribers in the Soviet Union and in Switzerland 125 million postcards are sent each year.

The UPU says its activities are seldom sensational because they are generally trouble-free. "The task of the union is essentially functional, which is one of the primary reasons for its success."

Rudimentary mail services were used by monarchs and princes in ancient China, Persia, Egypt, Greece and the provinces of the Roman Empire but it was only after the introduction in Britain in 1840 of the penny postage system that pressure built up for an international postal organization.

In 1863 the postmaster-general of the United States, Montgomery Blair, convened the first such international meeting in Paris, attended by delegates from 15 states or territories.

The UPU, first known as the General Postal Union, was set up at a diplomatic conference convened here by the Swiss government Sept. 15, 1874, guaranteeing for the first time freedom of transit through member countries.

Agreements since concluded by union congresses, the organization's supreme authority, include those on insured letters and money orders (1878), subscriptions to newspapers and periodicals (1885).

The creation of the international reply coupon service (1906) and an accord giving the United Nations its own postal system (1947).

In addition, the UPU prescribes the methods for calculating postal charges and sets rules for the transportation of dangerous and perishable substances such as radioactive materials and blood plasma.

The union says it is particularly proud of its measures in favor of handicapped people and prisoners-of-war.

It has arranged free postage for items concerning prisoners-of-war and civilian internees as well as literature for the blind.

"In doing so the union has transformed humanitarian aims into reality," the spokesman commented.

Candy-eaters' Teeth Not Necessarily Poor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two doctors at the University of British Columbia's dental faculty are in somewhat of a bind.

After a five-day survey of students through Grades 1 to 7 in Delta Municipality south of Vancouver, Drs. Marcia Boyd and Alan Richardson have discovered kids who gobble large loads of candy and other sweets don't necessarily get the most cavities.

But, the two researchers are a little wary of making too much of their findings lest it appear they are advocating people throw away their toothbrushes.

After human and computer analyses of the eating and dental habits of 483 youngsters were completed, the two researchers could find no correlation between high intake of sweets and high numbers of cavities.

Instead, the doctors say, even the most careful brushing of teeth and the most sugar-free diet aren't enough to guarantee

Pet Spaying Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A booklet promoting sterilization of pets has been distributed to householders in the Greater Vancouver area in a bid to control the increasing dog population. The booklet contains hints on pet care and tells householders they have "a moral obligation and a civic responsibility" to sterilize their pets unless they can provide "a good home for every offspring in the litter."

significant reductions in tooth decay and that dietary supplation may not provide the best dental health care for Canadians.

Because of these possibilities, they believe fluoridation of water is still the best bet for dental care. Only 11 per cent of British Columbians drink fluoridated water; the Canadian average is 45 per cent.

Putting it in the simplest terms, says Dr. Boyd, some people's teeth are going to have a higher tolerance to sweets

CARD OF THANKS

Miss Mary Townsend wishes to thank everyone who visited her while a patient in the hospital and since her return, and especially Major and Mrs. Nixon, Miss Pauline Lindsay, Mrs. F. Bowen, Mrs. R. Mackie and Mrs. Post.

The family of the late Mrs. Gordon Leslie Sedgwick wish to thank their relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy during our recent bereavement. Special thanks to Dr. Berry, Rev. Thomas Hall and Mr. Ross Mackie of the Funeral Home.
The Sedgwick Family.

Shower held at home of Margo Hagerman, Bloomfield, in honor of Hagerman from Happy Finish, engaged to the bride. Thank you also to all my friends and relatives for the lovely gifts and good wishes I received at my bridal shower as well as for being at the reception held at bride's home.
Sandie and Bryan Minch.

I would like to thank everyone for cards, flowers and calls and many acts of kindness during my stay in hospital and since my return to my home. Your thoughtfulness is greatly appreciated.
Mary Hadley.

We would like to thank the people of Melrose Tea Room and Gallery for the wonderful survey that was given to us recently at Victory Methodist Church hall. It was very interesting and helpful in serving the town and made it a memorable evening. Again we thank all.
Mr. and Mrs. John E. Chambers.

BCI Girls Turn Back MSS Team

Held to a 1-1 draw by Centennial Secondary School in their first start in Bay 'n' Quinte high school girls' soccer, Belleville Collegiate Institute found the scoring touch, Tuesday blanking Moira Secondary School 5-0.

Long on try but short on experience, the Moira girls couldn't get the ball past BCI goalie Shirley Gulliver.

Rita Karver accounted for two BCI goals with singles for Wendy Donovan, Jane Orton and Cathy Hislip.

Sharon and Sheila Alexander turned in strong defensive efforts for the winners.

Today, BCI visits Ontario School for the Deaf while Centennial is at North Addington Education Centre.

Monday, May 27, NADC is the visitor on the BCI pitch, and Moira goes to OSD.

Thursday, May 30, Moira plays host to NADC, and Centennial is at home to OSD.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The American Red Cross Wednesday honored Toronto broadcaster Gordon Sinclair, whose recorded praise of Americans brought increased attention and more money to the Red Cross.

Robert Harry, national director of fund raising for the Red Cross, said the organization was in "very serious financial condition" when Sinclair's recording was released seven months ago.

"Even more important that the royalties, which could run over $100,000, the announcement that he would give the money to the Red Cross created increased public interest in our situation," Harry said.

Harry said a series of natural disasters, capped by floods in 1 states in April, had "virtually depleted" the Red Cross disaster funds.

He said it would be "fine i we could get a year or so re pite from natural disasters. Bu people have never let us down in times of disasters people ar so responsive."

NEW YORK (AP) — Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. announced Wednesday a proposed $6.75-million settlement of a lawsuit that accused producer David Merrick of conspiring to take control of the film firm.

A lawyer for the company said Wednesday an "agreement in principle" was reached on a proposal for Twentieth Century-Fox to buy 747,990 shares from Merrick for $6,750,000. In return, Merrick was said to have agreed to restrict his involvement in the company for three years.

The company had charged Merrick failed to disclose sources of his financing, and that Merrick's control of the firm would create "conflict-of-interest problems."

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, May 24

Aries (March 21-April 19) Constructive influences will be prevalent today in matters affecting home and family. They'll bring harmony to all.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Don't be afraid to try with large ideas at this time if you think big and fall short you'll still be way ahead.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Money and material things will come easier today. If you're not prudent, you'll have little left to show for it.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You'll have a much firmer grip on constructive conditions that have had the upper hand over you lately. Be assertive.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be overly impatient or too anxious about present needs. Conditions are developing in your favor—if you don't rock the boat.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A good friend is your most valuable asset today. She is more concerned in helping you straighten out your affairs than in her own.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Keep your major goal in mind. Continue to put out your very best efforts. You'll be getting a break. It will put achievement within easy reach.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something you'll feel grateful for will come your way through a social involvement. Don't turn down any dinner engagements.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Things will work more to your advantage if you deal only with individuals with whom you share emotional ties.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, in situations where you will be confronting others or in one-to-one basis, you'll find the initiative tipping in your favor.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This can be a very rewarding and productive day. Set your frivolous interests aside. Concentrate on work.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Lady luck has her eye on you today. She's ready to favor you where you need a boost. Hang on to your lucky horseshoe.

Nothing Wrong In Gym Program

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My 14-year-old son enrolled in a gymnastic group at school and came home to tell me some of the exercises the instructor has them do.

One is touching the floor without bending the knees. It seems to me that I read somewhere about this damaging leg tendons or some other thing. And that while we used to do it years ago, doctors now frown on it as causing more harm than good. Could you clear this up? — Mrs. H.

I can't agree that bending the back with the legs straight is harmful. Of course most of us don't do it without practice and conditioning, because our muscles are too tight. But the hamstring (thigh) muscles can be loosened and conditioned to keep at it.

To reassure you—look at the talented dancers, skaters, acrobats and other athletes who can bend that far with ease—because they've got into condition. I say don't object to your son's gymnastic program.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you give me some information on emphysema? I had a cold that showed I had a mild case. Is there a cure? Can it get worse? How can I control it? — M.D.

Emphysema, a loss of the "balloon action" of the lungs, is not curable, but doctors are giving up smoking (if you smoke) there are various ways of controlling it, to prevent it from becoming markedly worse.

Since you have "mild case" now, you're exactly the right time to start taking care of it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You had a letter from a student of 18 who had a very rapid heart beat which no one could find a reason for. Our daughter had a similar experience several years ago, with no reason even after a zillion tests.

Quite by accident one day she discovered that her problem was—allergy to some foods, to dust and other things. She was fluffing her pillow (feather stuffed) and had an almost instant reaction.

Allergy tests confirmed it, and discovered a list of things to which she is sensitive. She avoids them as much as possible and no more heart problems.

We have a granddaughter with severe allergies but in her case they react in the form of a severe cold, so every patient is different. I hope this may help someone else.—Mrs. H.

Let's not give anyone the idea that allergy is a common cause of rapid heart beat because there are more predictable causes. But your letter is a vivid reminder of the curious and sometimes deceptive ways allergy can assert itself. You were so right in saying that each patient is different. It could well be that your observation will help someone else who has been similarly baffled.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had my sinuses cleaned out about five years ago and I have never been bothered since. My friends said one should never have their sinuses cleaned out as it causes the tissues in your head to deteriorate. How much truth is there in this? — C.L.M.

None. Sounds to me as though something had deteriorated in your friends' heads.

Note to H.M.: Avoid any kind of honey with hypoglycemia. It is basically sugar and sugar will increase your problem.

Opening lead—6♣

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Today's hand represents a lesson in conceit. You arrive at four spades in a match-point game, after a Stayman response to your initial opening bid.

West starts out with three rounds of diamonds. You discard a club on dummy's jack and are ready to operate.

If you are a really conceited player you see that all you have to do to make an overtrick is to finesse successfully in trumps and clubs. Furthermore, you will surely guess at least one of two finesses so that lead a trump to dummy's ace and return the jack. The finesse loses and a trump is led back. Now it is up to you to find the queen of clubs. Maybe you do. Maybe you don't; in any event the overtrick has disappeared.

A more cautious mortal says to himself, "If trumps break three-two I can be sure of my contract without doing any guessing at all. I still can try for five odd if the queen of trumps drops as a doubleton. I can still success about the queen of clubs if trumps are four-one. Also it is two-one that trumps will break."

Then he plays ace and king of trumps; ace, king and queen of hearts and a third heart. Someone takes the trick and is end played.

What do you do now?

A—Bid five diamonds. Your hand looks terrible, but you do have the nice looking king of hearts.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Instead of bidding five diamonds your partner bid five spades. What do you do now?

Most Universities Plan To Hold Line on Fees

By BRUCE EASSON

The Canadian Press

Despite inflation, most Canadian institutions of higher learning indicate they plan to hold the line on student fees.

In a Canadian Press Cross-Canada Survey, spokesmen for most universities also said they expect at least a modest increase in enrolment and that they plan no major reductions in the number of courses offered.

Attending university is an expensive undertaking although student loans, grants and scholarships often are available.

At University of Alberta the 1974-75 undergraduate fee for arts students will be $450, up $1 from the previous year, and at University of Manitoba $457.50, up $3 increase.

University of Toronto's undergraduate fee is expected to be $636, up $13 increase. Queen's University will charge $480 and Dalhousie University in Halifax $721.

For medical students the fees are even stiffer. The University of Alberta charges $642; University of Winnipeg $651.25; U. of T. $881 for the first year, rising to $973 in the fourth year; University of Ottawa $817; and Newfoundland's Memorial University $500 the first and fourth years, $750 in the second and third.

These tariffs do not include accommodation or meals.

On-campus accommodation at University of New Brunswick was $925 for a double room last year and a spokesman indicated this might go up.

Several universities noted a trend toward science courses which require extensive laboratory equipment. The University of Montreal was among those planning to limit enrolment of science students.

Entrance requirements for virtually all universities are unchanged from last year. At the U. of T., which had a total of 54,368 full-time, part-time and summer students in 1973-74, a spokesman said "the vast majority" of applications come from Ontario Grade 13 graduates.

However, the U. of T. like most other universities, accepts applications from "mature students" who did not complete high school.

At University of Saskatchewan, the minimum age for a person applying as a mature student is 20. Saskatchewan also permits individuals unable to qualify as regular or mature students to enrol in four special introductory courses each semester. Those successful in the introductory courses may be considered for regular admission to the university.

Here are details from representative institutions across Canada:

NEWFOUNDLAND

Memorial University: 1973-74 full-time enrolment about 5,500. Undergraduate must take a minimum of five courses per semester at a fee of $50 a course. Three semesters offered each year. To qualify for admission, an applicant must obtain 60 per cent in public examinations or 75 per cent in high school examinations. No reduction in fees for courses planned.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

University of P.E.I.: 1973-74 enrolment 1,420 and slight increase anticipated in the fall. Undergraduate fees to be increased to $50 to $800 for the three semesters in 1974-75. Admission requirements remain at junior matriculation with 60 per cent average in English and mathematics plus four other acceptable courses. No reduction planned in courses offered.

NOVA SCOTIA

Dalhousie: 1973-74 enrolment 7,709 and slight increase expected. No limit on arts and sciences enrolment but admission to professional courses limited by facilities. Fees remain at this year's level except for maximum $2.50 increase in rates for campus organizations. Range from $721 for arts, science and engineering to $817.50 for medicine. Admission remains at Nova Scotia Grade 12 graduation with an average of 60 per cent minimum.

Acadia University: 1973-74 enrolment 2,800 and increase expected. Fees $710 last year with no new schedule announced. Admission to four-year program requires a Nova Scotia Grade 12 certificate with an average 65 per cent in six subjects, including English and mathematics. Admission to three-year program with Grade 12 and the same subject average.

NEW BRUNSWICK

University of N.B.: 1973-74 enrolment 7,231 and no significant change expected. Fees unchanged, ranging from $587 for nursing and teaching programs to $612 for arts, business administration and law. Prospective students no longer required to write Service for Admission to Canadian Universities examination.

QUEBEC

Laval: 1972-74 , enrolment 11,500 and expected increase to 13,800. Admission to certain courses, such as law and medicine, limited because of a shortage of professors. Fees increased by $5, ranging from $480 for social sciences to $660 for medicine.

Sir George Williams University, Montreal: 1973-74 enrolment 15,800 and no significant change expected. Fees unchanged, ranging from $320 to $580. Enrolment limited in psychology, the most popular course.

University of Montreal: 1973-74 enrolment 12,639 and expected to increase by 1,000 in the fall. Fees range from $480 to $595. Applications limited for science courses.

ONTARIO

Carleton University, Ottawa: 1973-74 enrolment 8,229. Arts, science and engineering courses have capacity for more students. Architecture, industrial design and journalism courses limited. Minor changes expected in student fees which this year ranged from $459 for arts to $718 for architecture and engineering. Rather than reduce courses because of inflation, cuts will be made in maintenance, public transit and certain services.

University of Ottawa: 1973-74 enrolment 8,300, expected to climb to 8,775 in the fall. Fees are up by about $12, ranging from $647 for arts to $817 for medicine. A new degree course in psychology is being added. No cuts are planned in any programs but individual faculties may offer fewer options because of financial limitations.

University of Toronto: 1973-74 full-time enrolment 29,369 at three campuses—St. George, Erindale and Scarborough. No increase anticipated in fee schedule which last year ranged from $630 for arts to $973 for fourth-year medicine. First-year applications from Grade 13 students have increased 13 per cent. Entrance requirements may have to be raised because of the greater number of applicants. Existing courses unchanged but development of new programs and courses has been reduced because of cost.

Queen's University, Kingston: 1973-74 enrolment 8,940 and the number of students admitted in the coming year will be held to about that level, despite an increase in applications. Entrance requirements are unchanged and no cut in programs is expected.

MANITOBA

University of Manitoba: 1973-74 enrolment about 14,000 and an increase of up to five per cent anticipated. Fees range from $457.50 for undergraduate arts to $651.25 for medicine. Complete Manitoba Grade 12 graduation, including three compulsory subjects, required for admission. Some reduction in programs may be required if proposed budgets are not approved.

University of Winnipeg: 1973-74 enrolment 2,377, expected to increase by 2½ per cent. Student fees unchanged at $457. Manitoba Grade 12 graduation required for admission with standing in three compulsory subjects.

Brandon University: Enrolment slowly increasing following a decline a couple of years ago. Fees unchanged at $476. Accepts graduates from any Manitoba Grade 12 program, including industrial arts or applied science.

SASKATCHEWAN

University of Saskatchewan, Regina: Enrolment expected to increase by about two per cent in fall. No schedule unchanged since tuition was increased $50 in July, 1973. High school graduation required for admission except for those qualified as "mature students" who are at least 20 years old. About 25 students enrolled in special introductory courses.

ALBERTA

University of Alberta: 1973-74 enrolment 18,307 and "we don't expect any startling changes," said L. P. Morgan, associate registrar. Fee schedule ranges from $442 for law to $642 for medicine. Alberta Grade 12 matriculation with average 60 per cent required for admission. Reductions in courses are almost inevitable, "when with inflation . . . and budgets being what they are."

BRITISH COLUMBIA

University of B.C.: 1973-74 enrolment 20,000 and expected to increase slightly. No changes in fee schedule or entrance requirements expected. No cuts in existing academic programs are anticipated but fiscal problems may delay introduction of certain planned new programs.

Simon Fraser University: Enrolment fall 1973 8,178. University operates on a three-semester year and enrolment expected to increase this fall. No changes anticipated in fees or entrance requirements but some existing programs might have to be reduced because of budget uncertainties.

University of Victoria: 1973-74 enrolment about 5,500 and a modest increase is expected in the fall. No change in undergraduate fees or entrance requirements expected. No curtailment in existing academic programs anticipated and a new program in public administration is to be started in the fall.

Notre Dame University, Nelson: 1973-74 enrolment of 350 full-time students and a slight increase expected. Entrance requirements and tuition fees unchanged. New programs are to be introduced in the fall.

To Who Am I Writing?

LONDON (AP) — A Daily Telegraph journalist says that following a recent move he received a letter from the North Thames gas board, with his name and address spelled correctly, asking for his name so the board could send him money he is owed.

Fatherhood No Longer Condition Respected by Ulster Children

BELFAST (CP) — In the Roman Catholic schools of Northern Ireland, headmasters are quietly discouraging their teachers from referring too often to the fatherhood of God.

Fatherhood in Ulster's Catholic ghettos no longer is a term which evokes immediate respect. Too often for children it means idleness, drunkenness, brutality, poverty and, above all, unemployment.

Joblessness here is a particularly Catholic phenomenon. The over-all level of those out of work in the North is about five per cent. But in some Catholic estates like the Creegan in Belfast it reaches the astounding rate of 60 per cent.

The historical reasons for the situation are varied and complex and as much responsibility may rest with the Catholics themselves as with the Protestants. But the facts are that Protestants control most of the industries and the unions and most of the factories are in Protestant areas.

The result is fear and intimidation within the Catholic community.

George Carleton, for example, lived in a Catholic area of Protestant-dominated East Belfast. For 20 years he held a fairly well-paid job as a fitter in Belfast docks.

"We worked a lot of shift work," he said. "That meant we often had to return home through Protestant areas late at night.

"Then came one night when two of my friends—Catholics—got on a bus to come home and a couple of thugs jumped on with machine-guns and killed them dead as doornails on the spot."

The same pattern repeated itself all over Belfast after 1971 and more and more Catholics left the lobby fogs. Says Martha McCann, an Andersonstown housewife whose husband Robert has not worked for three years: "My nerves would crack completely if Bob was going out to work. When's he's at home I don't have to worry."

Carleton said he was determined to keep working at all costs until an incident late last year broke his courage.

"One morning I got a brightly-wrapped parcel in the mail. I opened it and inside was a single bullet with a note which said: 'You're all through, mate. The next one won't be delivered like this.' It was too much for me."

Carleton's reactions to idleness are fairly predictable. What sets him and others like him apart is their pessimistic certainty that their productive lives are over.

"I get up in the mornings and I think maybe I'll try to paint the walls or something. Often I start but I never seem to have the energy to finish. Then once the pub opens, no matter how hard I try I can't stay away from it.

"Booze helps me forget and it's such a relief to get drunk."

His 16-year-old son Kevin was reluctant to talk in front of his father but, left alone, he poured out a stream of disgust.

"Look, I like the old fella but he's a washed-up wreck," he said. "I wouldn't tell you this but I know nobody here will ever see what you write so I guess it's okay.

"See, it's hard to respect someone who doesn't do anything but sleep and drink. And the old man, he comes home at night and he knows nobody thinks he's worth a damn so he cleans the old lady or one of us kids to sort of prove he's still a man, that's a laugh.

"Well, lads my age, we're going to go our own way and to hell with these old gaffers. We'll murder any bloke that gets in our way."

The unemployed men themselves and many of their families are increasingly unwilling to discuss their plight with outsiders. Many say they feel like animals in a zoo with the rest of the world looking at their troubles and concluding that they must be crazed with savagery and hatred.

But wives are perhaps the most affected of all by the chronic joblessness. Barbara Burns, for example, lives in a draughty tenement in Ballymurphy with her four children and her husband Patrick, who has not worked for four years.

"All Pat does is sit in a chair for most of the day while I make him cup after cup of tea," she said. "At night he goes to the pub and if I give him enough money, he gets drunk."

She said the children have gradually lost all respect for their father and disciplining them has become next to impossible. Her husband occasionally flew into a rage and beat them but this had little effect other than to alienate them further.

"Our marriage isn't exactly in trouble. But like all our friends here, it just isn't anything. There's nothing to look forward to. We can't move outside our own little sections and you can't sit with your husband all day, staring at each other and doing nothing and expect things to come alive and be rewarding when you go to bed."

The Burns family, like most of those in the Catholic ghettos, refuse to pay for their electricity and other services as a protest against British policies in Ulster. These are consequently deducted by the government from social security payments, leaving a family of six with a net income of £20 (about $50) a week.

"We'll not starve," said Mrs. Burns. "But that's not the point. What kind of life is this for anyone? It's just a sure way of recruiting a steady new stream of gunmen and bombers from idle husbands and our kids."

And most tragic of all, she thinks, is that the traditional authority of the father in Irish families is being slowly and surely destroyed, perhaps forever, in Ulster and with it is going the stability and discipline on which any new, more-ordered society can be built.

Study Water

TRENTON — Council Monday night passed a resolution enabling a water study be completed of Trenton's east end.

The area, described as the community's richest development parcel, has been stymied in red tape during recent months while the town and developers attempted to determine who should pay for what in correcting drainage problems.

Gore and Storrie, well-acquainted with Trenton's circumstances after conversations with commissioner of works Arie Hoornweg, will be approached to complete the study. The firm has already taken a look at possible steps to alleviate portions of the problem.

Terrorist Squad Is Caught

TIBERIAS, Israel (AP) — A captured Palestinian terrorist whose suicide squad was intercepted by Israeli security forces in the Golan Heights says the band's mission was a Maalot-style raid and possible massacre at fishing villages on the Sea of Galilee.

The terrorist, who spoke some English, and another member of the eight-man squad were seized Thursday by Israeli soldiers participating in a security screen thrown up to protect border areas from guerrilla attacks.

They disclosed under interrogation the presence of the others, and the Israelis killed all six in a battle four miles inside Israel.

The captives said they belonged to the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the same group that sent three terrorists to attack a school in Maalot last week. Twenty-one youngsters, five adults and the three gunmen were killed in that carnage.

Guerrilla headquarters in Beirut said the intercepted band was only one of several that infiltrated across the Golan.

Kissinger Will Offer Compromise

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger said today he plans to offer his own compromise proposals aimed at breaking the Syrian-Israeli deadlock over troop limitations on the Golan front.

As he spoke, tank and artillery fire boomed along the front and Israeli and Syrian planes attacked each other's positions on the rocky plateau. The Syrians said they knocked down three Israeli jets, but the Tel Aviv command said all its planes returned safely.

Don't Be Too Anxious To Grow, Warns Davis

WALKERTON, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis advised rural mid-western Ontario Thursday not to be too quick to seek growth that might turn their towns and villages into another Brampton, his hometown.

Mr. Davis said Brampton's population, as a result of regional government and commercial development, has zoomed in a decade to 100,000 from 4,500.

People there, as in other rapid growth centres, were beginning to question whether "numbers is the most important thing."

"I just sincerely hope that people in this part of the province who have some of the great natural assets of Ontario recognize that while growth will occur . . . it must be the kind we really want to see."

Flood Aid Promised

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will match dollar for dollar funds raised by municipalities to aid flood victims along the Grand River, Allan Grossman, secretary for resources development, told the legislature Thursday. He said the province will also ask the federal government to match provincial contributions for flood relief. Mr. Grossman said provincial aid to owners of homes and small businesses will be provided under the Disaster Relief Assistance Program.

Strike Threatened

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Hospital workers at Woodstock General Hospital, members of Local 220, Service Employees International Union (SEIU), have given management until noon today to avert a planned strike.

Raiders Disappointed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police searching for Patricia Hearst conducted a pre-dawn raid on a Hollywood home today, startling two women who were said to match descriptions of Miss Hearst and Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) fugitive Emily Harris. Two sleepy women in pajamas emerged as a force of 50 to 60 police leveled shotguns and tear-gas rifles at the house, but police Sgt. Gene Ingram said the women had no connection with the terrorist SLA.

Propane Cars Derailed

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A train derailment caused a scare here Thursday as three cars, each loaded with 30,000 gallons of propane, went off tracks near the Windsor Raceway grounds. But there were no injuries or explosions.

Dryden Returning

MONTREAL (CP) — Goalkeeper Ken Dryden, who left Montreal Canadiens before the start of the 1973-74 season to pursue a law career in Toronto, will return to the club next season, the National Hockey League team announced today. The team said Dryden has agreed to a multi-year contract beginning with the 1974-75 season.

Shortage Easing

TORONTO (CP) — The shortage of many building materials in Canada is beginning to ease because of a construction slow-down in the United States, says Harry de Puyjalon, president of the Canadian Construction Association.

Price $22 Million

City Site Bought By Government

TORONTO (CP) — The province has moved to snap up options and property held by a consortium of developers near Jarvis in the regional municipality of Haldimand-Norfolk as the site of a new city.

Treasurer John White told the legislature Thursday that the government has acquired 10,719 acres for $22 million.

The consortium will receive about $1 million for its work in assembling the land and the treasurer said that considering it is a reputable one the consortium would probably break even.

The consortium—Sifton Properties of London, Revenue Properties Co. Ltd., Victoria Wood Development Corp. Ltd. and Metropolitan Trust Co.—had offered several package proposals to the government.

The site became an issue last year when the government planners recommended an area in Woodhouse Township near Simcoe to accommodate major industrial expansions planned by the Steel Company of Canada, Ontario Hydro and Texaco.

But the province took out options on land in the Woodhouse area and the consortium picked up options in nearby Townsend Township near Jarvis.

Regional council was asked for an opinion on the new townsite location but refused to back the Jarvis location.

Mr. White said outside the legislature he will take two or three years to come up with a plan for the new city—satisfactory committees would be required and public meetings would be necessary.

The treasurer told reporters that the government will be recovering its investment but noted that it was yet to be decided whether the government will attempt to make money on the plan.

"My inclination at the moment is that they should sell off the residential part at cost or a little above the market price for the commercial and light industrial areas," he said.

The treasurer told the legislature he had examined the proposals by the consortium and also had independent chartered accountants look over their plans.

The takeover of the options will beat original cost and the government will purchase outright three farms now owned by the consortium.

The province will pay a five-per-cent fee to cover assembly costs of the consortium.

In an interview later, Mr. White said the deal "is very good from our standpoint."

"I don't intend to apologize for it either because I made it very clear starting a year ago that I wasn't going to let these land speculators raid the public purse," he said.

Mr. White said he was alarmed when he learned that a "lifelong friend," Mobray Sifton of London, was part of the consortium. However, Mr. White said he hadn't had any meetings with his friend recently.

Trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange in shares of one of the consortium companies was halted Thursday.

Mr. White said this was done when an official of the company told a financial reporting service that the government was buying the land for a pittance.

There are pockets of land within that 10,000 acres that the consortium didn't own or have options on and the government has already started with the acquisition of this land.

Mr. White said he was alarmed when he learned that a "lifelong friend," Mobray Sifton of London, was part of the consortium. However, Mr. White said he hadn't had any meetings with his friend recently.

"Meantime, development in the general area . . . is controlled by minister's orders so that the interests of the government and the regional municipality will not be frustrated by any precipitous or incompatible development," said Mr. White.

The city, to serve an estimated 150,000 people, will be planned by the inter-governmental affairs ministry until the Ontario Land Corp., promised in this year's budget, is set up.

Mr. White said this would likely be in the fall. The corporation then would buy the land and plan the city in co-operation with local residents and consultants.

Existing houses might be sold at cost or less. Mr. White said, and land useful for light industry sold at market prices.

Revenue Properties president Maxwell Goldhar said he made "a modest profit" on the land action. However, he added that whether he is happy with it is "a very subjective thing," but the settlement is in the "best interests" of all concerned.

Bank Robbed To Aid Hungry

TORONTO (CP) — Abraham Tesfay, who said he resented forget the hunger, depression and famine in his native Ethiopia, was sentenced Thursday to five years in penitentiary for robbing banks in Ottawa and Toronto.

Testimony showed that Tesfay, a 23-year-old graduate student in economics at the State University of Ohio in Wilberforce, belongs to the Eritrean Liberation Movement, dedicated to separate the northern province of Eritrea from Ethiopia.

Sgt. W. R. Crampton of the Metropolitan Toronto police said Tesfay came to Canada in February to try to raise funds for his homeland, but became discouraged and decided to rob banks to raise funds.

Edited Transcripts Prove Unreliable Declare Lawyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee has been advised by its two top lawyers that it can't rely on White House-edited transcripts in its impeachment inquiry.

Errors, omissions and deletions in the 46 conversations released April 30 by President Nixon make them unsatisfactory as evidence, say chief counsel John Doar and Albert Jenner, the chief minority counsel.

They told the committee Thursday there is "an absolute need" to get the tapes of the conversations if the impeachment verdict is to be based on the best evidence.

Nixon spurned a committee subpoena for 11 Watergate tapes Wednesday and said he will not respond to any other subpoenas it may issue for Watergate material. He turned over the transcripts in response to an earlier subpoena for tapes.

In another Watergate arena, today is the deadline for White House response to subpoenas for papers left behind by two former Nixon aides when they still were working for the president. U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell has said he may vote to throw out charges against the five defendants in the Ellsberg break-in case if all relevant material is not provided.

And in still another tapes development, the Senate Watergate committee was told it has not shown sufficient need for five White House tape recordings it has been seeking, the U.S. Court of Appeals came to that decision Thursday in ruling against the committee's legal battle for the tapes.

In other Watergate developments:

—Attorney-General William Saxbe told the Senate judiciary committee that special prosecutor Leon Jaworski will not be fired. Saxbe told committee Chairman James Eastland (Dem.-Miss.) that he will continue to guarantee Jaworski's freedom in the Watergate investigation.

—An Internal Revenue Service spokesman said IRS has declined to supply the House judiciary committee with information on Nixon's tax returns.

—A news conference following the House committee's session. Doar repeated his criticism of the White House tapes he had delivered to the members.

"I am concerned about their accuracy and about the judgments of the president and his counsel on matters of relevance," he said.

Doar's assessment of the White House transcripts is based on comparisons with transcripts produced by the committee from tapes of the same conversations it got from the special prosecutor.

Chairman Peter Rodino said the comparisons disclosed numerous misstatements, omissions, misattributions and deletions that distorted the meaning of some conversations in the White House transcripts.

Rodino has scheduled a meeting for next Thursday or Friday to deal with Nixon's refusal to comply with the subpoena. Despite the need for the tapes, he said, he will oppose efforts to seek court enforcement of the subpoena, which some members are proposing.

Liberal Says Land Speculation Tax Ends Tory Love Affair with Farmers

TORONTO (CP) — Vernon Singer (L—Downsview) said Thursday the Conservative government's "love affair" with farmers will end with imposition of the proposed land-speculation tax.

He joined New Democratic Party critics in full Revenue Minister Arthur Meen on actions of the bill that would tax transfer of farmland.

"One thing that rides high in the Tory section is that we love the farmers and the farm it's love us.

"Well, you are ending the love affair," he told the minister in committee debate of the bill introduced six weeks ago.

The bill, if approved, would place a 50-per-cent surcharge on land speculators, but exempt sale of farm lands between family members.

It would also exempt increases in farm values of about 29 per cent annually from April 1 this year, the effective date of the proposed tax.

The opposition charged the government is "morally wrong" to label farmers as speculators.

But the parties were divided when it came to voting on opposition amendments to the government proposals.

Murray Gaunt (L—Huron-Bruce) proposed a tax exemption for agricultural lands used for farming for 10 consecutive years prior to sale.

He said it is "a piece of nonsense" to distinguish between family members and sale to other farmers, and that when farmers invest in building and land it is for speculation but to make a living.

That amendment was rejected by NDP members who called it a "grandstand play for the wealthy farmers in the province . . . who may make a million." They sided with the government in a 58-to-12 vote to turn back the proposal.

An NDP suggestion to exempt land on which farming continues after the sale, aided by Liberal support, was ruled out by a 38-to-24 vote.

Mr. Meen said he sympathized with the opposition's expressed concern to encourage continued production on farmland through their proposed exemptions, but said he felt they would further raise the price of farms and prevent young people from entering the market.

He said the annual allowances granted farmers are "far more generous than has been extended in any other quarter."

"And it rather surprises me that the other quarters haven't complained at the generous treatment being afforded to the farming community."

The government, also turned down an NDP amendment to lower to 10 from 20 per cent the value of renovations required to exempt property from the tax.

A Liberal attempt by Margaret Campbell (L—St. George) to win exemption for the elderly in hospitals, nursing homes or institutions also was defeated.

Two Hasty Pees Ready for Egypt

Two members of the Hastings-Prince Edward regiment leave next week for operations duty in the Middle East.

Corporals Rick Cunningham, 20, of RR1, Consecon and Tom Leonard, 19, of RR4, Marmora leave Thursday for Montreal. They had completed a month's training in Camp Petawawa.

The two form part of eight that were trained for such duties. They began their training there April 22.

This marks the first time since the Second World War that members of the Hasty Pees were chosen for operations duties, said Maj. Angus Duffy, who as a lad of 22 left the regiment for duty in World War II.

In 1951, a company of Hasty Pees was sent to Germany but was used in a different capacity.

The pair from Quinte are part of 120 that will eventually be sent to Egypt for peace keeping duties with A.L.F.C. smith, public information officer at Petawawa stressed that those sent to the Middle East will not be doing active combat duty. "They are there to keep the peace between Egypt and Israel," he said. The men in Montreal now and leave on May 28 for Germany, en route to Cyprus and then to Egypt.

Film of the 40s Opening at Mall

Tonight the long-awaited film, The Way We Were opens at Cinema Two at the Quinte Mall.

The film stars Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford in a story set in the 40s. The pair are a singularly mismatched couple, eventually torn apart by repercussions from the Hollywood blacklist.

For her performance in this film, Barbra Streisand was nominated for an Academy Award but lost in the final running to Glenda Jackson.

The title song, however, won a richly deserved award for best song and is a memorable part of the movie.

The film has a fine supporting cast including Patrick Lindfors, Patrick O'Neal and Bradford Dillman.

To those who enjoyed the romantic films of the 40s, when Bette Davis managed to get at least one box of Kleenex sopping wet, then this is the film for you. In fact, anyone seeking a relaxing, generally unstressful movie will enjoy The Way We Were.

Nightly performances at 7 and 9 p.m. On this adult entertainment rated film. Matinees on Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Women Teachers Elect Officers

PICTON — The Prince Edward County Women Teachers recently elected their new executive for the coming year during their final meeting of the 1973-74 term.

New president will be Sherra Newcombe and first vice-president, Joan Johnston. Second vice-president will be Diane Hayes and secretary, Sumone Livingston. Treasurer for next year will be Linda Dullmage.

Committee convenors were elected as follows: educational finance convener, Marlene Armstrong; goodwill convener, Nancy Lockyer; legislation convener, Susan Broadbridge; status convener, Margaret Richards; superannuation convener, Mary Huff; superannuation convener, Jean Strawbridge; teacher education and public relations, Elsie Brooks.

Turner Rejects Policies

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner has rejected the main anti-inflation policies of the Conservative and New Democratic parties.

The Conservative proposal of temporary wage and price controls would aggravate the primary cause of inflation, a shortage of goods in the m-r-r-place, Mr. Turner said on the CBC television program News magazine Thursday night.

He also turned down the NDP proposal of a two-price policy for basic commodities such as lumber, copper and steel—one price in Canada and a higher price for exports.

Mr. Turner said this would force the government to bring in export controls to keep enough supplies at home to protect domestic needs.

In turn, "a new style of protectionism" would result—"just as vicious and just as counter-productive as the old-style protectionism of the 1930s."

Max Saltsman, NDP financial critic, said that the same program that prices in some basic commodities would drop by 30 or 40 per cent if a two-price system went into effect.

As it stands now, he said, Canadians are paying through the nose for commodities they have in abundant supply.

He rejected a suggestion that other countries would retaliate if Canada adopted protectionist policies. The government already has a two-price system for wheat and oil, and there has been no aiverse foreign reaction, he said.

James Gillies, Conservative financial critic, said wage and price controls are needed to provide a cooling-off period, and to break the self-defeating inflationary psychology in the country.

The 90-day wage and price freeze proposed by the Conservatives would give the government time to get together with industrial and labor leaders to work out a longer-term solution, he said.

The program was televised nationally.

Tenders Advertised

PICTON — James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox, reports that tenders are being advertised for the ministry of community and social services for several items at Prince Edward Heights complex in Picton.

Among these is replacement of steam and condensation lines in Craig Unit 1.

Other items include supply and installation of aluminium windows, screens and doors on 30 residences and replacement of deteriorated built-up roofing, metal flashings, drains and vents on the roof of St. Barbara's School. Completion date for the projects is in the latter part of 1974.

Blossom Tour For Shut-ins

PICTON — This Sunday will become "blossom time" for many of the residents of Prince Edward County nursing homes.

The Outreach Committee of Picton United Church has planned a blossom tour with volunteer drivers who will call at the nursing homes for patients wishing to join the excursion.

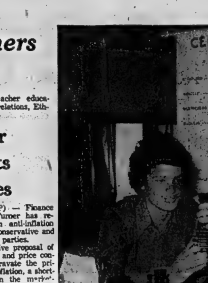
The length of the tours will be adjusted to avoid over-tiring participants.

Building Begun On 30 Houses

PICTON — Construction has started on 30 new houses on Pitt Street, overlooking Picton Bay.

Picton Bay Estates by J. L. Developments gained town council's approval earlier this month and now are under way with a target date for completion of mid-summer.

Final estimated price for the home complex is Corey Walraven of Picton.



Kettle Production Continues

TORONTO (CP) — Robert S. Thomson, a vice-president of Canadian General Electric Co. (CGE), said today the company has not stopped production of electric kettles and has no intention of doing so.

Mr. Thomson, vice-president of housewares, said CGE does not use lead solder in its kettles and there is no possibility of lead poisoning from them.

GE stopped using lead solder in its kettles in 1970 following warnings from the United States Food and Drug Administration about the possibility of lead poisoning from other types of cooking utensils, Mr. Thomson said.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Sunbeam Corp. (Canada) Ltd. said the company has frozen its stocks of electric kettles pending the outcome of tests ordered earlier this week by the federal government.

Scientists: Steve Zimmer and Dale Paus

Young Scientists Score

BAYSIDE — Building a rocket sied that will double the speed of sound and determining the affects of caffeine on learning ability hardly sounds like way for teenagers to pass free time.

Never the less, Dale Paus and Steve Zimmer did the projects and drew acclaim for themselves in Rotary Science Fair competitions.

Both are students of Bayside Secondary School and each intend continuing his education in the fields of aerospace engineering and biology.

The two took top honors in local science fair competitions and represented Hall in the national competitions, held two weeks ago in Calgary.

Dale's rocket sled, built by Dale — a grade 11 student looking toward Royal Military College for engineering — virtually reached the speed of sound in earlier testing and once the custom built engines arrive from the United States, march 11 should be reached.

The design was completely inspired by Dale with some assistance from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and Canada's National Research Council.

Dale expects to attain much 11 on a 4,000-foot length of wire (directional guidance for the sled) and a sophisticated telemetry system in the sled's nose will relay velocity, acceleration and a couple of dozen other pieces of data back to a stationary receiver for follow-up calculations.

Dale received a national honorable mention for his work and a gold medal from an aernautical society for his course project.

Steve Zimmer, during experimentation with mazes and white mice, determined caffeine — as found in coffee — has a deterrent affect on learning ability.

Steve taught the mice the technique of running the maze and charted times. Following this he divided the group in half. One group would get increasing dosages of caffeine in the drinking water, the other would receive none.

At the end of the experiment, the caffeine group showed it was addicted to the caffeine water and times to run through the maze were slower for the caffeine group. Steve hopes to attend Guelph University to continue biology studies.

Lighting Requested

TRENTON — The board of parks management here approached town council Monday night for additional lighting in Fraser Park on the municipality's waterfront.

Apparently the board has problems with vandalism in the park through no costs were mentioned during the council session.

The parks board also points out that circuits in the area are not capable of handling larger lighting installation and described lighting in the dock area as being "in purportedly shocking condition."

The board requested council to consider the request in the municipality's lighting projects for the current year.

Mayor Robert Patrick said the matter was in the hands of municipal office staff and that the tab would be picked up jointly by the park and the industrial commission for capital projects of this nature.

Sills Awarded Supply Contract

From The Ottawa Bureau Of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — A Belleville firm, Arthur A. Sills and Son Ltd., has been given a $16,000 federal contract to provide building materials during a 15-week period ending Aug. 30 the Department of Supply and Services announced this week.

It was one of 278 unclassified contracts — each worth $10,000 or more for a total value of $41,360,816 — awarded to Canadian firms during the week ended May 16.

Special Services Planned Sunday

PICTON — Two Picton churches this weekend have planned special services.

The Free Methodist Church will sponsor a Youth Weekend on May 24, 25 and 26 featuring a gospel sing and the gospel film "So Long Joey."

Guest speaker for Sunday services will be Reverend Wesley Vanderhoof, professor of religion at Robert Wesleyan College, North Chili, New York.

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church an anniversary service will be held on Sunday, May 26, at 11 a.m. Guest speaker will be Reverend Peter B. Reid of Sault Ste. Marie and formerly of Picton.

A fellowship hour will follow in the church hall.

Application Refused

MARMORA — Four Marmora young people who thought they would have summer jobs and at the same time provide a service for tourists in this area have learned that their Opportunities for Youth application has been turned down.

The four, Anita Wisti, Mary Ellen Thompson, James Airhart and Randy Vilneff, intended to staff a tourist booth at Marmora's main intersection to provide information six days a week to tourists.

The project had the support of Marmora Village Council, the Marmora Businessmen's Association and Jack Ellis, Hastings MP.

The reasons given for the refusal of the application was that there is an alternative means of information available to tourists and also that it was felt the young people were not equipped to handle such a project.

A Madoc application for funds to operate a day care centre was approved for the second year in a row. A Marmora application two years ago for funds to do a cleanup along the river banks was also turned down.

Deputy-reeve Grant Airhart got in touch with Mr. Ellis when the four young people learned their project had been turned down and Mr. Ellis promised that he would go to work on it. Mr. Airhart was in touch with Mr. Ellis again last Sunday evening and was told that Mr. Ellis hopes to have word in a few days.

Meeting Will Discuss Arena

Sidney council has taken the first step toward creating a recreation committee for the township.

During a council meeting this week, council agreed to call a public meeting to gather township sentiment surrounding the need for a township or regional arena. The meeting is scheduled Tuesday, June 4 at the RR 5 Belleville municipal building at 8 p.m.

Charges Not Proved

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — An inquiry committee called to investigate allegations of mistreatment of patients at the Brockville Psychiatric Hospital has been unable to substantiate the charges.

The five-member committee's report "deplored" the unwillingness to testify of two registered nursing assistants who made the charges.

"It makes it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to investigate adequately the charges and take corrective action if any should be required," the report said.

The Tuesday investigation also concluded that it could find no evidence of widespread abuse or neglect of patients, or of any reported incidents which had not been investigated and dealt with properly.

The committee interviewed more than 20 witnesses, among them ward supervisors.

Allegations of cruelty to patients, sexual misdoings, negligence and drug abuse had been published earlier. Those stories were based on interviews with the two women nursing assistants at the hospital.

Craft Shop Reopening

PICTON — A showcase for Prince Edward artists and crafts, County Crafts, will open in Picton for the third season through an Opportunities for Youth grant.

This summer the shop will be staffed by Carole Coward of Picton, Becky Hung of East Lake, Dawn George of Bloomfield, and Carole McEil, Picton.

The County Craft shop features articles brought there for sale by local residents. Among the items are stuffed animals, paintings, crochet work, jewellery and knitting. Prices of the merchandise are set by the owners and they receive the full amounts for which the articles are sold.

The shop is located in the Armory Mall and is open to the public from Monday to Saturday until August 31.

Political Anomalies

Sometimes politics has nothing to do with politics — if you understand what we mean.

There are things like hoopla, you know, and that means pretty girls, uniforms, bands and all that.

It was like that in the election of 1968 and during the party leadership contests. We have a picture of Paul Hellyer about that time with a bunch of pretty and good looking young women in straw hats, miniskirts and sweaters that spelled out the candidate's name as they strode along the street.

Last time around, in 1972, when Trudeaumania was but a flickering ember and voter disenchantment with the Government was high, the election atmosphere was more sombre. Voters and even the candidates had more serious things on their minds than mere euphoria and grandiloquent oratory and fluffy intangibles. They wanted more than promises of a "just society," whatever that meant. In any event Canadians have been getting the governments, presumably, that they wanted, although this last time minority government, after showing some initial promise, has fallen into limbo.

Hence the current election campaign and once again there are straws in the wind that have little to do with issues or the job the Government has been doing, or not doing, with regard to inflation, poverty, corporate ripoffs, or whatever.

Consider for example that when Prime Minister Trudeau was in Prince Edward Island or somewhere or other in the Atlantic orbit, he was asked "where's Sacha?" A reference of course to his second-born. And we are told that Mrs. Trudeau, with kids in tow, may play a greater role in this election than before. What this sort of thing has to do with inflation and lesser issues of course escapes us. Nevertheless we do not dismiss this human element, for it is an important aspect of elections. Indeed, in the final analysis, mere issues, "things," may be set aside, for out front is flesh and blood and let's not forget that.

Last time the battle of the sexes entered the political relay, Opposition leader Stanfield took his wife and a daughter, an attractive young woman, at his side during the campaign. Doubtless he will have similar support this time. It is all part of the game of politics — or viewed another way, non-politics.

Easing A Shortage

A serious problem these days where food production's concerned, and especially for underdeveloped countries and lands where inept government and internal troubles (such as taking Sri Lanka) prevail, is the shortage of fertiliser.

In Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon) the energy crisis has aggravated the social and economic difficulties of that country and the Prime Minister, Mrs. Bandaranaike, has told her countrymen they must "produce or perish." Already a high proportion of the country's foreign exchange earnings is needed for importation of food alone. However, in a move that has merit as a co-operative venture with another, wealthier and developed country which nevertheless must look to fertiliser for maintenance of its intensive agricultural industry (New Zealand), Sri Lanka hopes to ease this situation.

At a special session of the United Nations the two countries tabled a joint proposal for the immediate establishment of a fertiliser fund. This would provide for fertiliser derived from petroleum to be made available to developing countries on a grant or subsidized basis.

New Zealand has announced it is prepared to contribute $5 million to the fund over the next five years. This is a practical sort of plan which should go far toward easing the financial burdens (as well as providing necessary fertiliser) occasioned in many lands by higher petroleum prices.

Modesty And No Slogans For Grits

P.M. And Stanfield Do Some 'Role Reversing' On Hustings

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — To listen to Prime Minister Trudeau and Conservative Leader Stanfield as they limber up vocally for the big race, it is almost as if they have changed characters.

The Prime Minister is busy with the soft sell, taking a low-key approach to the campaign and stealing the Conservative leader's best platform weapon — a wry, modestly appealing self-deprecation.

Mr. Stanfield always has been at his best not when trying to live up to the "Big Thunder" role that some of the supposed political press wits bestowed on him in cutting sarcasm, but in making humorous capital out of his very lack of lightning.

He has made almost a fetish for so long of his stiffism, of his contempt for less intellectual audiences — which included just about everybody who had the audacity to question his infallibility — that it was almost beyond comprehension to hear him verbally skewer himself on it.

Did he have an election slogan for this campaign, he was asked by a reporter somewhere along how Trudeau's battle cry "The land is strong" bombed so badly the last time.

Trudeau remembered too — goodness knows he had been reminded often enough — and for one of the very few many times to ever forget — but instead of coming back with a snide retort, he grinned and bridled himself.

Well, no, he did not have a slogan, he allowed, nor did he think he would waste much time trying to dream one up.

Somebody had suggested the possibilities of using "The leader is strong," but after the collapse of the defence department in Parliament on the budget, he did not figure that would have much political sex appeal. But not to despair.

If Pierre Trudeau could not — and very obviously did not intend to — think up a slogan, Robert Stanfield was more than willing to help him.

How about, he has been asking, "It's a mess!"?

Those were the memorable words spilled out in frustration, on the floor of the House of Commons by Transport Minister Jean Marchand over the sad state of the rules for debate.

As slogans go, purred Robert Stanfield, on the attack, "It's a mess" has to be a pretty good one for the Grits.

"Ask them about inflation — and the slogan fits — it's a mess.

"Ask them about their housing policy — prices so steep, mortgage rates so high the roof's out of sight for nine of 10 home-buyers — and it's a mess.

"Ask them about the results of their investigation into the ruins of their unemployment insurance policy — with another form of disguised Grit taxation and a disincentive to work — and, yep, it's a mess, too."

Now this is a new tough-talking Stanfield.

For the election of October, 1972, he never spoke like that, he was too busy sounding "reasonable."

But now, turning their own admission "It's a mess" back on them in their main legislative endeavors, Robert Stanfield sounded at last gritty and meaty enough to be Pierre Trudeau.

"We'd like to trade ours in on one that carries more Canadian content."

India's Nuclear Capability Causes Dismay

By KEVIN DOYLE
The Canadian Press

Canada now has added its voice to a chorus of domestic national protest against the explosion of a nuclear device by India but the country with most to fear is India's populous neighbour, China.

The explosion came nine years and eight months after the Chinese announced the detonation of their first nuclear device. Since then the Chinese have built up a formidable arsenal. In recent years Chinese military preparation has been directed more towards the Soviet Union as relations between the two countries deteriorated to danger levels.

Now China must also take into account another possibility — many observers are saying the probability — that India will develop into a nuclear power as well. This might lead the Chinese to expand their defence to take account of that possibility in addition to the one with the Soviet Union. For the Russians, this might be considered something of a windfall, with their arch-enemies, the Chinese, having to disperse their forces along two frontiers. Meanwhile, the major questions being asked in international circles since the explosion are why and how it could have happened.

The most important reason behind the Indian decision seems to have been domestic pressure and despite official declarations of any military intent, it has clearly established that India is well on the way to mastering nuclear bomb technology.

The demand for an Indian atomic bomb goes back to 1965 when large sections of the public were genuinely worried, rightly or wrongly, with the possibility of China usurp her atomic weapons against India.

In 1968, a carefully-prepared study report revealed that more out of every four persons in India favored manufacture of atomic weapons.

Even more intriguing, however, is the question of how India carried out the explosion and whether it has help from an outside power such as the Soviet Union.

Ivan Head, Prime Minister Trudeau's top foreign policy adviser, is quoted as saying Canadian-built nuclear reactors in India could not have produced the grade of plutonium needed for the blast. Canada first began helping India with nuclear technology in the 1950s with the firm understanding it would be used for peaceful purposes.

Head has also been quoted as saying the plutonium must have come from one of the five countries with nuclear bombs: Britain, China, France, the Soviet Union or the United States.

But British officials, at least, are extremely skeptical that any outside help was given to India. Well-versed experts in London say it would be extremely unlikely that India itself would not by now be perfectly capable of separating out high-grade plutonium from the uranium used in the atomic power reactors.

One source said "significant quantities—certainly enough for Sikurdy's explosion" are produced by large reactors.

Experts at London's Institute for Strategic Studies share this view but they say the explosion raises still another issue of major importance.

India, they say, now must consider whether its mastery of atomic explosive techniques might make it vulnerable in future to a pre-emptive strike by China.

Because of this, they point out, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi may find herself in a position where she feels forced to construct quickly an efficient missile-based delivery system to forestall any such threat.

Sources say India has active plans for launching earth communications satellite in early 1975 and this will enable Indian scientists to increase their knowledge of rocket and missile technology at the same time.

Whether a bomb and missile systems are developed remains largely matters for conjecture.

But there seem to be few international observers prepared to accept at face value India's statement that Saturday's explosion was intended purely for peaceful purposes.

Recall of Savings Bonds Depletes Ottawa's Reserves

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Everybody has to have a certain amount of working capital — money — even the government of Canada.

The government will always be able to pay its bills. It could never run out of cash.

It could, however, run a little low on the cash it needs for paying for supplies, meeting payrolls and so on.

That's what has happened during the past three weeks. In the first full week following presentation of the federal budget and the Liberals' defeat in Parliament, the government's "bank account" (Canadian dollar balances at the Bank of Canada and the chartered banks) fell by $80 million, to $440 million.

For an operation the size of the government of Canada, that's probably an inadequate working capital.

As a result, the attention of the financial community is focussed on Ottawa's plans for a new borrowing to raise funds to pay off the June 15 maturity and to bolster its depleted cash balances.

Announcement date of the refunding issue: June 3.

The major reason for the drop of $80 million in government cash balances during the week ended May 15 was that the general public cashed in $115 million worth of Canada Savings Bonds.

People have the right to redeem those bonds at face value wherever they wish. That's one of the big incentives to purchase them in the first place, and in a normal week about $23 million would be cashed in for redemption.

Today, investors and savers are exercising their privilege to take instant cash for Canada Savings Bonds registered in order to take advantage of the unprecedented interest rates that they can earn on guaranteed investment certificates, corporate bonds and other debt instruments.

It's ironic that the sole item to survive from Finance Minister John Turner's May 6 budget was the increase to nine per cent in yield-to-maturity on Canada Savings Bonds.

The government thought that this bonus, combined with the opportunity to allow interest to compound, would discourage Canada Savings Bond holders from swapping.

But Ottawa may have misjudged the motives of such savers, many of whom seem quite prepared to sacrifice the convenience of compounding and the right of instant redemption, in exchange for one percentage point of yield.

A number of courses and precedents are open to the government as it prepares to meet the June 15 refunding and simultaneously rebuilds its cash holdings.

One might be the technical step of increasing the chartered banks' secondary reserve requirement, which now is eight per cent of deposit liabilities, cash, treasury bill holdings and day-to-day loans.

Another might be to sell the entire mid-June issue to the chartered banks, on terms that would be at least partly monetary.

The probable prospect is that the government will take the usual course and make a public offering of $500 million new bonds, with the only proviso that the amount of the issue may vary by 10 per cent.

The government's problem will be to fix an interest rate that is both high enough to sell the issue in a fiercely competitive market, and low enough to be an acceptable burden.

One gimmick used successfully in the past, is to offer a relatively high yield for a shorter-than-normal maturity issue and give purchasers the option of extending the maturity to a long term at a lower yield.

Simonds Was Allies' Top Tactician

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Last weekend Canada laid to rest the general who British Field Marshal Lord Montgomery said was the best tactician in the Allied armies.

The late Lt.-Gen. Guy Granville Simonds was given full military honors, his Canadian Armed Forces cortege complete with gun carriage moving without fault or failure across the middle of Toronto, a city busy with spring gardening and enjoying long-overdue weekend sun.

British born Guy Simonds looked like and was the consummate soldier. Tall, slim, possessing lifelong good looks with the military officer's clipped moustache in the British fashion, he never shook off a reputation for coolness, icy efficiency and competence.

In the war summer of 1944, Supreme Allied Commander General Dwight Eisenhower ordered him, in command of the 150,000 men of the Second Canadian Corps in northern France, to close the northern half of the Falaise Gap, an escape route for the big German army then beginning to crumble into central France.

Gen. Simonds decided to mount the huge operation at night with the unprecedented night-time use of heavy bombers to support an advance of infantry and tanks. He also stripped his armored vehicles of their guns to carry yet more infantry and ammunition to tanks.

The German armies were routed in a technique contrary to the many lessons already learned in four years of tank warfare during the Second World War. Gen. Eisenhower later called it one of the three most decisive battles for Europe.

Gen. Simonds remained unknown in America where great war heros like Generals Omar Bradley and George G. Patton won all the credit for routing the Germans in France. In fact Gen. Simonds was scarcely a household word in Canada.

It was mainly his peers and contemporaries — fellow officers with the bright color ribbons of the highest decorations dangling on grey and sombre funeral attire, who bade him farewell.

All of which brings us around to a hard look at the record of a national hero in our democracies in an age when the code which makes a military man what he is, has not only been downgraded by the many, but dishonored by the few.

Canadians have no single time such as Memorial Day in the United States, to remember the dead and living of two wars (four of them the War of 1812, the two world wars and Korea were shared with America).

And Canadians have had no national day of remembering down of the military tradition in the holocaust of domestic political and social upheaval which that war created in the United States.

And yet the backlash from Vietnam from the tens of thousands of young American draft dodgers and deserters here has turned into Canada where the idea of a national hero being in a uniform is harshly viewed by the young and the radicalized. They hearken after more certain heros, the leaders of tumultuous movements for social and political change in our world.

The single-minded and rigid code of values which grew from the military tradition are hard to set down as long-lasting in increasingly pluralistic democracies like our own and the America's.

The faded and cast-off American and Canadian battle dress for parade" are the backs of young Americans and Canadians this summer sprung say much about their resistance and indifference to the dynamic role of the military in our society and its quiet one here.

The veiled youth of the United States here wear their old army and marine corps gear as part of their continuing personal protest against a war they call dehumanizing and in which they would not fight.

Their Canadian friends wear old Canadian khaki battle-dress because an Act of Parliament in 1963 peacefully unified the Canadian Armed Forces and replaced it with a single, new green uniform.

Gen. Simonds, therefore, was laid to rest in a national mood of disregard for fighting heroes which America and, even Allington in time will not escape.

Bureaucrats Bungle It

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Ontario is suffering from a bad case of mandarinism.

The government is being let down by its bureaucrats.

The big spectacle of this session has been anything but. Finance Minister Arthur Meen has been unable to get the government's land speculation tax act through the house.

The bill is a mess since there has been such trouble with its drafting.

It has been amended and amended; it is amended again, brought in after second reading and now has been the target of prolonged and bitter criticism from both opposition parties.

And at times Mr. Meen has been unable to look foolish.

There has to be sympathy for the minister himself.

For the poor quality of the bill isn't really nearly as much his fault as the civil service's, simply.

Any minister of government has to rely heavily on his professionals, the civil servants.

They have to advise him on what to do, and when he and the government are prepared to accept at face value India's statement that Saturday's explosion was intended purely for peaceful purposes.

The Potter Property

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The whole question of the purchase of the Potter property needs to be gone into. Hopefully the notice of motion by Alderman George Hudson will resolve this purpose.

Those members of city council who voted to buy this property at such an outrageous price should have the good sense not to offer themselves for office again.

I commend the common sense of Alderman Ze-gouras.

The bewilderment expressing the senselessness of the whole affair in relation to the ability of the community to pay.

Here, in Belleville, our councillors are going out of their way to create the circumstances of these scandalous property prices by supporting those on the Minor Housing Standards Authority who advocate the purchase of this piece of land.

I hope the down-to-earth common sense of Thurlow aided by the concern of Alderman Ze-gouras will register with the money spenders—but I doubt it.

I wonder how many millions of dollars will the actual cost be?

New Jobs Announced

PM Follows Stanfield Into Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield was to fly to Montreal today, half wondering whether a thunder-stealing Pierre Trudeau was coming in behind him.

The wonderment, expressed at a rally officially opening his July federal election campaign Thursday night, came after the prime minister stole some opening day publicity.

Making a hurried unscheduled 20-minute stop here on a flight to Saskatoon, the prime minister announced 800 new jobs for the city's aerospace industry.

Mr. Stanfield had arrived only a couple of hours before to launch his party's campaign in the Winnipeg South constituency of Defence Minister James Richardson who has made demands for new Air Canada maintenance facilities for the Winnipeg area into a local election issue.

Conservative officials said they believe that Mr. Richardson who won the 1972 election by about 8,000 votes over his Conservative opponent, can be beaten this year.

After Mr. Trudeau, accompanied by the defence minister, stole Mr. Stanfield's local thunder, the Tory leader told a crowd that packed a near 2,500 seat school auditorium in Mr. Richardson's constituency:

"This has been a very popular city today (Thursday)," he then expressed wonderment about what would happen today.

Mr. Stanfield said the government announcement of aerospace jobs was vague and needed clarifying.

But he said the Liberals have backed down on pledges made at the western economic opportunities conference to support decentralization of government.

He said he can see no reason why all Air Canada maintenance should be done in Montreal. He was aware that Air Canada did not want to decentralize its maintenance operations, but added that corporations, economics must not be the only concern. There also was the economy of the regions and the unity of the country.

Mr. Stanfield also pledged a conservative government to reduring taxes for the low-income earner at an early session of Parliament to be called shortly after the election.

The tax cut would be part of the over-all Conservative inflation-fighting policy, the major step of which would be an increase in personal incomes and prices freeze for a maximum of 90 days.

No Worse Than Others Trudeau Says of Self

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — An attentive crowd in this northern Saskatchewan community listened to an introspective Pierre Trudeau Thursday night as the prime minister wound up a busy day of campaigning that included an unexpected stop in Winnipeg.

"Nobody is asking you to like Trudeau," he told about 1,000 persons standing in a chairless high school auditorium. "I appeal to you to judge me not as a person but to think of the country we are living in and the times we are living in."

He asked voters in Saskatchewan—where the Liberals took only one of 14 ridings in the 1972 election—to look beyond his personality and judge the performance of the Liberal team.

"This guy Trudeau is just part of the Liberal team. He is no worse than any of the others."

The overflow crowd, which also watched his address on closed-circuit television in rooms adjoining the auditorium, was receptive, applauding the prime minister readily and frequently.

Many of the crowd had stood for more than an hour, waiting for him to arrive aboard a small private aircraft from Saskatoon, where he had left his chartered DC-9 jetliner.

"Ask yourself," he urged the audience. "Has this government been bad to you? Haven't you had, by and large, a government that has come to grips with the problems it had to face"?

Mr. Trudeau ripped into his opposition, criticizing the Progressive Conservative proposal for temporary income and price controls and the New Democratic Party for "capping out" in the 29th Parliament that was dissolved May 9 when the NDP withdrew the support that had maintained the minority Liberals in office for 18 months.

Aiming directly at the rural vote in this region, he said frozen prices would mean farmers' costs would increase because fixed selling price would be frozen. This had been proved in the United States, where farmers had to destroy chickens because of frozen prices.

He said the Conservatives support decentralization of not only government departments but, where possible, Crown corporations such as Air Canada and even the CBC.

Lewis Sees Blackmail

Cut in Oil Exploration Hit

EDMONTON (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis has accused the oil industry of using political blackmail to influence the July 8 federal election.

In his toughest speech yet in the campaign, Mr. Lewis said Thursday that decisions by Aonoco Canada Ltd. of Calgary and Texaco Canada Ltd. of Toronto to cut back petroleum exploration activity are a "direct challenge to our political autonomy."

The companies, together with others like Atlantic Richfield Ltd., who have expressed plans for similar exploration cutbacks, took the decision in protest over federal budget proposals to end royalty concessions now given them.

The action shows how rich, powerful and secure the oil-industry felt, Mr. Lewis said. They were able to "cease production at a time when all companies have been telling the public the rush for new energy supplies was essential if supply was to be adequately maintained."

Aonoco and Texaco could turn around and do the exact opposite when they wanted to "squeeze the people of Canada . . . to frighten them . . . when they want to blackmail them."

The announcement by Aonoco, a subsidiary of giant Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, showed "to what lengths they are prepared to go to their attempts to help maintain the strangle-hold the foreign multi-national corporations have had on our oil and gas resources."

The speech was the first by the 66-year-old NDP leader in which he supported his campaign theme that large companies are actually "monstrous private governments" which have been given virtually unchecked power under Liberal or Conservative governments.

Oil Firms Postpone Spending

TORONTO (CP) — Texaco Canada Ltd. reaffirmed Thursday its decision to suspend planned 1974 spending because of uncertainty over proposed federal tax measures. Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., a smaller firm, has also made a similar decision.

Together, the decisions appear destined to become an issue in the campaign for the July 8 federal election although two oil company presidents and a cabinet minister said they would be regretable.

Other companies declined comment Thursday but several said earlier they will have to re-evaluate spending plans if the Liberal budget proposals which take effect when Parliament was dissolved are re-introduced after the election.

In both the Texaco and Amoco cases not all spending is being deferred. Many projects are impossible to defer and others, Texaco said, would involve a penalty if suspended. Texaco, for instance, is proceeding with a planned $400-million refinery at Nanticoke, Ont. Neither company gave a total cost of the work being deferred.

Texaco's capital spending during 1973 totalled about $21 million and this year's annual meeting was told by President John Mingay that the 1974 outlay for exploration and producing "will be about double the amount spent for this purpose in 1973."

R. G. Reid, president of Imperial Oil Ltd. and J. F. Bookout, president of Shell Canada Ltd., said in Ottawa that probable if spending cuts related to petroleum exploration and development became an election issue.

Time To Trim Up

The ultimate spring test: trying on last summer's clothes!

Have you dared yet to put on your bathing suit — or, heaven still, your bikini?

Not many can escape the damages of winter inactivity, especially in a year like this one with little snow, when even skiers couldn't pursue their usual outdoor recreation.

Most of us have a bulge or two to show for our lack of effort — unless you've been clever enough to exercise regularly during the past months.

The many Belleville women who've taken classes at the YMCA from Iris Clancy and Kay Hall are facing the prospect of baring their legs much more cheerfully than the rest of us flabby sluggards.

"Doing exercises with others is really the best way," Mrs. Hall says, and her class agrees.

For those who can't manage to take classes during the day or evening, she suggests sleeping up with two or three friends or members of the family.

"Probably the most important element in exercising is to have music," Mrs. Hall says. "It makes the process enjoyable.

"Once exercising becomes boring, most people give up."

Mrs. Clancy adds, "Women who want to trim one particular area with just one sort of exercise won't be as successful as those who do a full program of related movements.

"You have to remember that everything is connected."

"If you exercise your legs properly you've exercised your whole body. Doing 50 situps is not only boring, it's pointless."

Mrs. Clancy, who takes Mary Moore's weekly yoga classes, incorporates many yoga positions in the classes she gives herself.

There are televised yoga programs to encourage women who want to exercise at home.

* * *

For women who want to get ready for the "skinny" look required by summer clothes, Mrs. Hall has some exercise suggestions.

* * *

Before doing any series of exercises, warm up with movements to loosen the muscles: Swing your arms, shake your wrists, run slowly and lightly with knees raised as high as possible, shake your feet, and let your body fall over like "a rag doll" after stretching. These techniques get your blood circulating and you'll feel like tackling some more strenuous activity.

* * *

"I always remind people to hold their tummies in while exercising," says Mrs. Hall, "because if, you don't keep those muscles taut, you could build up a very solid 'pot' with the same exercises that can trim you.

"Just pull your stomach in wherever you think of it, several times a day, while you're washing dishes, waiting for the bus or walking. That action alone will help to build muscle control."

* * *

Keeping your arms at shoulder level, touch your hands together across your chest, and push your elbows back. Do this several times, and hold the position for a few moments. Don't jerk your arms back or you might pull a muscle. This exercise is good for the upper back and neck, and helps prevent that unsightly "dowager's hump" that comes with overweight and inactivity.

* * *

Standing on one foot, bring the other knee up tight to your stomach, and hold for a few seconds. This is a good trimming exercise for your upper legs.

* * *

Legs apart and hands on hips, bounce your torso down toward the floor, gently without jerking. This is a nice way of loosening the muscles of your spinal region that need to be supple in order to do other exercises.

"The looser you are, the less tired you get," Mrs. Hall says.

* * *

Lying on the floor, either on your back or your side, do scissor kicks with your legs, or the old "bicycling" movement, but with your legs only inches off the floor. This helps strengthen your abdominal muscles, and is good for your legs as well.

* * *

Mrs. Clancy suggests some ways in which you can prepare your body for the outdoor season.

"Keep your body beautiful while doing exercises, "Mrs. Clancy says. "The point is to move into a position and hold it, rather than to aim for speed or sweaty exhaustion.

"You should feel good while you do, yoga-type 'movements."

* * *

* * *

Still sitting, bend forward over one outstretched leg, and grasp your knee. Slowly bounce your torso down over that leg, getting as near the floor as you can. Keep your head up, and smile!

* * *

Still in the same position, bend your body sideways over your right outstretched leg, putting the right arm on the floor along the leg, and arching the left arm over your head to touch your toes. If you can't accomplish this feat, don't worry. The point is that you are trying, and in trying you make your muscles work for you.

* * *

Lying on your side, lift your upper leg as far up in the air as you can. Grasp it as near the ankle as you can, and pull it slowly toward you. Hold this position for as long as is comfortable. Repeat, using the opposite leg.

* * *

On your knees, bend your body backwards holding your right arm in the air behind you, and using your left hand to hold on to your left ankle. Repeat using the opposite arm.

* * *

Standing with your legs apart, put your hands together behind your neck, and bend over, touching alternate knees with your elbows (right elbow to left knee, etc.), twisting your waist as you do so.

* * *

Here's a smattering of exercising advice from both instructors.

Do your exercises enthusiastically, and keep your body firm as you move.

Breathe deeply while you exercise, and stop now and again to fill your lungs with air.

When you do arm movements, you should be able to feel the muscles along your side "pull", but it shouldn't hurt.

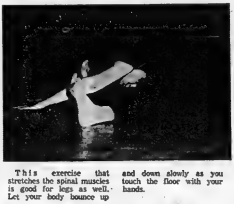
When you move from one room to another in the house, walk on tip toes to pull your leg muscles taut...then try walking on your heels, then on the outside of your feet, then on the inside of your feet. All these techniques help make your calf and ankle muscles supple and are good for your feet.

If there are stairs in your home, run up and down them instead of walking. Lift your knees high as you do so, and breath deeply.

And, as if you don't know, you won't see any improvement unless you also limit your eating habits at the same time as doing the exercises daily. Once a week just won't do any good.

Increase the number of times you do each movement every day. Your limit should be set by your common sense—overdoing exercise can strain muscles rather than train them.

If you can, do your routines in front of a mirror. It will allow you to see whether you're doing them well—and it will also keep you reminded of those winter bulges that need removal!



Do your push-ups outside together, like these four exercisers at the YMCA.

Kay Hall demonstrates the "fire hydrant" exercise. From a kneeling position, stretch one leg out, then fold it in to the body, knee forward, keeping the leg parallel to the floor. Do this three or four times.

Iris Clancy shows how adept you can become at the side-stretch if you practise every day. Don't let your body twist forward.

This exercise that stretches the spinal muscles is good for legs as well. Let your body bounce up and down slowly as you touch the floor with your hands.

Here's a yoga position that takes some skill. Grasping your hands behind your back, stretch your arms right out behind you and bend over, raising your arms as high as you can to touch your knee with your forehead.

FIRE DEPARTMENT FAME

"Everybody loves fire engines." — Samuel A. Tower.

* * *

Today we are honored to present to all interested readers an open invitation extended by Belleville Fire Chief Leo Culhane:

"The public is most welcome to visit the Belleville Fire Department Station at any time. Our staff will be happy to show individuals or groups of people all equipment pertaining to fighting fire. We will gladly provide transportation if needed."

This is indeed an excellent opportunity to gain insight into a community facility which exists soley for its protection — yet rarely thought of, except in time of trouble.

Did you know that:

— A group of citizens banded together to form a voluntary fire station in 1836, when Belleville was incorporated as a village. The honorary membership list include such names as Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir John Taylor, Mr. H. Corby.

— By 1860 there were two fire companies: Number One Moira Fire Company stationed near what is now Victoria Park. Number Two Moira Fire Company which was by the Upper Bridge.

—Fire reels were wound on a two wheeled vehicle that was pulled by two or four men.

—The cause of most fires today is carelessness. Especially from smoking. Says Fire Chief Leo Culhane: "Our great plea is; if you smell smoke at any time (remember six minutes is the average time before death claims a victim of a mattress of fire and smoke-filled) — call us, regardless of time, day or night. That is what we are here for. We are a staff of 18 best-trained men in the cause of fire fighting in Canada.

"Do get to know your Fire Department; we are your greatest friend and ally both in time of trouble."

England demonstrated its gratitude for its fire-fighters recently by issuing commemorative stamps. These are intended to bring to mind one of its greatest disasters, and the steps taken to insure it would never again happen. Children more than three centuries later still chant: "London's burning! London's burning! Bring bilber more water!

Due to the mistake by The Intelligencer in the April 26th publication of the Easter special we advertised, we are extending our one week special on the "Fisher" pictured above.

Everything outside while setting this week-ender is still very wet. I don't know about you girls out there but me, I get very lazy in this kind of weather. I thought a Cliffe hanger would be a bit of variation around the apartment.

Ann Landers

Some Husbands Too Sexy

Dear Ann Landers: You must lead a pretty sheltered life, kiddo. I refer to the letter from the woman whose husband grabbed at her night and day, made suggestive remarks in front of the children and so on. She felt such behavior belonged in the bedroom. Someone else wrote to say a husband who behaves like that probably isn't getting much in the bedroom either.

You agreed that such a wife should "put herself out a little," even if her carnal appetite didn't quite match Randy Andy's.

Now, back to your sheltered life, Ann: Don't you know that there are men who appear to be very respectable and polite, even courtly, but are bearcats behind closed doors? There is no such things "enough" for these animals.

I was married to an insatiable lecher for seven years and finally my doctor advised me to divorce him because he was a sex fiend. So why don't you wake up and smell the coffee!—Free And Thankful . . . .

Dear F. and T.: I'm awake and the coffee smells delicious. That advice was for the millions of people who approximate normalcy. I didn't get the impression that the woman who wrote was married to a sex fiend. When she called him Randy Andy, however, I had a sneaking suspicion that she might be Frigid Brigitte.

Dear Ann Landers: Last weekend my husband and I went to a dinner party in a suburb about 30 miles from our home. We couldn't get our regular babysitter, so we let her provide a 15-year-old neighbor whom she described as "very reliable."

When we arrived home at about 2:00 a.m., the sitter and our 11-month-old child were asleep on the floor in front of the TV.

When we woke her up she was embarrassed and apologetic. The baby was sleeping soundly she didn't even wake when we put her in her own bed. My husband was very upset. He said it's dangerous for young children to spend several hours in front of the TV because of radiation.

Is this true? Please check and let us know.—Concerned Parents

Dear Parents: It would have to be an old color TV and a person would have to sit very close to the set day after day in order to get enough radiation to be harmful. For several years, federal regulations have made it mandatory that all color TV manufacturers enclose the picture tube in a lead-type glass shield.

TV might be harmful to a child's eyes, however, if he consistently sits too close to the screen, and there can be some radiation from a defective set, so sitting close, as a regular habit, should be discouraged.

Dear Ann Landers: I felt sorry for those parents who had to watch their gluttonous PhD son heap enormous portions on his plate and then finish everybody's leftovers. Small wonder he was 120 pounds overweight.

That man's problem is the same as alcoholism, only his weakness is food instead of drink. I had the same illness and learned how to arrest it through Overeaters Anonymous. We find out what's eating us that makes us overeat. I lost 80 pounds in the program and gained my self-respect and peace of mind.

The address of the national headquarters is: Overeaters Anonymous, 3301 Westwood Blvd. 25, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064.

Thanks Ann. You might change a lot of lives today.—New Me.

Dear Yes: Since Overeaters Anonymous has a strong religious tie-in, it might not work for everyone. But I've heard from readers who swear by it. Thanks for writing.

Advice For Parents Of Deaf

By DORIS CLARK

"Treat the child according to his intelligence, not his deafness."

Such is the keynote to the teaching of Dr. Winnifred H. Northcott, consultant for hearing impaired children in Minnesota.

It is her experience that if a deaf child is otherwise completely normal, and with a good nervous system, it is highly likely he will gradually fit into the regular classroom with the children who can hear. Almost all the children do, she says, by the time they have finished elementary grades.

In some cases the child is bright enough and alert enough to integrate with the others even at kindergarten level. In another group they are considered for introduction to the regular classes at around third grade level, "when they are beginning to read inferentially (or meaning) and to develop systematic word attack skills."

If others cannot catch on quite so early, they are usually ready by the sixth grade. Dr. Northcott urges that parents realize that if the child is put in the wrong spot, or at the wrong time, the results can be disastrous. He should not automatically be integrated with the others.

If a deaf youngster is not curious and turned on by school, there is no use pressing him and expecting the unreasonable. He has to be studied, tested and observed, and then suitably placed.

What the parent has to do is send the child off to school with a good breakfast, without emotional troubles, and with a good deal of confidence in him.

The Northcott has this suggestion: Deaf children at the proper age should be encouraged to have their own paper route or go down town alone on the bus. The youngster should be helped to move along the road to independence at a level appropriate to his age, thinking only secondly of his deafness.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, May 31

Aries (March 21-April 19) Some minor discords will arise domestically. They can be smoothed over quickly if both parties are willing to say they are SORRY.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your interests will be split today. That which you are involved with will suffer. Neither interest will get the proper attention.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) All your good resolutions regarding budgeting are likely to go down the pipe. You spend more freely than you should.

Career (June 21-July 22) An outside obligation and your family will both be tugging for your attention today. You will do better to give domestic matters priority.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be reticent about asking another to help with a problem you can't resolve. He'll not think any less of you for it.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take it easy this weekend where your spending is concerned. You are not thinking about material things as practically as you should.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You are overly sensitive today in analyzing the way friends behave toward you. This could lead you to make an issue over nothing.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Give credit where credit is due. If you try to take over the spotlight without acknowledging assistance you will wind up with an angry team-mate.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a bit of impishness in you. This could lead you to look for greener „pastures. Things will get very complicated if you do.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Decisions you make today shouldn't be based upon guesswork. If you are short on facts, allow a little more short time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Tasks requiring complete concentration may be left attempted till later in the day. In the a.m. your attention span is very limited.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You are nowhere near as lucky today as you were yesterday. Don't take risks you shouldn't. Play everything close to the vest.

Soft Contact Lens Have Advantages

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are there any dangers in wearing soft contact lenses, provided all precautions are taken? Are they better for teen-agers than regular contacts?—E.A.B.

Probably no more dangerous than the hard contact lenses, but there are advantages as well as disadvantages.

The soft lens molds to the contour of the eyeball better and is more comfortable, and in some eye conditions, particularly if the cornea is of unusual shape, the soft lenses have a definite usefulness. Your eye specialist would advise you about that—in fact, my advice is to listen to what the specialist tells you rather than insisting that you want a certain type.

It is essential that the soft lenses be sterilized every day, because bacteria have been found either from handling the lenses or from contamination carried in the air.

The soft lenses must be handled most carefully because the very thin covering can be ruptured. They can be lost more easily and be harder to find because of their jelly-like consistency.

Vision may not be as sharp with the soft lens, but the difference is not great.

The soft lens may have to be replaced oftener than the hard type.

But some patients can tolerate the soft lenses better than the hard.

Hence valid arguments for and against. But the soft lenses are newer and improvements are being made constantly. So I repeat: pay attention to your eye specialist's advice.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Did you ever hear of adding an incision in the gall bladder and letting the bile drain? What is the outcome, will it ever heal? Is it just an experiment?—C.B.

Yes, it is commonly done. A horses 200 miles by truck.

In heaven suits always break: finesses always work; and all contracts come home. In this mundane sphere things aren't always that pleasant.

South won the club and promptly played out the ace and king of trumps. East showed out but that didn't worry South. He played his ace and king of hearts. West ruffed, played his queen of trumps and led another club. Somehow or other when the smoke had cleared away, South found that he had managed to salvage only eight tricks from the mess.

Correct play would have brought the contract home in spite of the bad breaks. South should play his ace of hearts; lead a trump to dummy's king and then go back to hearts. West would ruff the second high heart and probably lead a trump. Not that it would matter what he led.

South would be back on lead and play a third heart. East would win and lead anything he wanted. It wouldn't matter. South would get to ruff a heart in dummy to establish his last heart as a winner.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1974

UCS Tries to Head Off United Way Boycott

United Community Services and member agencies will be making an effort to reach sitting members of the Quinte District Labor Council with information concerning the financial operation of the 12 United Way participating agencies.

This action follows a decision made during a joint YMCA-UCS meeting Thursday called to discuss the threatened boycott of the United Way by organized labor.

President Virginia O'Rourke and other UCS directors are concerned that any vote to okay an organized campaign among unions to discourage United Way donations would severely damage the operating ability of volunteer agencies.

Earlier this month, a notice of motion tendered by QDLC vice-president Ian Reilly called for an organized publicity drive to discourage contributions. If a motion to that effect is expected to be put to the vote of QDLC members June 4.

Thursday, Mrs. O'Rourke said she is concerned that at the time of a vote on the motion "everyone is fully informed".

"I want to make sure that a decision is based on all the facts," she said.

Through letters to The Intelligencer editor, some paid advertising, and personal telephone calls to labor council sitting members, United Way agencies hope to spread the word of their financial affairs and the service each provides.

"Double-dipping", the practice of the YMCA objected to by Mr. Reilly, is the only manner in which some United Way agencies can keep their heads above water, it was said Thursday.

Victorian Order of Nurses (VON) vice-president, Rex Hunter, said his organization is now running on a deficit budget. The group depends upon both UCS and city grant funding to keep its head above water.

The YMCA is in similar straits. Y executive member Frank Heiss said the city grant is used to offset the cost of providing swimming to the general public, he said.

"Without this grant we couldn't provide public swimming at the cost that we now do," he said. In answer to Mr. Reilly's charge that the YMCA does not pay taxes, Mr. Heiss said the east end facility is taxed in excess of schools.

Members of the YMCA, UCS, VON and the Central Volunteer Bureau attended Thursday's meeting, originally called to provide two QDLC sitting members with information to bring before the June 4 meeting.

QDLC executive members, president Gordon Dafoe and the vice-president Reilly were not present at Thursday's meeting. Both had received invitations to partake in the information sharing procedure. Two other QDLC members, Jim Wiseman, also, a UCS director, and Jim Campbell, a YMCA board member were present.

Mrs. O'Rourke said that in talking to Mr. Reilly she assured him that, if passed, his motion would be destructive.

"Many agencies would be totally wiped out," she said, "while others would experience severe curtailment of programming."

Ellis Presses for UIC Inquiry

Jack Ellis, MP, Hastings, was guest speaker Wednesday evening at the nominating convention for Wellington-Gray-Dufferin-Waterloo where incumbent Perrin Beatty was unanimously chosen Progressive Conservative candidate for the July 8 federal election.

In his address Mr. Ellis pointed out that while inflation is the number one issue before the public this election, one of the major contributors to this problem is the uncontrolled cost and mismanagement of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. Mr. Ellis stated that while other departments of government were before their respective committees for scrutiny that of the UIC was not allowed to come before committee.

"I have discussed the matter with Mr. Stanfield who has also asked for an inquiry in the past, and have been assured that a Progressive Conservative government will immediately order a full inquiry."

Even though unemployment is decreasing the cost of the Unemployment Insurance Program is still climbing.

"Figures show the number of claims received for February 1974 to be 10 per cent higher than in 1973, with those approved 8 per cent higher. Weekly benefits are up to $75. over $68. this time last year and $61. the previous year.

The number of persons receiving benefits who voluntarily quit work is still 26 per cent of the total," said Mr. Ellis.

Ballet Students Pass Examinations

Twenty-two students from the Quinte Dance Centre were successful in passing Cecchetti examinations held in Belleville May 11. Miss Carole Chadwick from the National Ballet in Toronto was the examiner.

Eleven of the students achieved passing grade, eight were given credit standing, qualifying great promise, and three received a commend, signifying rare artistic ability.

A grade 1 student, Andrew Pane, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pane, was offered a scholarship to the summer school of the National Ballet School in Toronto for July.

Quinte Dance Centre is operated by the Belleville branch of the National Ballet Guild, at classes at the 20th Front St. Teacher is former National Ballet dancer Brian Scott. The school had an enrolment of about 100 students this year and will conduct its second summer school during the first two weeks of July.

Summer school students are billeted in Belleville homes during the term of the school. About 50 students are expected, among them people from Kingston, Ottawa and Marysburg.

Classes at the dance centre end June 8 and a closing performance is planned.

Students who passed the examinations were: grade 1, Susan Terrill, Elizabeth Hurley, Barbara Wilson, Anne Lacombe, Lori Holmes, Donna Kelleher, Andrew Pape, Elizabeth Hall and Suzanne Morris; grade 2, Debbie Robson, Kathleen Holland, Audra Boyle, Mary Paterson, Tracy McNicol, Lisa Kelly, Joann Morris and Kathy Wagenville; grade 3, Carolyn Fisher and Leila Krzanowski; grade 4, Laura Bayne, Donna Kelly and Kelly Patterson.

Scout Parade On Sunday

On Sunday the city's scouting movement will be out in strength as the annual scout parade gets under way.

Cubs, boy scouts, brownies and girl guides and perhaps even the newest scouting venture, the beavers will be out in full force.

The parade leaves the A and P parking lot at 1:30 p.m., and heads down Pinnacle Street, turns onto Front Street goes up Bridge Street turns onto Church Street and winds up on the front grounds of the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

While there at around 2:30 that afternoon there will be a church service outside. In the event of rain it will be held in the auditorium at BCI.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending Friday at 8 a.m.:

Thursday, May 23, grass fire along CPR tracks southwest of Sidney Street, no damage, 5:49 p.m.

Thursday, May 23, garbage fire in street at White's Meat Market, 181½ McAnsney, no damage, 7:16 p.m.

Thursday, May 23, 7:41 p.m. grass fire along CNR right of way near Coleman Street, no damage.

Parent Training Will Resume in

Parents now have recourse to training to help them do their job more efficiently.

"Everybody blames parents for the troubles of youth, or the troubles that youth appears to be causing society, but no one ever trains parents for this demanding job," says Mary Radden, and instructor

Tweed Priest A Monsignor

TWEED — The Reverend C.E. Baker, pastor of St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church, Tweed, was recently named a Monsignor by Pope Paul VI, according to word received from the Vatican last week.

Father (Dean) Baker was ordained in 1924 and has served as a parish priest for 50 years.

Father Baker was born on Wolfe Island, near Kingston. Following education in local schools, he attended Regiopolis College, Loyola College an the Grand Seminary in Montreal.

After his ordination, he was assistant pastor in St. Columban Church, Cornwall, for five years, pastor at St. Michael's Church, Belleville, until 1956; pastor at nearby Sioco, and pastor at Tweed since 1958.

Speaking this week, of his new name Monsignor Baker states he was grateful that he had been given the strength and good health that enabled him to carry on the work of a parish priest for half a century.

Window Broken

Vandals are said to have broken a window, valued at $5, on the north east side of Moira Secondary School.

Police discovered the broken window while making a patrol of the area around 2:05 a.m. today.

Course Fall

In Parent Effectiveness Training.

Mrs. Radden and her husband Don teach the course to a group of parents one night a week at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The eight-week course is based on a book, Parent Effectiveness Training by Dr. Thomas Gordon and on his training program. Mr. and Mrs. Radden learned of PET from a friend and attended a workshop in Toronto for training as instructors. The course they gave this year is their first.

"Most people still raise their children the way their parents raised them, the same way their parents raised them, and so on for many generations," says Mrs. Radden.

PET is a "no-lose system for resolving all conflicts between parents and their youngsters. It replaces the two traditional child-raising methods of the 40's and all ways losing (the strictness school) or the parent always losing (the permissive school).

PET believes neither side should lose, and teaches skills that prevent it from happening. It also teaches openness, honesty and responsiveness to needs, both parental and child's. During the course parents learn how to talk to their children effectively and to listen accurately to their children's talk.

The course consists of 24 hours of classroom instruction and home reading and testing assignments. The nominal fee covers the cost of Dr. Gordon's book, the workbook and materials.

Nine people took the first course. They included a single kindergarten teacher, a foster parent, a step-parent, one husband and wife team and several mothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Radden parents of three children, say PET is probably more effective when parents begin the program while their children are young, but it is also helpful in dealing with adolescents.

"The main thing," says Mrs. Radden, "is that parents no longer really need to feel guilty."

Plans are now under way for a new course, starting Sept. 12.

Centennial Ideas Wanted

Plans for Belleville's biggest birthday celebration, its centennial in 1978 are currently under way.

George Thompson, president of the city's Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the centennial committee, outlined the role that the committee is involved in.

During a meeting of the chamber at Glanmore House on Wednesday — the first time the chamber has met here — Mr. Thompson explained that the committee was set up to help those groups thinking about undertaking a project for centennial.

"We are trying to show those people planning to take part in the centennial, such as service clubs, what direction to take," he said.

"We are trying to make people aware that there is going to be a centennial in 1978 and help them in any projects they might want to do," said Mr. Thompson.

The committee is acting as a general public relations for the centennial. We will be involved in such areas as the commodities for the centennial, he said.

Already, public support in the form of newspaper ads seeking suggestions for projects has been attempted in the last few months.

Anyone with ideas for celebrating Belleville's 100th birthday is welcome to put them on paper and send them into Chamber of Commerce offices on Front Street.

Forklift Drivers Compete Saturday

The second annual industrial forklift truck competition takes place this Saturday morning, May 25 starting at 9.30, at the Dick Ellis Plant.

There is no charge for this annual competition sponsored by the Prince Edward-Hastings section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association. About 40 competitors representing approximately 15 area companies will take part.

Objectives of the day-long competition are the safe and efficient use of lift trucks, developing skills of safe driving, load handling techniques and lift truck capabilities.

The obstacle course should provide a challenge and includes truck inspection, pallet pickup and stacking, tight manoeuvring, caution sign observance, straight line driving, offset pallet drop, rack stacking and completion time factor.

The final evaluation of credit points earned by each contestant will determine trophy and award winners.

The IAPA is connected with the Workmen's Compensation Board and the safety of plant and local activity work is done by unpaid volunteers.

Highland Weekend Stars Fort Guard

If the sound of pipes and drums and the pageantry and colour of the Fort Henry Guard stirs you, then get set for the 5th Kinsmen Annual Quinte Highland Weekend June 22 and 23.

The weekend starts with a parade down Front Street Saturday night June 22. The parade starts at 7:30 p.m. at the A and P parking lot and terminates at the Armory.

When the parade is over, there will be a military tattoo and retreat performed by CFB Trenton Pipes and Drums and Trenton Brass and Reed Band, at the Armory.

At 9 that night the Tartan Ball gets under way at the Armory. There will be a full orchestra, the Commodores, for your dancing and listening pleasure.

Tickets for the Ball are $8 a couple and are available at the Shoppette Stores, at McKnight's Variety and at Davis - Electric - Lighting and Boutique in Trenton.

On Sunday at the Fairgrounds starting at 1:30 p.m., the Highland Tattoo will feature the Fort Henry Guard. There will be 10 pipe bands from Ontario and parts of U.S.A. competing for prizes and trophies.

The Guard, complete with their red coats, will give their full performance as done at Fort Henry in Kingston. Their mascot, a goat, will also be there. This is the second year the guard has been here.

Tickets for the Tattoo are $1.50 for adults, and 50 cents for children.

Foxboro Girl Hurt in Crash

A 12-year-old Foxboro girl is in satisfactory condition in Belleville General Hospital with multiple abrasions and head injuries today after she was knocked off her bicycle by a car driven by Lionel L. (Mudcat Laree) just east of Lake Street, Foxboro.

Officers of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police say that Sharon McCormik, 12, of RR 1 Foxboro, was knocked from her bicycle around 4:30 p.m. yesterday when she collided with an a westbound car driven by Steven Legg, 20, of RR 2 Shannonville.

Damage resulting from the accident has been estimated at $100.

Break-in Attempted

Belleville police report that the owner of Bob's Sport Shop on South Front Street, discovered that thieves attempted to break into his store some time after 12:30 a.m. Wednesday.

The store owner discovered that someone had tried to force open an outer door at the west-rear of the building when he returned to work Thursday at 8:17 a.m.

Trenton Woman Acquitted

A County Court jury, composed of seven women and five men, found Celesta Morrison, 29, of Trenton not guilty of a charge of possessing a weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace at the conclusion of her trial in County Court here yesterday.

Mrs. Morrison was charged with having threatened to stab her husband and two Trenton police officers with a 12-inch kitchen knife during a domestic dispute at her home last July 22.

During the one-day trial, the court was told that two Trenton police officers, PC Garry Davis and PC Michael Plante, responded to a call to intervene in a domestic dispute at the Morrison home around 10.58 p.m. July 22.

When the police officers entered the Morrison's South Street apartment they found Mrs. Morrison holding a kitchen knife in her hand and yelling at her husband. The officers testified that Mrs. Morrison told them to get her husband out of their apartment before she killed him.

While PC Davis was trying to talk Mrs. Morrison into putting the knife away, she rushed at the constable and struck at him with the knife.

PC Davis managed to disarm Mrs. Morrison, subdued her and arrested her.

Both PC David and PC Plante testified that Mrs. Morrison was drunk at the time of the incident.

A 16-year-old Hamilton girl, who had been visiting the Morrisons testified that both Mr. and Mrs. Morrison had spent approximately six hours drinking liquor in a Trenton hotel prior to becoming involved in a fist fight that ended in Mrs. Morrison's arrest.

Mrs. Morrison told the court that she had drunk more than 12 ounces of liquor in addition to taking two different types of medicines before the got into the fight and argument with her husband.

A Kingston psychiatrist, Dr. Robert John McCaldron, told the jury that the combination of the medicines Mrs. Morrison had taken and the alcohol she had consumed would have had the effect of greatly increasing her intoxication and could result in a case of alcoholic amnesia.

Mr. Morrison testified that her recollection of the events leading to her arrest was hazy and limited.

George Bono, Mrs. Morrison's lawyer, argued that his client had threatened both her husband and the police with the kitchen knife but did not have the criminal intent to form the intention to commit a crime, due to her impairment.

The jury returned with its verdict of not guilty after deliberating for 55 minutes.

In discharging Mrs. Morrison, County Court Judge W. S. Lane warned her of the seriousness of the incident and suggested that she not drink so much in the future.

Cleopaterer

Ancient Egypt was never like this. But then again students from St. Michael's Academy weren't around then either. The occasion is the presentation of their drama club called Hits From Bye Gone Days. One of the innumbers of the production is called Cleopaterer. And cast as the Egyptian temptress is 13-year-old Philip Flagler who makes the most of the situation with a steady supply of helpers. The production runs tonight starting at 8 p.m.

Steve Rogers Wins Seventh In Montreal Pea-Souper

MONTREAL (AP) — Right-hander Steve Rogers, with relief help from Chuck Taylor in the ninth inning, won his seventh game in nine decisions Thursday night as Montreal Expos edged Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 in National League play.

Rogers breezed through the Pirates batting order in the early going, striking out six of the first nine men he faced, while his team-mates got three runs off Bruce Kison.

Rogers was replaced by Taylor after giving up a single to Al Kirkpatrick and a double to Al Oliver.

Kirkpatrick and Oliver eventually scored. Kirkpatrick coming home on Kingman's single and Oliver on Richie Hebner's double-play ball.

Taylor's save was his fifth of the season.

Ron Hunt led off the Expos first with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Larry Lintz. Willie Davis then hit a tailing line drive just beyond the grasp of a lunging Willie Stargell in left field for a triple to score Hunt.

After Ken Singleton walked, Kison slipped while making his delivery and was charged with a balk, allowing Davis to score from third.

Montreal added another run in the fourth when Boots Day led off with a base hit, moved to second on a wild pitch, advanced to third on a single by Jim Cox and scored on an infield out by Barry Foote.

With the Expos ahead 3-0 and Rogers holding a comfortable edge over his opponents, Fox rolled into Jarry Park and began to have bizarre consequences on the game.

With one out in the fifth inning, Davis lofted a high pop fly into short left field which Pirates shortstop Frank Taveras finally spotted and caught just before it hit the ground.

Montreal was not as lucky in the next inning when, with two out and a man on base, Oliver hit a routine third-out fly in left center which neither Davis nor Day could see.

It fell in for a triple, scoring the run.

At that point, time was called and a 56-minute weather delay ensued.

When play resumed Rogers put his second pitch in Stargell's ribs, the ball then caromed into the dirt and Oliver scored on the wild pitch to narrow the Montreal lead to one.

The Expos came back with a single run in the bottom of the inning when they tagged relief pitcher Bob Moose for three singles and a double and added a fifth run in the seventh when Lintz walked, stole second and moved to third on Manny Sanguillen's throwing error to score on a sacrifice fly by Davis.

In American League games, California Angels beat Kansas City Royals 3-1, Chicago White Sox whipped Texas Rangers 9-6 and Cleveland Indians blanked Baltimore Orioles 2-0.

In the National League Pittsburgh Pirates defeated San Francisco Giants 6-4, Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Diego Padres 4-0, Cincinnati Reds 5-4 in 13 innings, The Chicago Cubs-at-New York Mets game was postponed because of rain.

Scott's bloop triple capped a two-run seventh-inning rally that lifted Milwaukee over Detroit 3-2.

Rookie Robin Yount reached first on an error by third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez with one out in the seventh, and stole second for the key run. Yount stolen base of the game. Dave May singled home Yount with two outs and scored the decisive run when Scott's pop fly fell between three Tigers near the right field line.

The Brewers added three runs in the eighth on a walk, Porter's RBI single, Bob Coluccio's double and a bases-loaded walk to Dave Duncan.

The Tigers had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the seventh when Jim Northrup singled, advanced to second on a passed ball and scored on a two-out double by Rodriguez.

Don Money doubled to start a two-run Brewer first inning against loser Joe Coleman, 8-3.

Gaylord Perry pitched a three-hitter and George Hendrick singled home the only run he needed, leading Cleveland over Baltimore.

Both Cleveland runs off Jim Palmer, 2-5, were unearned with Hendrick's sixth-inning single snapping a 21-inning scoreless string for the Indians.

Perry, winning his seventh straight game since losing his baseball season opener, checked Baltimore on singles by Bobby Reinbach in the third inning and Bobby Grich in the fourth and Brooks Robinson's double in the fifth.

Bobby Valentine hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the seventh inning, scoring Ellie Rodriguez and capping a two-run rally that gave Nolan Ryan and California its victory over Kansas City.

The Angels scored their third run in the eighth on Rodriguez' RBI bouncer

Carlos May, Ed Herrmann and Ron Santo provided the key hits in three different rallies leading Chicago over Texas.

The Rangers knocked out Chicago starter Bill Melton with three runs in the first inning but the White Sox came back to tie the game in their half of the first inning with May contributing a two-run double.

The White Sox broke the tie with a two-run fourth...Herrmann tripled home one run and scored another on a single by Bucky Dent.

Texas slugger Jeff Burroughs hit his 11th homer of the year to drive in his American League leading 46th run of the baseball season. It also marked the 10th straight game in which he has driven home a run, leaving him one short of the major league record shared by Babe Ruth and Mel Ott.

Money Big Issue

CFL Strike Still Possible

TORONTO (CP) — Prospects of a players' strike in the Canadian Football League diminished Thursday following a meeting between player representatives and management.

However, a strike still could take place if money matters are not resolved.

George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders, president of the CFL Players Association, said: "We haven't settled anything, but we are closer on some things."

"The problem area is still financial, of course. The pre-season meeting of general managers next week," said Reed.

Kimball said: "I'm optimistic that we are working and attempting to find a solution to the problems and I'm optimistic that if we apply ourselves we'll avoid a strike."

Kimball said he will report on the meeting to the CFL's semi-annual meeting June 6 and another meeting with players will be held as soon as possible after the semi-annual meetings are over."

Reed said the association is seeking a minimum salary of $11,000 a year and would like a veteran to receive $17 a day for 44 days of training camp, compared with $10 last year.

For pre-season games the players want $150 a game for each veteran compared with $50 last season.

It is also asking that players on the Grey Cup winner in 1974 receive $6,000 each and $7,500 in 1975. Last year the winners got $3,000 each.

For the losers the association is asking $3,000 in 1974 and $4,000 in 1975. The 1973 losers received $2,000.

Playoff money is also being negotiated, but one of the bigger issues is practice times for Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference.

Both clubs have decided to hold room practices this year. The players don't want them.

"The practice times for the teams has become a major part of our discussions," Kimball said. "The players would like to pushed into the background by us, but it's in the forefront now."

One of the unique parts of Canadian football has been that players have been able to hold jobs in the off season. Still being a professional football players Noon practices would end that.

"The players want practices in "is one of the areas that has set Canadian football apart from any other professional sport," said Reed.

"The players personally know how we feel about it and they're going back to talk to their people about that."

"We've presented this problem to general managers at previous meeting, a meeting to be held in Calgary, and at that time it was decided it was an individual club matter," said Kimball. "We've talked further with the players — and I think we have an understanding of how strongly they feel about it.

"It is the intention of the committee in Edmonton. Hopefully we'll have some conclusion that is satisfactory to the players."

CAHA Convention Ends

Senior Hockey Gets Boost

WINNIPEG (CP) — The official section of the 92nd annual Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) convention ground to a halt Thursday with no anticipated formalities completed for the 175 delegates.

As expected, delegates relaxed regulation concerning age limits for junior players, new playoff arrangements for 4-7 ages and intermediates, and developmental programs for minor players.

The major decision at the final session was that inter-mediate clubs be given the right to compete for the Allan Cup title, emblematic of senior hockey supremacy if the intention was declared by July 15.

"There are ratifications to that," said Frank McNamara, Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association president.

"It's a good idea. The members agreed it's a good idea. There are details to be worked out, but I'm sure there will be more clubs in the Allan Cup playoffs next spring than there were this spring."

Barrie Flyers won the Allan Cup final this season, as representative of the Ontario Hockey Association senior circuit. They defeated Cranbrook Royals of British Columbia, representatives of the Western Canada Senior League, to win a final series that resulted in a fourth-all deficit for Barrie.

Delegates also learned that intermediate and senior clubs lost money in their playoffs while junior A and major junior teams showed profits.

"That's one of the reasons we need a change in the structure of senior hockey," said CAHA executive director Gordon Juckes of Ottawa.

"If it's a good hockey—and hockey—believe it's still good hockey—the Allan Cup must be restored to its previous level of acceptance in Canada."

In another development, Delegates completed the formalities of imposing tighter control by officials in the minor ranks, accepted ratification of increasing Junior eligibility to 21 from 20 years as of Dec. 31 this year, and agreed the CAHA, which represents more than 400,000 amateur players must declare its autonomy in dealing with professional organizations.

Thunder Bay already has proposed travel subsidies to the existing 12 teams in the major junior circuit.

Hal Jones of Regina, president of the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association, said discussion "have been held regarding a fourth team in the Memorial Cup round-robin competition.

In previous years, representatives from each of the Ontario, Quebec and Western Canadian hockey leagues have played a three-game round-robin series.

Smith Sabres Coach

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Floyd Smith, a veteran National Hockey League player, became coach Thursday of Buffalo Sabres.

His selection to succeed Joe Crozier, now general manager of Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association, was announced at a news conference.

Smith, 39—the first captain of the Sabres when they joined the NHL four years ago—has been coach of Cincinnati Swords, Buffalo's farm team in the American League, since midway through the 1971-72 season.

At that time, Crozier was called up from Cincinnati to take over the Sabres after firing Punch Imlach as coach and general manager, suffered a heart attack before the end of the WHA post when his contract expired April 1.

Smith, who played a total of 614 NHL games, came to the Sabres after terms with Boston, New York Rangers, Montreal and Toronto.

Asked whether it might be difficult for him to coach Buffalo since he once was a player of some of the Sabres, Smith replied:

"I don't really know if it would hurt me or help me. The only players now on the club who were with the Sabres when I played are Gerry Meehan, Gil Perreault, Rene Robert, Jim Crosier and Steve Atkinson.

"I don't think any of them are the kind to give me trouble. I think it probably will help because I know individuals."

Smith, of Perth, Ont., said Imlach, who was fired as general, said he had Rick Dudley, Larry Carriere, Jim Schoenfeld, Mike Robitaille and Larry Mickey with him. All are Sabres' regulars.

Until Imlach's heart attack, Smith served as his assistant and often conducted practices when Imlach was not feeling well.

At Cincinnati, Smith led the Swords into the Calder Cup playoffs in 1971-72 and won the cup the following year. His team lost to Hershey in the first round of the playoffs last season.

Green Light For Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A Superior Court judge has settled one of the disputes at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and Johnny Rutherford is making plans to dispose of another one.

Judge Frank Symmes ended two days of hearings Thursday by throwing out a $1 million lawsuit against the Speedway, an action that could have held up the Indianapolis 500 race Sunday.

The suit filed by several owners of cars that failed to the line a week ago when qualifying trials ended, had asked to re-open qualifications. Judge Symmes ruled, in effect, that the car owners must exhaust all avenues of appeals through chairmen of the United States Auto Club before they will have grounds for legal action.

In effect, the court denied a temporary injunction that would have held up the race and, at the same time, allowed the drivers to keep their trains for $1 million in damages to be carried over.

With Judge Symmes having opened the way for Sunday's 12 a.m. EDT start, Rutherford took off the 3½-mile oval Thursday and drove his McLaren-Offy on a quick lap of 192.424 miles an hour.

"I proved several things to myself and, I hope, to others," said the 36-year-old from Ft. Worth, Tex.

"One is that I can run as fast as anyone here. The other is that I might have won the front row pole position if I had been given a chance."

One of the disputes at the Speedway this year involved a first qualifying day accident involving Rutherford and Al Unser.

The two veterans broke the engines in their cars during a morning practice session, and neither made it to the qualifying line in time to try for a pole position that day.

Jets Sale Indefinite

WINNIPEG (CP) — A group of Winnipeg businessmen attempting to purchase the Winnipeg Jets franchise in the World Hockey Association have been given until July 1 to raise the necessary money.

Jets president Ben Hatskin said following a meeting with the group Thursday that the present owners of the club—Hatskin and the Sinclair family—have agreed to give the group another five weeks.

"I'm pretty sure they will be successful," Hatskin said. He added that if the group is not, the club will probably be sold to another interest.

"I'm not prepared to say Graham said the group will people cannot come up with the money, but if they don't then the Jets could be long gone."

Bob Graham, spokesman for the local group, said they are confident they can raise $600,000 by the deadline which would be the first two payments on the $2.3-million purchase.

Graham said the group will conduct two basic campaigns to raise the funds. One will approach large businesses and individuals to try to obtain "interest-free founders' loans."

Delegates completed the formalities of imposing tighter control by officials in the minor ranks, accepted ratification of increasing Junior eligibility to 21 from 20 years as of Dec. 31 this year, and agreed the CAHA, which represents more than 400,000 amateur players must declare its autonomy in dealing with professional organizations.

In another development, Gerry Brisson, general manager and operator of Winnipeg Clubs of the Western Canada Hockey League, made a strong bid for expansion.

He said a Thunder Bay organization had announced intentions of outlining completely a proposal for a franchise at the league's annual meeting June 20 in Victoria.

Thunder Bay already has proposed travel subsidies to the existing 12 teams in the major junior circuit.

Hal Jones of Regina, president of the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association, said discussion "have been held regarding a fourth team in the Memorial Cup round-robin competition.

In previous years, representatives from each of the Ontario, Quebec and Western Canadian hockey leagues have played a three-game round-robin series.

Four QFL Teams Crowd into Second

It appears after a week of play in the new Quinte Ferry ball League that the standings should be fairly close for the remainder of the 25-game season. Last night, Devolin Motors and Bardon Supplies came up with wins to boost them into a second place tie with two other teams.

Devolin was victorious over Howard Wolf Printing by a 2-1 count, while Bardon took a 4-1 decision from Auger's Men's Wear. The wins evened their records at one win and one loss, the same as Howard and—Robert and the Stile Masters.

Rollins Construction has first place in the league after the first week with four points on two wins, while Auger's has yet to gain a point.

Ron Hill was the winning hurler in the Devolin-Printers' game, allowing seven hits. He struck out three and walked the same total.

Bob Ebbet took the loss, giving up only four hits, fanning eight and not issuing a free pass.

Devolin opened the scoring in the game in the first inning, when Terry 'Meagher tripled and scored on an infield error.

Howard and Robert got the run back in the third, with Ebbet crossing the plate. He walked, was sacrificed to second and third, and was driven in by Larry Potter's base hit.

Rick Rostebush scored the winning run for the Mostermen in the fifth, doubling to lead off the inning. He went to third on an infield error, and scored on Tom MacDonald's sacrifice fly.

Meagher's triple was the big swat for the winners, with Rostebush's double the only other extra base hit. Jim Horwood and Hill each added a single to round out the victor's attack.

Bob Parsons had the only extra-base hit for the Printers, a fourth inning double. Potter had a pair of base hits, with singles to Wayne Woods, Dave Skelton, and Ken Genereaux.

The Printers' ace in the relief department, Ebbet struck out five, walked, was sacrificed to second and third, and was driven in by Larry Potter's base hit.

Rick Rostebush scored the winning run for the Mostermen in the fifth, doubling to lead off the inning. He went to third on an infield error, and scored on Tom MacDonald's sacrifice fly.

CP News Roundup

Wage Rise Is Behind Price Jump

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings of about half the country's non-agricultural work force rose by 8.5 per cent between March and March, 1974, while the consumer price index went up by 10.4 per cent.

A preliminary report Thursday for Statistics Canada showed average weekly earnings during March were $179.46 compared with $157.99 in the same month a year ago. The average in February was $168.78 and there was a gain of about one per cent between February and March.

The consumer price index rose by one per cent in March.

The report covers weekly earnings of about four million workers and Statistics Canada gives averages for eight industry sectors.

The highest was $238.76 in construction and the lowest $122.81 in the service sector.

Replacing the average weekly earnings last March and the change from then, 1973, were: Atlantic region, $147.17, up $14.82 or 11.1 per cent; Quebec, $163.86, up nine per cent; Ontario, $174.17, up 6.7 per cent; Prairie region, $184.92, up 10.5 per cent; and B.C., $182.15, up 10.5 per cent.

The figures include workers in forestry, mining, manufacturing, construction, transportation, communications, trade, finance, insurance, real estate and service industries.

Time Lost

OTTAWA (CP) — Productive time lost by industrial work stoppages in Canada was up sharply in the first quarter this year compared to the first quarter of 1973, the federal labor department reported Thursday.

The department said in a statement there were 114 work stoppages involving 84,644 workers in January, February and March this year. The strikes represented 24 man-days lost for every 10,000 worked.

Guard Had Pot

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A former Collins Bay penitentiary guard, 48-year-old Lawrence O'Meara, was sentenced Thursday to a three-month jail term for possessing about 80 grams of marijuana.

O'Meara has resigned from the penitentiary service, a position he held for 7½ years. Previously he was a staff sergeant in the Canadian armed forces.

Offer Made

TORONTO (CP) — The financially troubled Global television network offered 440 unsecured creditors Thursday the choice of 25 cents on the dollar or promissory notes in a last effort to meet its debts.

The offer, to be voted on by the creditors June 4, says that if the terms are refused Global will be bankrupt.

The list of creditors includes equipment firms, designers and architects as well as on-air talent.

Roblin Chosen

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Duff Roblin, a former premier of Manitoba, was nominated Thursday night as the Progressive Conservative candidate for Peterborough riding in the July 8 federal election.

Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner represented the riding in the last Parliament.

The 200-seat hall was filled as Mr. Roblin received the nomination unopposed.

Open Hearings

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's inquiry into hockey violence will begin hearings May 27 in Toronto.

William McMurty, a Toronto lawyer, has been named to head the two-day hearings and a second session slated for June 4.

A brawling playoff game April 16 between Bramalea Blues and Hamilton Red Wings of the Junior B league led to the government's decision to investigate why the Bramalea club withdrew from the series.

Representatives of both clubs and the National Hockey League and the Ontario Amateur Hockey Association are expected to testify.

Get $14,000

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto and North York borough firemen have settled for raises making them the highest paid in Canada. The city firemen received a 10-per-cent increase effective Jan. 1 and five per cent more July 1, bringing their salary to $14,010 for the last six months of 1974. A spokesman said the North York firemen have almost the same settlement for a one-year contract.

15 Cents of Dollar For Food Not Enough

TORONTO (CP) — North Americans will have to accept the fact that the time for spending 15 to 16 cents of every disposable dollar for food is over, W. Galen Weston, chairman of George Weston Ltd., said Thursday.

He told the annual meeting of shareholders that world population will double during the next 25 years and supplies of food will have difficulty keeping up with demand.

As a result of higher food prices, consumer and government pressure on the food industry will increase.

Mr. Weston said operating costs will continue to rise, alarming rates and "management will come under the severest pressure it has ever experienced to generate internal profit improvements."

Inco Is Fined $2,500 For Sulphur Emission

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The International Nickel Company of Canada (Inco) was fined $2,500 Thursday for an Aug. 13, 1972, sulphur dioxide emission in excess of the 250-ton daily limit established by the provincial environment ministry.

Sailor Trapped For 90 Minutes

WYANDOTTE, Mich. (CP) — Off-duty helmsman John Prince was asleep in the forward section of the Canadian tanker Cardinal Thursday when he "was bounced around the room like a ping pong ball."

The Cardinal had just collided with the United States freighter Henry Steinbrenner in the 19-mile-wide passage between Pelee Island and Point Pelee in Lake Erie.

Mr. Prince said he was trapped for 90 minutes "while the boys worked like demons to clear the wreckage away."

"The eight-by-12 cabin shrank to six-by-three," he said.

The 25-year-old sailor was interviewed in his hospital here after he and ordinary seaman Andre Letourneau, 19, of Welland, Ont., were flown ashore from the Cardinal by a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter.

The two were in good condition; Mr. Prince with five cracked ribs, a broken hip and lesser injuries and Mr. Letourneau with cuts and bruises, described as erroneous.

Federal Approval Is Given To Export of Oil Derivatives

OTTAWA(CP) — Cabinet approval of export permits and pipeline construction involving plastic feedstocks from Alberta to Ontario was announced Thursday by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

The announcement brings out into the open a potential conflict between the federal and Alberta governments over how best to develop processing and manufacturing industries based on petroleum.

Involved in the issue is competition between Ontario-based firms and the Alberta government over where petrochemical plants should be located.

Federal and Alberta officials have previously expressed distaste over how many petrochemical plants can be built in Canada, and the government now has moved to back up its convictions.

The move was to approve applications by Dome Petroleum Ltd. for licences to export propane and ethane and by Cochin Pipelines Ltd., a Dome subsidiary, to ship ethylene and light hydrocarbons to Sarnia, Ont. This would involve construction of twin pipelines from Alberta, one ending at Sarnia and the other in the United States.

A related development is a plan by Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. to build a plant at Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., near Edmonton, to process ethane into ethylene, which is a raw material for a variety of plastic products.

Ethane can be made from natural gas or crude oil.

The statement Thursday from Mr. Macdonald gave further indications of support of plans for an ethylene plant at Sarnia.

Petrosar Ltd.'s a consortium in which the main participant is Polysar Ltd. a Crown corporation, plans to build an ethylene plant at Sarnia.

Uranium Mining Hazard Discussed

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, accused the natural resources ministry Thursday of "criminal negligence" in its attitude to-ward uranium miners at Elliot Lake and Bancroft.

Mr. Lewis told the legislature's resources development committee that until recently people were not aware of the health hazards of prolonged exposure to dust in uranium mines.

He said that since 1958 there has been anxiety among miners about silicosis, a debilitating disorder caused by dust in the lungs.

He also provided documentation dating back to 1958 which he urged "shows that everybody was aware, and that extraordinary things were not done in light of that awareness."

No Names Of Kettles Revealed

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller refused Thursday to divulge the brand names of possibly dangerous electric kettles in the wake of charges they could cause lead poisoning.

Mr. Miller said he had a list of names of the kettles found acceptable but said he wanted to make full tests.

Herb Gray, federal minister of consumer affairs, warned Wednesday that Canadians should stop using electric kettles because tests have shown that some leak lead into the water.

Opposition members demanded that Mr. Miller, leader of the New Democratic Party, asked whether the provincial ministry and the federal minister were teaming up in a conspiracy of silence.

"At this point in time, I would like to ensure the tests were fairly done," said Mr. Miller.

The health minister said he had been assured that all manufacturers of kettles had stopped using lead.

Environment Minister William Newman, chief enforcement officer of health for Toronto asked his ministry to conduct tests on kettles.

"There were only nine kettles tested and they were brought from various staff members homes," said Mr. Newman.

Cold Spring Threatens Experimental Bean Crop

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — A cold, wet spring is harming most crops in Wellington County, and may spell the end to one new and experimental crop—the faba bean—which has only been grown in the area for the last two years.

Denis Zeitler, assistant agricultural representative for Wellington County, says that planting delays this spring and a possible low yield at harvest time may discourage local farmers from investing further in the beans.

Mr. Zeitler said recently that the faba bean is a partial substitute for soya beans, and can be used in place of soya-bean meal as feed for swine and poultry. The beans contain a high protein level than most other crops and are edible in an untreated state.

Mr. Zeitler said faba beans require cool conditions, like those found in the Arthur-Guelpha res, providing they are planted early enough in the spring.

Rate Raised

HALIFAX (CP) — The Bank of Nova Scotia announced Thursday an increase in the rate it charges on small summer term loans to 13.5 per cent from 13.25 per cent.

Credibility Lost?

McKeough Likens Papers, Politicians

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Managing editors of Canadian daily newspapers responded to some harsh criticism Thursday by Ontario Energy Minister Darcy McKeough by setting up committee to study a code of ethics for their profession.

The committee will attempt to gather information on how Canadian daily newspapers handle readers' complaints, the policy toward staff taking free trips and receiving gifts, and general behavior in dealing with the public.

At a luncheon of the Canadian Managing Editors' Conference, Mr. McKeough said "it is absurd to think of a newspapers existing primarily to serve the public interest and make a buck."

The publishing and broadcasting corporations are inspired by the business considerations that influence other corporations," he said.

Mr. McKeough, who said he regularly reads six daily newspapers and two weeklies, said "newspapers are sharing the unfortunate experience of the political leader—both of us are losing a considerable amount of credibility."

Mr. McKeough said there are many factors at play in gathering material, writing and printing an article and if a mistake is made, it might hurt the reputation of a citizen.

For the citizen there is very little recourse, he said, "but duck his head and take it."

He told the delegates that just as in the political arena, there is the potential for conflict of interest in the broadcasting and publishing field.

"The politicians have oppose, ing politicians, the media and the public scrutinizing our every act . . . you have no such spur to virtue."

Mr. McKeough suggested the newspaper community would serve society better "if it emulated the pattern of democracy and built viable cr'ides into its system."

During an afternoon work session Mark Harrison, executive editor of the Toronto Star, said there is no justification for newspapers having more rights or privileges than those guaranteed the ordinary citizen.

Mr. Harrison said there is the newspaper business of conflict of interest and suggested that business and financial writers refrain from investing in the stock market.

He told the managing editors that newspapers could improve on their practices in publishing letters from readers.

He said a press council, while not perfect, at least affords some redress to the reader with a complaint.

Nixon Said Crucified

HONG KONG (AP) — Canadian-born press magnate Lord Thomson said today President Nixon was "crucified by American newspapers" in their Watergate coverage "even though subsequent events showed the newspapers were right."

Lord Thomson, publisher of The Times of London, told a Hong Kong Foreign Correspondents' Club luncheon that Nixon "was found guilty by newspapers before he was proven guilty."

"This kind of character assassination is much more difficult in England because British laws provide more safeguards for a man's reputation," he said.

Smaller Areas To Get Local Governments

TORONTO (CP) — The government intends to allow unorganized communities in populations of less than 1,000 to get local governments.

Premier John White told the legislature Thursday that amendments to the Municipal Act would allow improvement districts to become township municipalities with a population of 500.

The present population minimum is 1,000.

"Under the proposed legislation, northern communities would have the opportunity to establish local community councils which would be responsible for fire protection, waste disposal and similar services," he said.

There had been concern, said Mr. White, that the present system of appointed boards for improvement districts was not suitable for communities capable of sustaining local government.

The proposed legislation will be discussed with the Association of Unorganized Municipalities June 13.

Giant of Jazz, Duke Is Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz bandleader and composer Duke Ellington died early today in Columbia Presbyterian Hospital after undergoing treatment for pneumonia. He was 75.

Ellington, who had been in hospital for several months for a respiratory infection that developed into pneumonia, died at 3:10 a.m. EDT, said a hospital spokesman.

Ellington had been unable to attend celebrations for his 75th birthday in New York last month. The celebration brought together 35 jazz groups and soloists in a tribute to the jazz master.

In February, Ellington had returned to Washington, where he grew up, and performed for several hundred inner-city school children and Julie Nixon Eisenhower.

The president's daughter hailed Ellington as "one of my heroes" and brought a letter from her father addressed to "his excellency the Duke of Ellington." The letter from President Nixon proclaimed that "there'll never be another you."

Born Edward Kennedy Ellington, "Duke" was known the world over and was the first jazz musician to receive the French Legion of Honor, an award he was presented in Paris in 1973.

Asked how many countries had given him awards, he replied:

"I never count awards. I only enjoy. I don't even count the bars when I write, do I? Oh, I guess I have to."

Ellington wrote more than 1,000 compositions. Among them are In My Solitude, I Let A Song Go Out of My Heart, Don't Get Around Much Any More, and dozens more.

In later years he poured out a prodigious stream of lugor orchestral pieces, tone poems, sacred works, choral pieces, movie, television and ballet scores, and even an opera or two.

He composed in taxicabs, in restaurants, on buses, and often worked until dawn after playing nightclub dates on his never-ending tours of the world.

"I'm in contact every night with people—live people, listening to my music," he said in the seventh decade of his life. "What reason would I have to retire from the road?"

President Nixon invited him to the White House on his 70th birthday and gave him the highest civilian honor in the United States, the Medal of Freedom.

The Republic of Togo in Africa put his picture on a postage stamp in a 1967 series which also featured Bach, Beethoven and Debussy.

Avant-garde composer Gunther Schuller has called Ellington "certainly the greatest American composer."

Arturo Toscanini commissioned Ellington to write a piece for his NBC Symphony, and other symphony orchestras around the world have played Ellington's music. So has almost every dance band.

In 1965, when he was 66, a Pulitzer Prize jury recommended him for a special award, but the advisory board rejected it.

"Fate is being kind to me," Ellington said. "Fate doesn't want me to be famous too young."

"I work, and I write, and think it," he once said. "My reward is hearing what I've done, and, unlike most composers, I can hear it immediately. That's why I keep these expensive gentlemen with me."

The "expensive gentlemen"—his orchestra—was one of the few big bands to keep working the '40s. More than the place, the orchestra was Ellington's instrument.

Its members were all virtuosos and some of them stayed with him for more than 40 years. He wrote music that let them show their stuff.

The Ellington sound—at first full of "African" growls, bleats, wails and whines—was actually carefully composed, grew more complex and sophisticated with the years. Instrumental choirs would reel off dazzling passages that sounded improvised, but were repeated with few variations.

"I had a big fat argument with a cat out in India," Ellington once said. "He claimed it wasn't improvising unless the whole thing was made up on the spot. I never heard anybody play anything I wanted to hear without any pre-thought, whether it's a week or a half-hour ahead."

Television Awards Announced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore, the free-spirited career girl of The Mary Tyler Moore Show, and Alan Alda, the anti-establishment Hawkeye of M-A-S-H, won Emmys Wednesday as the best comedy stars of the 1973-74 television season.

Telly Savalas, the crime-busting Kojak, and Katharine Learned, the mother on The Waltons, won Emmys as best lead performers in drama series.

Cicely Tyson, who played the 100-year-old woman in the The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, and Hal Holbrook, skipper of The Pueblo, won Emmys as best performers in a special program.

William Holden, making his television debut as the veteran cop in The Blue Knight and Mildred Natwick, the busy amateur detective of The Snoop Sisters, were named best lead actor and lead actress in a limited series.

The Emmy winners were announced at a press gathering at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Under a new and complicated system by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, the winning actors in each category will be announced before the Emmy ceremonies May 28 on NBC-TV.

At that time, the winners in the four categories of best actor will complete against each other for actor of the year.

The other winners—such as the programs selected as this year's best by a blue ribbon panel—will be announced May 28.

Asbestos Discoverer Died Broke

WATSON LAKE, Y.T. (CP) — Prospector Bob Kirk died broke—his fortune rusted in his hands like ice in summer.

Watson Lake people say he had $700,000 in the 1950s after he staked one of the first claims on what now is Cassiar Asbestos Ltd. in the remote northwest corner of British Columbia.

But when he died in Fort Nelson Hospital March 11 he was broke.

One of his best friends recalls that he was too generous.

Prospector Buster Groat knew Mr. Kirk before his windfall, through the high-rolling 50s and during the decade of decline and poverty.

"A lot of people say he threw his money away foolishly, but that's the kind of man he was," said Mr. Groat.

Jake Melnychuk said Mr. Kirk always had a bar bill in Watson Lake, no matter where he was actually living. More than once he phoned from Edmonton or Seattle to buy drinks for the house.

Mr. Melnychuk said the prospector once wanted to show some city people in Seattle the art of snowshoeing. The legend is that he filled the bar with a truckload of Corn Flakes and demonstrated snowshoeing to an astonished audience.

Mr. Melnychuk's strangest tale of the prospector's exploits concerns claim-staking in the Cassiar.

"He was never near Cassiar," said Mr. Melnychuk.

He said around 1951 the economics for an asbestos mine seemed right and Mr. Kirk's three brothers set out to stake a claim. They borrowed his dog team and gave him a full share in return.

When the mine was developed by Cassiar Asbestos the prospector found himself unexpectedly rich. He built a house at Lower Post, 15 miles south of here on the B.C. side of the border but as time went on he spent more and more time in the cities.

"He got a lot of money into a cement factory in Edmonton which never materialized," said Mr. Groat.

"One of his big losses was an airline charter company—but Bob just wasn't a businessman," said Mr. Groat.

"But his generosity was the main reason he went broke. He just couldn't say no. He wasn't the kind of man to hoard his money," he said, adding that the prospector never complained about his financial decline.

"He was a big man that way."

B.C. Man Owns 18 'Caddies'

SURREY, B.C. (CP) — Glenn Scott is a car freak.

In fact, he is so crazy about owning cars his wife, Joyce, can pick the Cadillac she wishes to be seen in for the day.

If she is in a good mood, she will drive the white one; if she is in a sour mood she will take the black one.

And if she is feeling good and mad she will take the red model.

She has 18 of the big cars to choose from, all 1950 models. Mr. Scott likes that vintage.

The Caddies are only a small part of his total collection of memorable automobiles, Mr. Scott said in a recent interview. But he said he is unsure of the total number of cars he owns. At least 30 are stashed around his one-acre property.

He has more cars stored in a local garage and others in Winnipeg, where he and his family used to live.

He said he sees nothing unusual in owning so many cars. He is a collector who gathers "unusual" cars the way other people collect seashells, spoons or stamps.

"Did you ever hear of a stamp collector with only one stamp?

Mr. Scott also owns a Nash and five Chryslers. It was a 1946 Chrysler that got him started, he said.

Finding space to park his collection is a problem, but nothing like it used to be.

"We used to live on an ordinary-sized lot in (nearby) Burnaby," Mrs. Scott said. "You wouldn't believe the parking problems we had then!"

Mr. Scott said he does not actively plan to increase his collection, but the instinct will rise to the surface occasionally.

In the meantime, he uses his leisure time to look after this collection.

And when he isn't doing that, he has his stamp and coin collections to keep up.

"I guess I have to think positively," said Mrs. Scott. "At least he doesn't collect elephants."

Liberal Machine Is Well Financed

OTTAWA (CP) — The man the people see and know is Pierre Trudeau, but as part of the Liberal party campaign the no prime minister is only the tip of a vast pyramid.

Under him is a complex election machine comprising key personalities, candidates, workers and a campaign nerve centre. Party officials say it is the biggest and best-financed Liberal machine ever.

They have not released figures on the projected cost of the July 8 election campaign, but it likely will match or exceed the $4.2 million the Progressive Conservatives expect to spend.

Prior to the campaign, the operations centre for the party was the national Liberal federation in Ottawa's suburban Blair Williams. With the race now on, Mr. Williams and his staff will spend most of their time dealing with provincial organizations, local ridings and administration.

The big headquarters men until July 8 are Senator Gil Molgat, president of the Liberal party of Canada; Senator Keith Davey and transport Minister Jean Marchand, co-chairmen of the campaign; and James Coutts, Mr. Trudeau's political adviser.

Senator Molgat, 47, was elected president last September. He was a Manitoba cabinet minister of the legislature in 1953 at age 36. He became provincial Liberal leader eight years later and in 1968 he was defeated in a bid for a seat in the House of Commons. He was appointed to the Senate in 1970.

His first pledge as national Liberal president was to work on the "critical communications problem" between the party and the public.

Senator Davey, 48, a former Canadian Football League commissioner, steps into his campaign role with extensive experience behind him. He was campaign director for the late Lester B. Pearson in 1962, 1963 and 1965 — elections in which the Liberals failed to win a majority.

With the exception of Mr. Marchand, who is concentrating on Quebec, Mr. Trudeau has been meeting this group daily. He also meets frequently with his three main speech writers — Alan Gotlieb, Jim Coutts and Ivan Head.

A major function of the federation during the campaign is to bring regional viewpoints to the prime minister.

"We get a pretty good idea of the feelings in every area through our daily contacts," says a federation official.

Prior to the campaign, Mr. Trudeau established a caucus committee on election planning under Regional Expansion Minister Don Jamieson and Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier. This was established specifically to recommend ways in which the federal—in this case Liberal—presence could be better established.

Party spokesmen say Mr. Trudeau has particularly enjoyed by provinces announcing and taking credit for, programs financed by both governments. Useful campaign suggestions apparently came from this committee, but it is no longer functioning with Parliament dissolved.

As in previous campaigns, other committees will be established—some to discuss reports from provinces, others to study press reaction, and perhaps others to recommend strategy changes.

But, despite a massive communications network, tons of literature and hundreds of employees, the main thrust of the Liberal campaign is coming from the prime minister and a small group of advisers, including the cabinet, who keep in touch on a daily basis.

And once Mr. Trudeau is on his chartered DC-9 jet, accompanied by about 10 officials, secretaries, press officers, technicians and security staff, his main advisers become Mr. Coutts and Senator Molgat. The senator plans to travel with the prime minister on most of his campaign trips.

Mr. Trudeau told a national Liberal executive meeting several months ago he would go flat out in the next election campaign.

Now, he has come out swinging in a tough, old-fashioned and uncharacteristic style.

"His approach is a response to everything he has heard since the 1972 campaign," says one key official.

"He is following a consensus that has been clearly expressed in cabinet, by party officials and by rank-and-file members."

The party's 10 provincial campaign organizers are reported solidly in favor of the new approach, along with all senior officials of the national federation.

At the moment, officials say, there is unanimous agreement that Mr. Trudeau, until he has visited all regions of the country, should confine prepared texts and shoot straight from the hip at Conservatives and New Democrats.

Once his new style is established, the plan is to work from abridged texts when new policies and platform material are being announced.

There has been a consensus against delivering entire speeches from a text.

"Let's face it, he doesn't read them all that well," says one official.

First Things

LONDON (CP) — The following message is sent on the House of Commons tape: "Prime Minister Harold Wilson is making an important statement in the Commons at about 3:30 this afternoon and while he is speaking it is proposed that no other material will be run on the news wire except racing news."

STEER CLEAR OF HIM

In 1966, a 75-year-old man in McKinney, Tex., received 10 traffic tickets, drove on the wrong side of the road four times, committed four hit-and-run offences and caused six accidents, all within 20 minutes.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN — ALTERNATE A BEDROOM

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

DESIGN 134-1675
1447 Sq. Ft.

A "Country look" reminiscent of the New England era describes this two storey design. This plan was evolved by public demand — a small home with spacious room sizes. High arches between the living and family rooms, and again between the family and dining rooms give a feeling of separation with openness.

This design can be built with three or four bedrooms, both alternatives are included in the plans. The three bedroom design has a master suite across the full length of the front with a roomy dressing area and direct access to the bathroom.

Handy for the housewife is a ground level laundry, or flower room if gardening is her hobby. The cantilevered upper floor provides style to the exterior and extra space in the second storey. Plans show a full basement and the design is suitable for any method of heating.

The house itself is almost a cube which gives maximum living space for the building dollar.

Plans for Design T 34-1675 cost $35 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail. Two new books "Home Designs for Canadians" are available for $1 each by mail (see coupon). Book 1 presents designs for homes up to 1600 sq. ft. for one storey and split level, 1850 sq. ft. for one and one half and two storey. Book 2 includes larger homes and vacation homes. (Ontario residents add 7 per cent Sales Tax on all purchases).

New Zealand Minister May Visit Belleville

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — The New Zealand minister of health, Robert Tizard, is to visit Canada on a fact-finding mission.

He is scheduled to arrive in Ottawa May 31 and will be leaving from Vancouver June 9.

While in Canada he will visit Ottawa, Toronto and Vancouver, Tizard trained in Canada under and he hopes to renew acquaintances with the Canadian ministers of health, Marc Lalonde.

New Zealand has instituted pilot programs in nursing education and in technical institutes and in Canada Tizard hopes to see something of nursing education programs there.

He also wants to visit the Clark Institute in Toronto dealing with community psychiatric services and also the alcohol and drug addiction research centre in Toronto to get an insight of the Canadian facilities for the treatment and rehabilitation of drug addicts, something New Zealand is also developing in New Zealand.

During the Second World War Tizard trained in Canada under the Commonwealth Air Training Scheme and he hopes to make a sentimental trip to Belleville, Ont., one of the areas where he was stationed during his training.

Mrs. Tizard will be accompanying her husband in Canada from May 31 to June 8 when she leaves for the United States.

Research Body Gets Flood Of Ghost Tales

LONDON (CP) — When the Institute of Psychophysical Research at Oxford appealed for personal accounts of ghostly experiences, it was inundated with real-life ghost stories from all over the world.

Now the institute is analysing some 1,000 tales of psychic phenomenon. While it is subjecting them to modern methods of statistical research, it has asked for more.

Each writer is being sent a questionnaire asking the time of day of the experience, the season, how many people were involved, the ghost's apparent age and whether it cast a shadow.

NOTICE

THE EXPROPRIATIONS ACT
NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL TO EXPROPRIATE LAND

IN THE MATTER of an application by the Minister of Transportation and Communications for approval to expropriate land being in the Township of Sidney, in the County of Hastings, for the purposes of the Ministry for the PURPOSES OF the construction of the King's Highway No. 401.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that application has been made for approval to expropriate the land described in the schedule hereto.

Any owner of lands in respect of which notice is given who desires an inquiry into whether the said property is fit for the purpose and convenient for the achievement of the purpose for which it is proposed to be taken shall so notify the undersigned in writing.

In the case of a registered owner, such notice shall be given by registered mail within thirty days after he is served with the notice, or when he is served by publication, within thirty days after the last publication of the notice.

In the case of an owner who is not a registered owner, within thirty days after the last publication of the notice.

THE APPROVING AUTHORITY IS

Minister of Transportation and Communications
Toronto, Ontario
Director, Right-of-Way Branch.

NOTES:

(1) The Expropriations Act provides that,

(a) where an inquiry is required, it shall be conducted by an inquiry officer appointed by the Minister of Justice and Attorney General;

(b) the inquiry officer,

(i) may receive every party to the inquiry an opportunity to present evidence and make submissions to examine and cross-examine witnesses, either personally or by his counsel or agent, and

(ii) may recommend approval of the expropriation subject to such terms as he may see fit, and no amount for his costs or the costs of his counsel or agent shall be allowed unless the approving authority or any person authorized by it or by the Lieutenant Governor in Council to tax costs directs the approving authority to pay such costs and allow such amount.

(2) The "owner" and "registered owner" are defined in the Act as follows: "owner" includes a mortgagee, tenant, executive creditor, a person having a limited estate or interest in land, a trustee of the estate of a mentally incompetent person or of a person incapable of managing his affairs, but does not include a municipality; "registered owner" means an owner of land whose interest in the land is established and enforceable by registration under the Land Registry or Sheriff's office, and includes a person shown as a life tenant in a will registered in the Surrogate Court.

(3) The expropriation is made under subsection 3 of section 3 of the Act and the public interest in respect of the land intended to be taken is that it is required as a part of the Inquiry Officer are parties to the inquiry.

12,000 Homes Target

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government's housing action program, to be announced Monday in the legislature, will aim for 12,000 housing units under construction or approved for building by the end of the year.

Housing Minister Sidney Handleman said Friday that developers participating in the program will not have complete control over prices in 60 per cent of the lots which are not designated for specific income groups.

The plan requires developers to provide 10 per cent of the units in those costing less than $14,500 a year through the Home Ownership Made Easy (H.O.M.E.) program, and 30 per cent in those earning from $14,500 up to about $20,000 a year.

Mr. Handleman said the developers must make a commitment "of some sort," not necessarily in writing, that the land cost in the other 60 per cent of the lots will not be allowed to rise with a general increase in land prices.

Although the program provides only 1,200 more units for the lowest-income range under the H.O.M.E. program than would otherwise be constructed, Mr. Handleman said it is "only part of the total program" to be unveiled Monday.

"If it looks small, remember that most developers had their plans already in place for this year," he said.

Most of the land for housing will be in the Hamilton and Metropolitan Toronto areas.

Mr. Handleman's policy statement Monday is expected to deal with causes of the housing shortage, its extent, and solutions proposed by this country to alleviate it.

The minister will hold a news conference after the statement is released and a three-hour "ministerial seminar" Tuesday.

Mr. Handleman said Friday that municipalities will receive grants to pay for increased costs and here-to-fore such as recreation for houses built under the program in their jurisdictions.

Kierans Says Mackenzie Pipeline Won't Be Built

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Eric Kierans said Friday the Trudeau government is making a mockery of sound investment decisions in urging Canadians to invest in the proposed Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline.

"Why any Canadian would want to invest in (Canadian) Arctic Gas completely escapes me," said Mr. Kierans who also was at one time head of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

He predicted that the $6 billion project in its present form aimed at bringing Alaska and Mackenzie Delta gas to southern markets, would never be built and added that the government would blame nationalists and environment-minded Canadians for it.

Mr. Kierans was among a number of critics of the pipeline project during a two-day conference on the project sponsored by the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee.

Numerous cabinet members, including Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, have spoken in favor of an application by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipe Lines Ltd. to build the 700-mile line.

West Grows

OTTAWA (CP) — A population report from Statistics Canada shows that half of the fastest growing cities in the country are in Alberta and British Columbia.

The report covers population estimates between 1966 and 1973.

City's Tax Rate Boosted 6 Mills

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

City property owners with an average home assessed for $10,000 will face an additional $60 municipal tax bite this year.

This was city council's decision Friday as it approved the 1974 budget calling for a levy of 51.1 mills for a public school supporter.

This year's tax rate is up six mills over the 45.1 mill rate last year. Approximately one third of the increase is for higher educational costs, the balance being accounted for by expected increased expenditures in the various city departments.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey noted that even with the six mill increase, this year's tax rate is still .6 mills less than the 51.7 mill rate three years ago.

City treasurer Frank Morrell in presenting the budget to council at yesterday's special meeting noted that the 1974 increase was necessary to maintain the level of services to city residents.

"Increases in the cost of service, labor and materials have been greater than the increase in taxable assessment and subsidies receivable from provincial and federal governments," he said.

"The result is an increase in municipal taxes returning approximately to the level of 1971."

General city expenditures for the year are estimated at $8,972,332, up from last year's $7,784,085.

With revenues of $4,383,930 deducted, $4,589,423 is left to be raised by taxation to cover general expenditures. The general rate is 31.3 mills, up 4.3 mills from last year.

Total schools' requisition is $2,999,270, compared with $2,595,500 last year.

For public school supporters the rate for education means 10.9 mills for elementary schools and a rate of 8.9 mills for high schools. The total school rate is up 1.7 mills over last.

The residential rate for separate school supporters is 51.2 mills, or a total rate increase of 4.9 mills.

Total tax levy including general expenditure and school levy is $7,588,693, from $6,484,885 last year.

Ronald Irvine, reporting for auditors George A. Welch and Company, said the city ended 1973 with a surplus of $208,695, applied to reduce this year's rate.

Kissinger Wins Israeli OK On Key Disengagement Issue

DAMASCUS (AP) — Delayed by a bomb scare aboard his official plane, Henry Kissinger arrived in Damascus today in a last-minute bid to negotiate a separation of Israeli and Syrian forces.

The United States state secretary won tentative Israeli government Friday on a key disengagement issue, and U.S. officials say Kissinger will end his shuttling between Israel and Syria Sunday whether or not a disengagement pact is agreed upon. He is expected to return home via Bonn and London.

The secretary's 11th trip to Damascus on his current Middle East tour was delayed one hour by a telephoned bomb threat against his U.S. Air Force Boeing 707 at David Ben-Gurion Airport near Jerusalem. Kissinger had not boarded the plane when the threat was received.

Security men found no bomb aboard the craft and Kissinger soon cleared to leave.

After Kissinger ends his shuttling, U.S. technical experts may remain behind if necessary to assist with the fine points of a disengagement agreement.

In a three-hour session Friday with Israeli negotiators, Kissinger got a favorable reaction on an undisclosed U.S. compromise plan for thinning out Syrian and Israeli forces along the projected ceasefire line. The issue is one of two stumbling blocks remaining in the way of a disengagement agreement.

But Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban made clear that Israeli cabinet approval of Kissinger's suggestion will hinge on the response the secretary receives today from Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Agreement on the thinning out of forces would leave just one major area of dispute: the size and specific responsibilities of the United Nations force that would patrol a buffer zone between the Israeli and Syrian armies.

Prosecutor Appeals To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court has been asked to decide whether President Nixon may withhold Watergate evidence subpoenaed for the trial of former White House assistants.

The Watergate special prosecutor asked the high court Friday to assume jurisdiction in the refusal of the White House to turn over tapes and documents for the Watergate cover-up trial.

Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, pressed for time because the trial is scheduled to start Sept. 9, is seeking to bypass the circuit court here.

In other Watergate developments:

—Peter Rodino, chairman of the House of Representatives Judiciary committee, said he is going to propose next Thursday that the impeachment committee make public as much of the evidence that has already been presented as it can.

—Vice-President Gerald Ford said Nixon's refusal to give the judiciary committee any more Watergate material may result in the president's impeachment.

"It seems to me that a stonewall attitude isn't necessarily the wisest policy," Ford said in an interview with ABC News.

Nixon Speaks On Economy

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon makes a noon radio address today on United States economic problems and how he intends to cope with them, including the naming of a White House economic co-ordinator.

Deputy State Secretary Kenneth Rush, Nixon's onetime law professor, is expected to get the key post with responsibilities for making economic policy recommendations to the president.

Nixon decided to bypass his regular economic advisers in picking Rush, administration sources said.

The president goes on the air here from the Florida White House at 12:07 p.m. EDT. He is here for a holiday weekend and may make a radio broadcast Monday as well. Monday is the U.S. Memorial Day.

Strike at Hospital

WOODSTOCK (CP) — An injunction will be sought Monday to stop picketing at Woodstock General Hospital where 175 non-medical employees went on an "illegal strike" Friday, said Peter Smith, hospital executive director.

Hostages Win

HONG KONG (AP) — A dozen hostages held for more than 19 hours in a Kowloon bank overpowered a would-be bank robber today and emerged unharmed, police radio broadcasts said. The gunman, who had earlier told police by telephone he was a Chinese businessman from Vietnam, was led from the bank with a paper bag over his head to hide his face from spectators.

Nine of 11 Life Jackets Fail to Turn Wearer

OTTAWA (CP) — Nine of 11 life jackets approved by the transport department are unacceptable because they don't always turn the wearer to a breathing position, Consumers Association of Canada reports in the June issue of Canadian Consumer.

Under federal law, one transport department-approved jacket for each passenger must be carried in all power boats.

Independent tests commissioned by the consumers association showed the jackets don't always return the wearer to a safe floating position with the nose and mouth above water, the article says.

It is obvious from the test results that a closer look is needed at life jacket standards, as well as transport department testing methods, it says.

Only two of the 11 jackets turned test subjects to a safe flotation position every time: Aqua Neptune Slab and A and Turners Life Preserver Vest size B.

Long Run

TORONTO (CP) — Some time today Chief WO Philippe (Phil) Latulippe, 55, will finish running 100 miles around CFB Downsview.

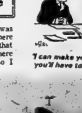
He started at 2 p.m. Friday, averaging about six miles an hour.

This type of activity, isn't something new for Mr. Latulippe. In 1972, he walked 300 miles in 77 hours, 34 minutes and 30 seconds.

Troops Likely To Break Strike

BELFAST (AP) — Merlyn Rees, Britain's chief administrator for Northern Ireland, announced today he plans to break a general strike that has brought Ulster to a standstill since it began 11 days ago.

Local political leaders are convinced the British government will order troops to begin moving essential supplies such as gasoline and oil before mid-fall. But Protestant militants behind the strike threatened an immediate electric power black out if the soldiers are called in.



Tension mounted as terrorists, apparently enforcing the strike, bombed two Belfast service stations that were open in defiance of the work ban.

Other terrorists rampaged near Ballymoney Friday evening, smashing bars and cafes. Two Roman Catholics were fatally shot in Ballymena.

'Psychological Autopsy' Sought For Probe of Dead SLA Six

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Donald (Cinque) DeFreeze, the ex-convict who called himself "the field that hurts you now," watched his terrorist comrades fall one by one.

Then, wounded twice and hugging the dirt beneath a burning clapboard bungalow, he put a .38-caliber pistol to his head and fired a bullet into his brain.

That is how Los Angeles County Coroner Thomas Noguchi reconstructs the death of DeFreeze and five of his Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) followers in a shootout with police and federal agents last week.

"There is no evidence to indicate that any of them tried to get out," Noguchi told reporters Friday.

"In all my years as coroner I've never seen this kind of behavior in the face of flames," he said. "It is reasonable to believe they were determined fanatics."

Noguchi said he has ordered a "psychological autopsy" in an effort to determine the motivation of the six victims. The "autopsy," to be done by a psychologist and criminologist and based largely on data from the victims' family and friends, will take several weeks, Noguchi said.

Noguchi said Nancy Ling Perry and Camilla Hall were killed early in the hour-long gunbattle and DeFreeze and three comrades used a trap door or hacked their way to a crawl space beneath the floor as a barrage of police bullets whizzed past them.

It was there, as flames closed in from a fire believed caused by an accidentally ignited Molotov cocktail, that William Wolfe, Patricia Soltysik and Angela Atwood choked to death from the smoke or were burned to the fire, Noguchi said.

DeFreeze then decided to kill himself rather than die as his comrades had, Investigators said. He was found face down, with his body over the suicide pistol.

Tower 'Buried' Beneath Lake During Winter

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — The bottom of Lake Michigan off Muskegon has become the repository every winter for a form of buried treasure—a steel research tower.

The unique storage method involves keeping the 70-foot tower at the bottom of the lake during the wintertime freeze and then raising it to the surface again when the ice melts and spring comes.

A triangular metal base holds the tower at its place, and guy wires are attached to six-foot concrete screws driven into the lake bottom.

Made of non-rusting galvanized steel and kept in water too deep for it to be affected by ice, the tower can be re-erected without difficulty, federal officials say.

Canada's Major Ports Expecting Busy Season

By VICTOR DABBY
The Canadian Press

Despite uncertainties posed by labor problems, boxcar patterns, most of Canada's major sea ports look forward to increased levels of activity this year.

Shippers seeking a quick turn-around facility have brought the port of Halifax its shortages and changing trade best winter season in several years and John Grice, head of the city's port commission reported a substantial increase in car imports—50,000 vehicles unloaded in 1973 compared with 30,000 the previous year.

He said the port's container facilities are being used to capacity and a new container terminal is planned.

Another port spokesman, William Mingo, said he expects conditions in Halifax will be even better in the future because shipping lines serving the city have not yet realized their full potential.

"We are hoping to get some Far North trade through Halifax in the summer, which will boost our volume."

Spokesmen for the port of Montreal predicted an increase in the volume of cargo despite long-standing labor problems. Last month they revised their figures following a strike by river pilots that crippled Montreal and Quebec City in April.

The port handled nearly 24 million tons of cargo in 1973 and the expected total for this year was 25 million.

The Maritime Employers' Association (MEA), representing all major employers' in the industry, expects to reduce the work force of Montreal dock workers later this year by transferring them to a guaranteed weekly wage in their home province.

Rather than face high fixed labor costs while waiting for new jobs to be lined up, the MEA has offered a cash settlement to employees of the waterfront labor force willing to take early retirement.

The special offer in March, 1973, was accepted by about 500 longshoremen, reducing the payroll to 1,900. The MEA, which set a target of 1,100, has renewed its proposal, extending it to include workers in Quebec City and 200 in Trois Rivieres.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand announced in early March that two banks have agreed to help the MEA loans totalling $10 million to cover the severance costs.

Montreal expects a 16-percent increase this year in the volume of container traffic after handling 127,325, container units in 1973, compared with 92,000 in 1972.

The port handled 14.6 million tons of grain and petroleum and 3.8 million tons of general cargo last year.

Trois-Rivieres, 75 miles northeast of Montreal, also had an increase in cargo volume, 4.15 million tons in 1973 compared with 4.135 million the previous year. General cargo accounted for 262,000 tons of the 1973 total.

Port authorities forecast gains in paper and petroleum shipments. Cargoes of paper products are expected to rise from 133,000 tons in 1973 to almost 200,000 tons this year.

In Quebec City, a spokesman for the port authority forecast a 15-per-cent increase in the port's total tonnage.

Quebec City handled 16.675 million tons in 1973, an increase of seven per cent over the previous year's total. Container traffic is expected to go up substantially from the 55,372 units handled in 1973. Grain shipments are expected to make all the difference for the season at Churchill, Man. .

Port manager Earl Scharf said the port's 169 year for grain shipments was 1971 when exporters shipped 22.5 million bushels and that this record may be beaten depending on the amount of wheat allocated by the Canadian wheat board.

In addition, Churchill will be handling large amounts of sulphur for the first time. Amoco Petroleum Co. Ltd. of Calgary plans to use the port to ship 30,000 tons of sulphur to Europe this year.

Assistant manager of the port of Vancouver said the general trend for the port has been a steady rise in the amount of cargo handled but he foresaw little change from last year's performance when total tonnage reached 60 million.

The spokesman said there has been a slowdown due to the shortage of rail cars and shipments are behind those set last year so that 60-million action might change by the end of the year.

Bulk cargo forms about 83 per cent of total volume handled by Vancouver.

County Clings To Tradition

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

Prince Edward County council's closed caucus and committee of the whole sessions to discuss annual budget grants have been challenged by Alan Capon, managing editor of the Picton Gazette.

Mr. Capon, who addressed all members of county council after the 2:00pmmonth of Tuesday night's regular meeting, suggested that these sessions should be public. He observed that as a reporter for 20 years, he had covered various county council and budget discussions were open in all cases.

He added that county council is dealing with public funds and should therefore deal with them publicly. He stressed that he was not implying that councillors had done anything questionable.

In an interview following the meeting, Mr. Capon observed that council, like Caesar's wife, should be "above suspicion" and, therefore, grants should be considered in an open meeting.

He remarked that the public is entitled to know council's reasonings for acceptance or rejection of a grant application. The taxpayer, fully informed by this type of background information is better equipped to judge the decisions elected representatives.

When Mr. Capon spoke to county councillors regarding the closed meetings, Sophiasburgh reeve, George Fraser replied that "This is the way we've always done it."

Chairman of council's finance committee, Wellington reeve Robert Boyce, commented later, in an interview, that he was willing to explain the reasons for refusal of any grant to the applicant. He said that this year council refused only one grant, a request for assistance from the Church of St. Mary Magdalene in Picton toward the purchase of an organ.

"It's just been procedure as we want to bring the whole county council in it," he said in relation to the closed session.

Reeve Boyce confirmed that as chairman of the finance committee he was willing to explain the details of any grant in question to the press.

County council did not offer Mr. Capon assurance that next year's budget meeting would be open, although warden Keith MacDonald suggested that the managing editor might again forward his views before that time.

In their informal meeting with Mr. Capon, councillors generally indicated that "This is the way we've always done it."

Just days ago several members of county council voiced support of a new one-tier system of government for Prince Edward but Tuesday's caucus elicited this progressive thinking with insistence that budget sessions should be closed because they have always been closed.

It seems that council's refusal to admit the press to its budget session is nothing more than a stubborn effort to preserve tradition for tradition's sake.

If it has never been done before, then perhaps its time for a change in procedure. The public is entitled to know how its money is spent, and why elected representatives decide as they do.

This is not to suggest that press attendance at council's budget meeting would provide an expose of any sort. County councillors should not regard a request from the press for an open meeting as a hint that they are suspect.

A certain amount of curiosity is bound to develop regarding the reasons for closed meetings. The more strenuously councillors resist this curiosity, the greater it will become.

It is childish for council to insist on doing things the old way. After all, the days ago councillors arrived at their meetings by horse and buggy. No one declared that this tradition should continue.

Mr. Capon said in an interview this week that he feels the press is no more than the public. Reporters are often provided with a desk to write on at public meetings but this is a courtesy, not an elevation of the reporter from the ranks of the public.

When the press is shut out, the public is shut out. County council should give more thought to the benefits of an open budget meeting. Grant dollars are the taxpayers' dollars and they have every right to know how and why the money is spent.

Volunteers From City To Meeting

Two city women will attend the conference of the Canadian Association of Volunteer Bureaux, June 12 to 15 in Vancouver.

They are Mrs. Miriam Blabon, chairman, and Mrs. Ruth Burrows, executive director of the Central Volunteer Bureau of Belleville.

They will be among 120 delegates from across Canada who will attend the event at the Totem Park Conference Centre at the University of British Columbia.

Titled The Volunteer Community '74, the conference will explore ways to form a National Association in Canada representative of volunteer centres and other similar organizations.

The conference is made possible by a $20,000 grant from the Secretary of State Department. The Honorable Hugh Faulkner, Secretary of State is keynote speaker.

Obituaries and Funerals

MRS. CLARENCE HARRY MORRIS

Mrs. Marjorie Grace Morris died May 24, 1974 in Princess Margaret Hospital, Toronto. She was in her 67th year.

Born in Port Hope, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Abbott, she lived in Montreal before coming to Belleville five years ago.

Mrs. Morris is survived by a brother, John Winters Elliot and two sisters, Mrs. Hester (Ina) Walton of Avon Park, Fla., and Mrs. Myrvena Farquhar of Belleville and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral will be held Wed. 27 at 2 p.m. at Thompson Funeral Home with Rev. Laurie Sucherland officiating. Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery. Visitation from Saturday afternoon.

Musicians Get Grant

Teacher-pupil roles will be reversed for five Belleville high school students this summer. Those once taught will teach-music.

The five have been granted a $4,500 Opportunities For Youth grant by the federal government for Fun and Music, an 8 week program geared to acquaint some of the city's elementary school students with various instruments.

All have an approximate five years of of experience before a music stand.

Arden Lewis, co-ordinator of the program and owner of Arden's Accordion Academy said Friday that the teenager, all his students, received word recently that their grant application had come through.

Since then, sister Loretto and Louis Bennter, Gordon Safford, Martin Brain, and Lance Jeffrey, all 16 and 17-year-olds, have begun honing their musical skills.

Before teaching of student begins, he said Mr. Lewis the five young musicians will be touring Belleville public school June 17-July 1 to play and bring their musical message to elementary school students.

During the course, to be held at the Church and Station Sts. academy classes will be held for 8 to 13-year-olds in the morning.

Crowd Sets Bad Example

By COLIN BRUCE

By COLIN BRUCE
Trenton Town Council this week brought up an interesting point which described that there is as much violence in the crowd as there is on the playing field.

The fever of physical competition radiates to the grandstand where frustrated mothers and fathers visualize lucrative hockey contracts going down the drain as junior falls on his fancy in the aftermath of a slap shot.

"It's pretty discouraging to the little fellas to see this sort of thing going on in the seats," said Councillor Bob Wannamaker, commenting on "violence in the seating area."

The whole issue of violence in sport came to a head earlier this winter when a Trenton area youngster was killed in the stomach following a playoff game. He died later.

Council endorsed a petition to the Ontario Hockey Association calling for more control and supervision and stiffer restraint on violence. But how far can the OHA go?

Even the hockey purist who delights at precision skating and passing likes to see the occasional fist fight in the corners.

A lot of people will call you a sissy or at best naive if you suggest fights ruin the game. You've gotta get respect, a beer-drinking bully in the stands will bellow.

Well that's garbage and nonsense.

In the series between the Boston Bruins and Philadelphia's Broad Street Bullies, it took three and a half hours to complete the fifth game - thanks to the efforts of Dave Shultz who couldn't keep his mitts to himself when he got within five feet of a Bruin.

So when the young fella watches this sort of mardi-gras, he's probably mom and dad who sit and cheer for the spectacle. It's time to take the rules and tries to emulate the action on the boob tube.

Shultz gets paid a lot of money to scrap in the corners - apparently the only idea Coach Fred Shero had to keep his opponents out of the staid Philadelphians.

But they didn't win the last game by brawling. They won it playing straight hockey.

Juniors are still learning the game.

The OHA would put some teeth into its restrictions on fighting, talent would have to develop more and we'd have better hockey.

Teachers Preparing For Vote

Male elementary school teachers start this weekend to prepare for the school board elections next December.

They are meeting in Ottawa for a political education conference to discuss ways of increasing the political influence of teachers on local trustees.

Members of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers Federation from 10 eastern Ontario districts will meet at the Talisman Motor Inn in Ottawa. The conference will be conducted by the Special Committee for Ongoing Political Education (SCOPE).

Among the speakers will be Ronald Poste of Belleville, past president of OPSMTF.

Beer Garden Turned Down

TRENTON — A bid for a sidewalk beer garden, to be held in conjunction with the July sidewalk sale, was turned down by town council Monday night.

Councillor Bob Wannamaker queried "What has beer got to do with a sidewalk sale?" Councillor Ron Price mentioned it created an "atmosphere" to which Councillor Wannamaker replied "I'm not in agreement with selling any alcohol on the streets of Trenton".

Councillors Ted Card and George Crowder both said they would oppose such a request along with Councillor Wannamaker.

Councillors John Bonn and Peter Dickson were absent from the meeting.

Skyline Management Limited, who prompted by the merchants' association, made the request pointed out, "this is a new approach for the town but I firmly believe that it would be a better benefit for all."

Council did grant permission to close off Dundas Street for a pedestrian mall for the weekend of July 23, 26 and 27.

National Ballet Checks Dancers

Officials from the National Ballet in Toronto were in Belleville this month to observe the pointe classes taught by Brian Scott at Quinte Dance Centre.

They were David Scott, Brian Scott's brother, who is ballet master with the national company, and Joanne Scott, ballet mistress.

Classes at the dance centre, sponsored by the Belleville branch of the National Ballet Guild, end June 8. A summer school will be conducted during the first two weeks of July.

'Incredible Mixup' Funny-Sometimes

Paul Ainsworth, owner of a city car dealership, has been the unwilling victim of a numbers game over the past year.

It seems that the telephone number of his company, Ainsworth Kar-Mart, and Ontario Hydro bill identification number are one and the same.

And rural customers are mistaking the code number for Hydro's telephone, printed elsewhere on the bill.

Instead of new car sale inquiries, Mr. Ainsworth has been getting earfuls of angry words from Hydro customers. Recently, the volume increased from a few calls a day to some 20 around the time, or Hydro's four annual billing dates.

The call that finally broke the camel's back came last week when Mr. Ainsworth picked up the telephone Thursday morning.

"A Kemptville woman was really teed off. Oh, she was some irate at Hydro," he said, chuckling. "She kept talking and I couldn't slow her down to explain the mixup."

What one Hydro official here called an "incredible mixup" is in the first stages of rectification. Hydro has stated its Toronto billing office to obliterate the offending number.

Motorcyclists on Course

The novice motorcycle training course that was offered to city residents by the Belleville police department and the arena and recreation department got underway at Centennial Secondary School Tuesday night.

A total of 19 students attended the first class in the three-day-course and received instructions from Belleville police Inspector Ralph Blatchford and Sgt. Bob Hall on how to handle their bikes safely. Later in the evening, automotive mechanics instructor, Norm Storms, quickly introduced the students to the major components of their machines.

Township Determined To Enforce Regulation

Thurlow council stands firm in its decision to go to court if a township resident plans to contravene an existing land use bylaw and live in a house on an unopened road allowance year-round.

Claiming he is a victim of someone else's error, Roger Porter, Belleville alderman and township resident, came to council Wednesday to protest its decision to revoke his building permit.

Mr. Porter claims he began construction of a residence following receipt of a building permit from Thurlow inspector George Caves. The permit allowed construction of a "permanent" residence, he said.

However, council pointed out that it had refused to issue a building permit for construction of a permanent home in 1971, at a time when final okay rested with the township.

Hastings county now provides Thurlow with building inspection services.

The township's 1959 land use bylaw does not permit construction of a year-round dwelling on a private, or unopened road allowance. Only seasonal dwellings, defined as a summer cottage, in the bylaw are allowed.

When council discovered a permit had been issued in contravention of its bylaw, it revoked Mr. Porter's permit earlier this year. It calls for a stop on further building.

However, Mr. Porter had already started building a dwelling along the Moira River on an unopened road allowance between concession roads five and six. "I have no choice now," Mr. Porter told council Wednesday. "At this stage, I cannot stop building."

He said he has sold his Belleville home, torn down his cottage (originally on the property) and invested approximately $19,000 toward the eventual estimated construction cost of $35,000.

In explaining the permit issuance, Mr. Porter said Mr. Caves said there would be "no problem" in getting one. Mr. Porter told council the inspector received a six-year-old committee of adjustment ruling upon which to base his decision.

The committee ruled that the land could only be used for a "seasonal dwelling", councillors said.

Mr. Porter claimed checking of township bylaws was not his responsibility.

"I don't see how I can be penalized to this extent when there's been an error," Mr. Porter said. "You can't when I've spent $15,000 on it. You guys will bankrupt me at this stage."

Resolution Against Hockey Violence

TRENTON — This community signed its name to a province-wide resolution Monday night, denouncing hockey violence.

The resolution — authored by the regional municipality of Peel — comes as an answer and protest to the death of a midget hockey player following a playoff game.

The resolution calls for the end of violence on and off the ice and will be circulated to every municipality in the province. The document is then expected to go to the province for further debate.

It states Peel "strongly protests the apparent lack of control and physical violence allowed at the playoff game".

Councillors here heartily approved the resolution with one councillor saying "violence has been a problem here too".

"Even at little league games there seems to be a lot of fists going," said councillor Bob Wannamaker. "It's pretty discouraging for the little fella on the ice to see this going on in the stands among the parents."

White Collar Crime Increasing

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

It is hard to believe, but today there are more people robbing banks with pens than with guns.

In the past, people imagined bank robbers to be scar-faced gangsters armed with black leather satchels and sawn-off guns. They were depicted as burly morons of the strong, decree sort who uttered monosyllabic slang words out of the side of their mouths.

All that has changed now.

Banks now lose ten times as much money through fraud as they do through armed robbery. A pen is a more suitable weapon for bank robbers than a gun.

Richard A. McElwain, of Toronto, the chief inspector for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, claims that banks across the nation "are being nickled and dimed to death" with bogus government, commercial and personal cheques.

Canadian banks are concerned about the problem and recently started to sponsor a series of seminars that are designed to familiarize bank personnel with the latest trends in criminal activities.

At a recent seminar held in Kingston under the auspices of the Canadian Bankers Association, Mr. McElwain told his audience that fraud and forgery have increased drastically over the past five years to a total of 17,000 to 18,000 cases a year, accounting for ten times as large a cash loss as burglaries and holdups.

Belleville, like most other communities in the country, has not managed to avoid the blight of the bad cheque business, but, according to area bankers and the city's police, the problem isn't as bad here as it is elsewhere.

Nate Hayes, manager of the Front Street branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, attended the Kingston seminar and says he believes that fraud is a relatively minor problem in Belleville.

"Occasionally we seem to get a streak of incidents when we find a crew of forgers is operating in the area," Mr. Hayes said. "A group of professional crooks will sometimes hit a small city like Belleville and flood the area with spurious cheques and leave before the operation is discovered.

"The day of the master forger is long gone. Now you can manufacture just about anything. You just have to find a printer who isn't overly honest and he can produce anything for you that you want from bogus company cheques to somebody's old age pension. Some of the forgeries are mighty hard to detect."

Mr. Hayes expressed concern over the increasing incidence of "white collar crime" simply because it harms everyone's business image.

"Everyone suffers from a forgery operation," he said. "It casts a shadow of doubt on good, respectable local firms that are trying to have their cheques cashed and it upsets some customers when the banks take precautions to protect themselves and their clients.

"When you ask someone for identification, they seem to think you are questioning their honesty and sometimes they get upset. But the people should remember that a bank or a business is under no obligation to cash a cheque simply because you have one. We have a responsibility to protect ourselves and our customers."

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie agrees with the bankers on the problems posed by white collar crime and fraud schemes.

Last year his department investigated a total of 181 reported fraud cases and in the first three months of this year they have had to investigate a total of 37 cases.

Chief Crosbie attributes the rise in fraud cases to the way people live in North America. We have taken to living on credit rather than paying our way as we go along, he said, and as a result, we have become sloppy in the way we handle our money.

"White collar crime will continue to rise in the years to come," the chief said. "In fact it has already caught on with some young people as the way to live. We've had cases where some youngsters have used stolen credit cards to travel right across the country."

In fact, the situation has reached the point where Chief Crosbie has had businessmen ask him for identification, when he tried to cash a cheque while wearing his full dress uniform.

Bankers and police agree that there is no simple way to stop fraud schemes and white collar crime. You simply have to exercise some common sense and exert some form of control on the way you handle cheques and credit cards, they say.

Criminals are now printing their own company cheques; have their own cheque writing machines; open up $5 bank accounts all over town and deposit part of the cheques and later withdraw the money. In some cases they even have their own stamps for certified cheques.

Faced with that kind of organization, the police, at times feel helpless, and they require the assistance of merchants and the general public if they are going to combat crime.

One simple way for merchants to assist the police and themselves, Chief Crosbie said, is to establish a definite cheque cashing procedure.

If you are going to set up a system at your store, there are a couple of points you should keep in mind — driver licences are the least reliable of all identification documents as they can be obtained from the underworld for as little as $5; social security cards are the second least reliable.

A bank teller or a merchant should ask for more identification if he or she isn't certain about a person's identification. If a person is honest, he won't really mind. If he is a crook, he'll head for the door.

Credit card owners can also help reduce the threat of having a thief use their cards by notifying the company that issued the card and the police immediately after they realize they are missing.

New Phase

The United Community Services new administrator Gordon Mullin is in Belleville and he is busy settling into the new job.

However, if Mr. Mullin has been in the city only a few days it is likely that he has been fully appraised of the controversy of the past regarding UCS operations; and it is more than likely that he will soon learn of it at first hand.

Be that as it may, Mr. Mullin comes here with first-rate credentials as a fund raiser and executive in similar roles in Montreal. We have the feeling that the United Community Services and the fund raising and social planning that go with this organization will move forward from this point on. It will not do so, however, if its program becomes the target of constant criticism. Some criticism of community organizations is healthy and natural; it loses impact however, and degenerates into a merely divisive, rancorous thing when it becomes a political football involving the same players almost day in day out.

So it is too much to suggest, as the UCS moves into another phase, that we have done in this community with the controversy of the past? Too much to ask that where negative seeds have been sown we plant instead a desire to move forward for the common good — this to include the just requirements of the needy in Belleville, as when Christmas rolls around, and of the many organizations that are members of the United Appeal campaign here?

Let's be critical yes. But let's be fair also. Positive too, rather than destructive.

PM's Fresh Image

That Prime Minister Trudeau is a very experienced politician is clear. As we have noted already, we are the days of Trudeaumania and the virtually blind worship and mainly female adulation that went with it. In its place his followers are responding to a new phenomenon: that of a hard-nosed leader who speaks more compellingly and eruditely than ever, a man who believes that attack is the best means of defence. Interesting too, that in appearance, the Prime Minister today still looks very much the slim, clean-cut man of 1968. He has the look of a man who believes in physical fitness and takes care of himself. Gone too is the long-hair that he sported for a time. He may be thinning on top, but the look now is trim and there remains as ever the keen mind and the image of one who is a skilled politician.

Health Hazard

It is alarming to hear of the possibility of concentrations of lead in water boiled in electric kettles. There is a potential health hazard here, especially where children are concerned and it raises a question as to the make-up and efficiency of the kettles themselves.

Indeed we have heard of one purchased in a downtown store in Belleville which gave up the ghost after being in use for only a month or so. The man who bought it says he has been meaning to take it in for repair, but now plans to wait for the researchers' report on which one are suspect. Meantime he is quite happy with an ordinary kettle that boils handily on the stove.

Not Again

The summer and boating season is not long under way and we see that the Bay Bridge has suffered a mechanical failure already. Any repetition of this and the chances for an overhead bridge is bound to be remote. The existing facility is only good so long as the swing bridge is operating smoothly. As it is, public patience with even a minimum of delay as boats go through is not enough. One or two more breakdowns could be the last straw.

Changes But 'No Purge' If PCs Win

Government Bureaucrats Viewed as 'Liberal Underground'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So Conservative Leader Stanfield, while not exactly confirming Tory Senator Grattan O'Leary's claim that "when we get in this time we're going to fire a devil of a lot" of senior public servants, has conceded that "there will have to be changes at the top level."

But he has stood firm and unbending on the pledge of "no purge."

However, he has said he is aware of pressure in the party to "housecleaan" what any number of Conservative MPs and Senators from time to time have publicly declared to be a civil service largely loyal only to the Liberals.

Well, who has said what?

"Ask John Diefenbaker." Senator O'Leary has said, "he had suspicion of all these people."

And while Dief has left very little on the written record about it, that was the plain truth.

Exempting a chosen few senior public servants who were close to him as Prime Minister, he often has spoken of how others gave less than fully loyal acsance any government that has a right to expect from its senior public servants.

But Dief fired — or, more acquirately, accorded the resignation — of only one, former Trade Deputy Mitchell Sharp.

Senator O'Leary is on the record with the disclosure that when the Diefenbaker Conservatives first came to power the senior public service, schooled through 22 continuous years of Liberal rule, regarded the Tories as "occupying troops" to be driven out by subtle obstruction and if all else failed, quiet sabotage.

The Senate Hansard has recorded him as warning of the "secret agents" of the senior public service, and claiming to be able to name 10 who had more to say "than any member of the cabinet."

Senator Donald Cameron of Banff, an independent liberal, is on the Senate Hansard with alarms over what he called the "secret government" of the mandarins ruling by self-proclaimed "divine right."

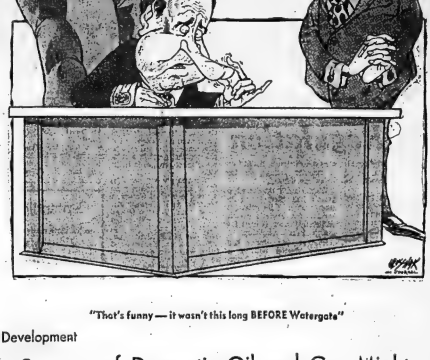
He has spoken of them as "little Hitlers," and as "the masters, not servants" or the taxpayer, forging for themselves" a self-perpetuating circle of power."

Alvin Hamilton, minister of Northern Affairs and of Agriculture in the Diefenbaker cabinet, has been quoted as speaking of the public service brass as "The Civil Mafia," and for variation, as "The Liberal Underground."

Another Conservative who lashed out in bitterness against the senior government staff for what he charged was its betrayal of the Diefenbaker ministry, has been James Baskin, for three Parliaments member for Renfrew South.

He told of walking into a deputy-minister's office only after protracted negotiations for the appointment — and having the mandarin kick his feet up on his desk in my face and tell me that we Tories were the bunch of carpetbaggers who he and his friends soon would never set foot of power."

Toronto Conservative MP Paul Hellyer, former deputy to Prime Minister Trudeau, put into writing in his indictment of Tax Reform. just how he had it figured this Mandarin-Manipulator — in - HiFa-Places worked.



The resident socialists of the senior public service, as he saw them, sold the tax package to former Finance Minister Benson, who, in turn, stuck the government with it, compelled the Trudeau Liberals to con the taxpayers into reluctant acceptance of it rather than face facts by admitting it had been "had" by their bureaucrat bosses.

Mr. Hellyer has argued how as Defence Minister he was unable to make headway because he was able to catch the admirals, air marshals and generals who attempted obstruction.

But he lost his battles with the bureaucracy when, as Trudeau's Transport Ministry, he was helpless to dismiss his deputies when they fought him on his housing policy.

He personally, and not his public service mandarins, put together the policy, he has recounted, and so to demonstrate just who held the supreme power in his department, he charged, they deliberately destroyed him.

Odd thing, though, that although both Liberals and Conservatives have protested the power of the deputies, not one claim has mounted to a veto of government policy, there has been no "purge" as such in nearly 40 years—not since former Prime Minister Bennett liquidated the old Department of the Interior, sacking the staff.

Indian Development

New Sources of Domestic Oil and Gas Might Accrue If Nuclear Know-How Used Peacefully

By AL COLLETTI
The Canadian Press

On the surface, it's hard to equate the large sum of money India must have spent to test her first nuclear device with the pressing needs of a chronically poor population. Shortage of food is a main problem.

Last week, Henry Labouisse, executive director of the United Nations Children's Fund, reported that between 400 million and 500 million children in the world suffer from severe malnutrition.

At least 80 per cent, and perhaps more, of the world's severe malnutrition is in two geographical areas, says Lester Brown of the overseas development council in Washington. They are:

—The Indian sub-continent, which includes about 720 million people of all ages in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. Of course, not all of them are malnourished.

—Africa, particularly the Sahel countries of West Africa, plus Ethiopa, where prolonged drought has made the problem severe.

The income per person in the industrialized countries is about 17 times that of India. Their budgets are able to finance production of nuclear weaponry if they desire.

The United States, Russia, Britain, France and China were the sole members of the nuclear club until India joined them at the weekend.

India's atomic energy program is a relatively modest one, running an estimated $40 million a year for development.

But turning out nuclear devices, preparing the sites and maintaining security, is a fast and costly preparation even under a budget-conscious setup as in India.

India has brushed aside talk that she is developing a nuclear arsenal. No doubt she has such potential but as far as is known has no delivery system.

India says her nuclear test Saturday, conducted 328 feet underground in a remote desert area, was strictly a peaceful nuclear experiment.

In that context, the nuclear devices might be used for such peaceful purposes as opening up new underground salt and gas reserves, and saving the country the extra millions it now must pay for imported oil and fertilizer.

Peaceful nuclear explosions also might be used for earthmoving projects and to uncover mineral resources, a job that would take too long by conventional means.

When the cost of imported oil went up 400 per cent, India was one of the countries hardest hit. The extra import bill, not only for oil but for food and fertilizer, will affect the basis of her next five-year plan.

In 1973, India's bill for petroleum alone was $415 million. This year, it is expected to reach $1.3 billion, overshadowing the total aid effort from the outside world.

But it now will be harder to convince aid-giving countries of India's needs. The question will surely be asked: How come your needs are so great when you can afford a nuclear weapon?

But if India can blast out a new domestic oil and gas source with a nuclear device, the picture might change drastically in her favor.

Stuart Clarkson Is Civil Service Boss in Place Of Military Man

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Although it perhaps may not be too evident to you, some improvement is to be expected in our Ontario public service.

There was a statement a short while ago which didn't get much attention but which could have considerable impact on the 75,000 or so Ontario government employees.

The statement was that Lt.-Gen. W. A. B. Anderson was being replaced as chairman of the Civil Service Commission by Stuart Clarkson.

The transfer of Gen. Anderson (he has become secretary of the management board of cabinet) should mean a different character and spirit in the civil service.

It isn't all that easy to put a finger on just how the change will show itself and what form it will take.

But this former top army man has practically made his job directly from the armed services and inevitably he brought with him the attitudes and outlook of the lifetime career soldier.

The civil service itself became a happy haven for other old soldiers, and perhaps most lacking during his regime was any sign of vision or imagination in the handling of our government employees.

Stuart Clarkson is an old pro civil servant who has been a deputy minister with the province since 1959, and prior to that had long service with Ottawa.

He knows what it is all about.

A mild man of great intelligence, he has handled half a dozen jobs in the government with distinction.

But one of all he knows what it is like to work in the government service, what conditions have to be met, and particularly what qualities are desirable in the government employee.

(Top among them is feeling for the public and some "political" sense.)

He should make an excellent commissioner.

Election: An Overseas View

The New Zealand Herald

For 18 months the Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. Trudeau, has headed a minority government which was kept in power with the aid of the 31 members of the leftist New Democratic Party. Now the leader of that small party, Mr. David Lewis, has made good his threat to "pull the plug" on Mr. Trudeau and has forced an election on July 8, comfortably in the Canadian summer.

The complaints of the New Democrats do not sound unfamiliar in New Zealand. They assert that the Government has failed to help pensioners or others on low or fixed incomes, to deal with the housing crisis and to remove "control [sic] inequalities" in the tax system. They reject a Budget, which calls for a 28 per cent increase in Government spending, increased taxes for big corporations and benefits for people with lower incomes.

A sense of unrest seems to pervade Canada. Inflation has been running at more than 10 per cent. Food and housing have become drastically more expensive. There has been severe strikes of postal workers, airport firemen and St. Lawrence Seaway pilots.

Politically, the New Democrats have become uneasy because their backing of the Liberals has not increased their public support. They evidently judge that they have gained as much as they can expect to do from holding the balance of power and that they may as well chance their arm in an election.

That must be an especially anxious time for the Conservatives, who had 106 seats against the 109 held by the Liberals (a party needs 133 seats for a majority in the House). The Conservative leader, Mr. Robert Stanfield, is generally regarded as solid but rather colorless. A new bus by the Conservatives could have the party soon seeking a new head.

Unfortunately for prospects of political stability, opinion polls suggest that the public mood has not crystallised into majority support for any party. What Canada always needs (and seldom gets) is a Government with a range of support from all the Provinces.

At present the Liberals are overshadowed by a party of Quebec with accessory support from Ontario; the Conservatives are strong in Ontario and the west, with some Maritimes support; the New Democrats have no seats east of Ontario; and the Social Creditors are entirely from Quebec. Can the coming election evoke from Canada any greater sense of confederation?

VON and the United Way

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

A recent editorial in your newspaper referred to the possibility that the Quinte and District Labour Council was considering the withdrawal of support from this Year's United Way Campaign.

This is disturbing to us in the Victorian Order of Nurses, and we wish to voice our support of those whose volunteer efforts make possible our efficient campaign in aid of the work of 12 non-profit agencies in our community.

It should be pointed out that these agencies in turn are guided by the Belleville citizens serving on the advisory boards of the 12 agencies in a voluntary role.

Also, one should be aware that 'for each dollar contributed to the United Way fund, many times that amount is contributed in terms of agency services.

For example, in the case of the Victorian Order of Nurses, for every dollar provided to us from the United Way fund, more than six dollars is spent for home nursing services in Belleville. In addition than 6000 home nursing visits were made in local community and 1891 of these were made to citizens who were either unable to pay for the visit or who could afford to pay only a fraction of the cost.

This is why we believe the United Way campaign is so vital to Belleville and why it is deserving of support.

YMCA's Request For Grant

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This year by way of a written submission to city council the Belleville YMCA has requested a grant of $12,500—up 4,500 from last year's request.

This, of course is in addition to the $23,520 they expect to reap off from the United Way Appeal and the exemption from the general rate for residential properties. All, a grand total of $44,451.27 if the general rate remains unchanged at 44 mills, likely, so in all probability it will increase much more.

Now it seems that among certain of our citizens, it is considered the quite thing to do to ask where all this money is going.

Lets take a look: $25,800 is destined for the salaries of two professional staff. This is for the salaries of the clerical staff, $10,400 is for the salaries of part time staff; the heat, light and building maintenance; total $62,400.

In order to substantiate their claim upon the taxpayers every year the White Elephant of upper Victoria Ave. takes the hog's share of the United Way Appeal, which the Belleville city council into grants and tax exemptions. I would like to know matter what the average citizen thinks of this "rip off" in terms of cost, our city fathers will always give in. Of course when you add the Chamber of Commerce and the Y.M.C.A. it all amounts to a sizeable sum.

Briefly, when you boil it all down with no fancied accounting being rendered to the taxpayers from last year's estimate that we, the taxpayers are not in fact subsidizing the wages of the managers and the professional hangers-on that these operations seem to attract.

The policy seems to be that if you spend $200 you get $17,000.

So I quote Ernest Benedetti —"With all its Sham, Drudgery and Broken Dreams, it is still a Beautiful World."

Whatever one's political affiliation, one accomplishment of the 29th Parliament should find favor with all Belleviliians, without exception.

One of the last pieces of legislation to sneak through before dissolution was Bill C-27, a law that promises long-awaited relief for communities smarred by unsightly, noisy and traffic-constricting railway lines.

And, pleased as he undoubtedly is that his Conservative party has an opportunity to assume power at the polls July 8, Hastings MP Jack Ellis is one who will applaud the Trudeau government's support for the relocation of rail lines in urban centres.

As Mr. Ellis noted in an April 30 letter to Belleville city council, such legislation had been promised by the Trudeau government before the 1972 election.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford presented the House with a bill that, basically, offered municipalities 50 per cent federal financial support for the cost of transportation studies and, if followed through, the actual relocation of train tracks.

The subject matter had long been of interest to Bellevillians.

"Seven or eight years ago when I was mayor of Belleville," Mr. Ellis noted during clause-by-clause debate of Bill C-27, "I discussed with senior officials of the CPR the possibility of moving these tracks. They felt this would be possible, although the cost was prohibitive.

"The railway would not undertake the removal, and the city could not afford to do it as the cost of removing the track was equal to the entire city budget for one year."

Under the terms of the new bill, not only is there promise of federal funds, but strong indication of support from the railways. Mr. Basford hesitated to put this in actual percentage points, but forecast: "I would certainly hope that in any relocation planning process the railways would participate.

"That has certainly been the experience with some smaller relocation schemes. In the studies in Winnipeg . . . the railroads have been extremely active participants in the study and planning process."

Hansard records Mr. Ellis giving the House some background for his support of Belleville track relocation.

"The tracks traverse the entire south boundary of the city, right along the shore of the beautiful Bay of Quinte. I should point out that the tracks run north of the city on the west and on the east, and only dip down to the south as they go through the city. So the physical relocation would not be unreasonable.

"Some provision would need to be made for those industries which would remain in the south end of the city until they wished to move. In the interim those industries would need to be protected.

"History says that the CPR forced that particular track location on the city. I would not say that it was blackmailed, but the city fathers were told that if they wanted to be served by the railway the rail lines would need to run along the waterfront.

"As the railway was necessary for the development of the community and industry, which in those days tended to locate along the waterfront for reasons of easy access, it did not seem unreasonable to build the tracks on that valuable property."

Now, Mr. Ellis explained, there are two sound reasons to relocate the tracks, other than pure esthetics: safety and economics.

The Hastings MP noted that, despite warning signals, one of the seven or eight CPR level crossings in the city's south end was the scene of a recent fatality.

"Once the tracks are gone," he continued, "property values in the area would increase, and that would help the city coffers. If it were not for the tracks, some of that land would be the most valuable in the city."

Bill C-27 leaves unanswered many questions, not the least of which concerns disposition of valuable property on which tracks to be moved now rest.

Yet Parliament appeared convinced such legislation was long overdue to remedy some of the ills that had been byproducts of Canada's early railway boom.

Take, for instance, that "anachronism of Southern Ontario" Jack Ellis referred to in the Commons the Pinnacle Street spur line.

As recently as his mayoralty term, MP Ellis saw rail traffic sharing Belleville's second major downtown traffic artery.

So if he doesn't profess to being capable of moving mountains, Jack Ellis at least knows he can budge a railroad.

Schools' Use of Community Is Near Saturation

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

It's no accident that Learning, a Co-operative Community Enterprise was chosen by Hastings County as the suggested theme for Education Week 1974.

Moving education out of the schools and into the community is an officially approved policy.

In theory it makes sense: using the resources of the community to give kids credits in optional courses is something practical they will use the rest of their lives. In the case of elementary school pupils, it gets them out of the cozy confort of the school and proves to them that learning has practical applications.

Hastings county schools have moved as far as their resources allow in the direction of community involvement, hence the choice of the education week motto.

Credit courses that take students out of school are proliferating in secondary schools. It's impossible to list them all, but three courses that will be offered for the first time next fall will serve as examples:

One of them, although innovative, follows the classic pattern of classroom work supplemented by excursions into the community. It is a municipal law course, drafted by Ron Bailey, a teacher at North Hastings High School in Bancroft, and former city of Belleville employee.

Mr. Bailey saw the need for practical course that would guide people through the labyrinth of municipal functioning and explain the reasons for much of the bureaucratic red tape. Among other things, the course covers citizens and their functions and recent trends and future predictions.

A full credit course to be offered at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc will be given almost entirely outside the school. Ronald Powell will teach the course in outdoor education he introduced in Brighton last year. It will emphasize geography, camping and recreational skills.

Ten students from each of four Belleville schools will participate in a community involvement course worth four credits. The students will spend one day a week in school and the other four working in helping agencies such as the children's aid, police station and hospital.

But it occurs to us that using the community as a school has some about as far as it can go.

Agencies, businesses and industries have just about reached the limit of their capacity to cope with students.

A large chunk of employees' time goes into assisting students with queries, conducting tours and providing supervision for school programs. The time is given willingly. Most employers and their staffs are flattered by the attention they receive from schools and are eager to share their knowledge. But if the experience in other parts of the province is any indication, a wide-open program of community co-operation will dictate the hiring by many businesses of full-time information officers.

These officers are not public relations men. They are knowledgeable members of the staffs of businesses or agencies who devote themselves to students' queries, conduct tours, assist with students' research and go out to schools to lecture.

Only the largest organization can afford info officers and as soon as they add an extra employee to serve students, they are, in effect, subsidizing education.

Come to think of it, there is something Machiavellian in the ministry of education's strong endorsement of community involvement in the learning process.

Another Minority Government Foreseen as Result of Election

Keith Jones has only been in Canada for about a year, since leaving his native England.

"I think the Liberals will get in with a majority. I couldn't say exactly how many seats they will get.

"Look at the last budget. I don't think the other two parties could have done much more with it. If the Conservatives get in, what kind of budget do you think they would bring in?"

Robert Johnston is a private teacher. "I foresee a Liberal minority government with Mr. Trudeau picking up about 117 seats. I don't think Mr. Stanfield has quite enough charisma to win.

"The people have vindicated policies that the Liberals have brought in. I think the Conservatives will get about 112 seats," said Mr. Johnston.

Harry Christopher says he has mixed feelings about the situation and about politicians.

"I still have about 50 days to make up my mind but I think I'll vote Conservative. I think the Conservatives should be in power for a couple of years to give them a chance to see what they can do."

Fred Yorke works for Trudeau Motors: "I plan to vote NDP. I think they might get in and will do more when they get in. They couldn't do much worse than we have it now.

"I think it will be pretty close but the NDP might get in with a minority government."

James Gray works at Northern Electric: "I'd vote for the NDP. But I don't know exactly how many seats they will end up with.

"When you talk about Trudeau and Stanfield, one's the same as the other, I think the NDP will do better this time around than the last time."

Alex Miller: "I honestly believe Trudeau will get back in, I think the NDP will make the gains this time. But we still will end up being a minority.

"As for seats, I think the Liberals will end up with 95 seats, the Conservatives with 89 and the rest going to the NDP and the Creditistes," said Mr. Miller.

Labor's Political Action Said Labor's Right

By BERT GERLING

Few people are considered more disgusting than hypocrites. And even fewer stand as great a chance of succeeding, particularly when hypocrisy parades under the guise of pontification.

Which brings us to last week's FEATURE on the Quinte and District Labor Council meeting.

Maurice Switzer, decried at length that a notice of motion served at the recent QDLC meeting would lead to organized labor's boycott of the next United Way campaign if Belleville's YMCA received a grant in lieu of taxes in the upcoming city budget. Further, the notice of motion is an attempt at blackmailing Belleville's staunch City Council in doing labor's bidding, politically; so Mr. Switzer wrote.

Mr. Switzer hastens to point out, after berating organized labor for opening its mouth, that few people deny the right of employees to have differences of opinion with the people who pay their wages. Indeed, he almost proclaims that labor has the right to unite for economic purposes — but not for using its collective economic clout for political reasons.

In other words, labor is being advised that it may collectively pick the crumbs from the rich man's table, but labor must not have a spokesman demanding that there be a few meat-bones among the crumbs.

The comments? Well, Mr. Switzer chides labor for speaking up.

Also for Mr. Switzer, his article is flawed. Labor unions purport to serve the interest of their members; persuasion, inducement, lobbying, political armtwisting, etc., are some of the methods used to get results. All special interest groups employ one or the other method to further their goals. Had Mr. Switzer been more acute, he might have remarked in passing that a plurality in City Council consists of members of various business organizations, that no Labor Council member is among them; and that the Chamber of Commerce, as well as the United Community Service and YMCA, have used clandestine meetings and grant submissions by letter in preparation for their annual raid on the municipal piggy-bank.

In Mr. Switzer's words, there are "an estimated 500 card-carrying unionists in Belleville, not to mention voting members of their families, and this IS a civic electorate."

Nearly 500 families closely associated through economic and local interests represent as much political clout as subscribers to Reader's Digest. It is my advice to these organized people to recognize their collective power, to elect their own candidates and to vote them out of office who have been balking labor for years, and to approach it with condescending flattery near election time! They are deadpan serious, however, and yet expect it to keep them in office. Surely, this IS an absurd situation crying for remedy.

There are some matters that are NOT questions of individual conscience. The acceptance of the greying-up of downtown Belleville is among them, as long as dozens of families live in hovels with dirt-floors, leaking roofs and crumbling ceilings; without interior plumbing and safe wiring.

The clique profiteering from this disgrace exists hand-in-greased-palm with certain of our politicians, who eat their cheese and pursue their consciences in accord with impunity. It is as much a matter of individual conscience to vote them out of office, and keep them out, as it is to attend one's preferred church.

They say that religion and journalism don't mix. The latter's effort to pontificate itself out of business doesn't blend the cocktail any better.

* * *

Ed. Note — Interestingly enough, at no time does Mr. Gerling attempt to deny the accusation of the article he finds offensive, namely the charge that approval of Mr. Ian Reilly's motion for a United Way boycott would make Quinte District Labor Council affiliates the equivalent of black mailers.

Reader Would Prefer To Develop Theatre With Canadian Plays

By BILL CULP

The presentation by The Shaw Festival Theatre of George Bernard Shaw's melodrama "The Devil's Disciple" marked the overwhelming public press, radio and institutional support for the same has aggravated me to "hang a little crepe" on this latest endeavor by Belleville's Quinte Arts Council.

After the dramatic and seemingly progressive step in the arts by the Council with the 1973 production of Canadian playwright George Ryga's "Ecstasy of Rita Joe" by the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, the Arts Council's decision to entertain and enlighten Quinte audiences with this garrulous, modest English colossal blunder by a dead Septagnar is a totally Philistine act.

Coupled with The Belleville Theatre Guild's latest undertaking of another mother England dialogue, this summer at the fact that such a thing as the Shaw Festival Theatre exists, that the Canadian government lavishes hundreds of thousands of dollars on that same dinosaur.

It would be outraged that that same government provides the charity pittance of $7,000 to the Tarragon Theatre, Toronto (the what?) which is dedicated solely to Canadian works.

He would verbally lacerate the Quinte Arts Council, the Hastings Board of Education and its English teachers for prompting with pride over their supreme achievement of lending such high quality elitist quaint and reactionary theatre.

Shaw and the British have not had identity crises. We Canadians do!

To top off this treachery, the Hastings County Board of Education and county English teachers have the gall to not only "treat" county students to a special matinee performance of "Disciple" but have had the short-sightedness of altering their course of study to include this Shavian surplus.

No such effort was made for "Rita Joe", either as suggested reference, possible attendance or video taping, let alone a special matinee or course alteration!

This production of "The Devil's Disciple" has not only sabotaged productions of Canadian works, it has jaded the future generation of theatre goers and cultural-minded, and it has re-enforced the British bastion in Canada's theatre, culture, mores and tradition.

Shaw has nothing to do with this country, its people, its folklore, myths or customs. The Shaw Festival is crippling Canadian cultural independence.

The Quinte Arts Council, I believe, is a group of dedicated, well-meaning people. However, they have failed to see the significance of that upon which they have embarked.

Because of support for the "self-indulgent thing at Niagara" (George Ryga) there exists the dangerous possibility that what we might call Canadian theatre will continue to be the crippled imitative exercise in futility that it seems to be.

Shaw himself would doubtless be laughing at his failure at the fact that such a thing as the Shaw Festival Theatre exists; that the Canadian government lavishes hundreds of thousands of dollars on that same dinosaur.

It would be outraged that that same government provides the charity pittance of $7,000 to the Tarragon Theatre, Toronto (the what?) which is dedicated solely to Canadian works.

He would verbally lacerate the Quinte Arts Council, the Hastings Board of Education and its English teachers for prompting with pride over their supreme achievement of lending such high quality elitist quaint and reactionary theatre.

Shaw and the British have not had identity crises. We Canadians do!

Discover Spring On The Blossom-Lined Roads of Prince Edward County

Story and Pictures By Isabel Huggan

A drive in Prince Edward County this weekend is an ideal way to greet spring and reap the rewards of the season.

Here's a suggested 56-mile round-trip route that will take you to some interesting places through beautiful country.

Designed for people who didn't know the area well enough to venture off on unmarked gravel roads, this trip is paved all the way down to the lake and back, and provides for indoor as well as outdoor excursions.

Start your drive on Highway 14, where the causeway joins Belleville to Prince Edward County. (If you have a young family, they might benefit from a room at Zwicker's Island Centennial Park before settling down for a car journey.

Drive along Highway 14 as far as the Mountain View Cheese Factory (open on Sunday until 5. p.m.) where you can purchase new or old cheddar, and 55-cent bags of curd to munch during your tour.

When you get to the turn-off for the hamlet of Mountain View, make a right turn on to the road that takes you up through the village on a curving road which brings you to County Road 2. Turn right and stay right when you come to it in the road onto County Road 19. Drive along to Ameliasborgh on Roblin's Lake, where the Ameliasborgh Museum is now open for the season, from Tuesday to Saturday between 10.30 a.m. and 5 p.m., and on Sunday until 6.30.

On the museum grounds there's a log cabin, furnished as it might have been in 1890 when it was built. Inside the museum itself there are many new displays of local historical relics.

Turn back out of Ameliasborgh the way you came, until you arrive back at the junction of County Roads 19 and 2. Turn right (south) on County Road 2 and drive the nine miles down to Wellington. The countryside is rolling and well-wooded for the first few miles and then flattens as you near the lake.

On arrival in Wellington, turn right and you're directly in front of Crabapple Crafts, the boutique that Roger and Cathy Miller run in the front rooms of their Main Street home. Here you can buy locally-made pottery, batik hangings, braided mats and assorted other hand-crafted goods. The Millers, who help Jean Woodward run the crafts store, are open for business from noon until 7 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays in May and June.

Wellington is known for the attractive old homes that line the shady Main Street, and if you are interested in architecture there are many opportunities to observe the intricate gingerbread and elegant porches here.

The Wellington Museum, open on weekends only until July, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. costs 50 cents for adults but is free for children. The museum has several collections of varied interest, including old dolls, glass, buttons, and books about Prince Edward county.

If you feel like stretching your legs or tasting the water to see if it's warm enough for wading, there's a public beach in Wellington where you can stroll.

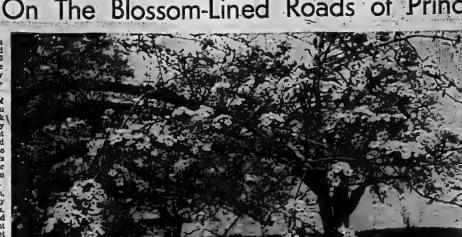
Leaving the village on Highway 33 west, you'll have the sparkling lake on your left and apple orchards on either side. About two miles out of Wellington there are a number of picnic tables on the lake side of the highway. If you've packed a picnic lunch, it's a lovely spot to stop and eat under the trees.

Continuing along Highway 33, you'll pass through Rose Hill and Hillier, and drive past the reed-filled waters of Pleasant Bay where red-winged blackbirds abound.

Highway 33 passes by, Consecon, which you can enter by a side road off the highway which joins up again on the other side of town. Consecon Lake on your right might tempt you to stop if you didn't take that waterside walk in Wellington.

A little over five miles from Consecon, at the edge of Carrying Place, you come to County Road 3, and a sign pointing off to the right, Redenersville, 8 miles. Turn here to travel one of the prettiest roads in the area, bordered by handsome homes and farms beside the Bay of Quinte.

One of the attractions of this route is the array of blossoms you'll see around you as you travel. There are several large orchards along this road, and the apple trees all promise to be blooming this weekend. If they are, you can take free wagon rides through the Bonter family orchards at Bayview Orchards (between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Sunday The thrill of passing under the fragrant cloud of pink flowers should be a treat for every member of the family.



At the Bayview Orchards you can still buy McIntosh apples, and get seasonal luxuries like maple syrup and fresh asparagus too. There are several barns along this route (Quinte Orchards is another) where you should be able to buy springtime goodies.

On this route you'll pass by Eugene Moshynski's Art Gallery, where some of his paintings are on display at the moment (others are being shown in Trenton for the month of May). His home and gallery are on the bay-side of the road, as is the Cameron Art Gallery, a mile or two further down the road. Here you can see the work of the Cameron family — Allan, Donnah and Donnah Cameron — and observe by appointment. Have your lunch served and surrounded by the paintings. Phone 392-6471 for more information and reservations.

Entering Redenersville a mile or so past the Cameron's, you'll see The Country Store, on the right side of the road. This is an excellent source of "hand-scooped" ice cream cones, as well as being a good place for a family browse.

One the other side of Redenersville you'll see Lennan's Antiques and Metal Craft Shop, one of the many antique havens in Prince Edward County.

This road will lead you back to Highway 14 and the causeway to Belleville...home again after a full afternoon of adventure.

Orchards are filled with blossoms this weekend and lilacs bloom by the roads.

The Country Store—Revived and Thriving

Ever had a dream about owning an old country store? You know the kind — where old codgers gossip by the woodstove winter evenings and the shelves are crammed with oil lamps and jam jars and old books and bits of this and that.

Paul Boyd of Belleville dreamed about this kind of place and found it in Redenersville.

"It was covered with cigarette billboards and soft drink advertisements when I first knew it," he recalls.

"But then I saw a photograph of the store taken 75 years ago with the proprietor out on the front step. I knew I could make it look like that again.

"The cheapest thing was buying the store. The hard part has been fixing it up, trying to restore the air of nonchalance of a century ago at the same time as keeping it a useful shopping centre for the village people."

In the nearly four years since he began the project, Mr. Boyd has changed both the interior and exterior of the building to achieve the look of yesterday.

The porch now resembles the old photograph. And inside there's a pot of fresh coffee ready for you at the door.

On one side there are the staples of any grocery store — the cereals, soups, cigarettes and household supplies that are the mainstays of The Country Store during the winter months.

"The groceries pay the bills," is the way Mr. Boyd puts it.

On the other side is devoted to the crafts and antiques that draw crowds during the tourist season, and attract local people all year round.

"People are beginning to drop in regularly just to see what we have," Mr. Boyd says.

Much of the merchandise is reproduced locally, and it is hoped that as time passes more craftsmen from the area will bring objects to sell.

Carl Conway, who has worked in the store for the past three years along with his mother Florence, (assisted by Margaret Cairns and Verna Goldfarb) points out some of the local work.

These petit-point rings are made by Robert Elston, all this pottery is from John and Kathyrn Cody and these candles are done by the Allans, all Belleville artisans.

"Harry Holland of Bloomfield makes these little painted wooden boats for just 75 cents each, and these wooden shirts are made by Bell Shirts of Belleville.

"On this front table are prints and notepaper of Hastings county houses by Jerry Stapley, and over there is a painting by Lindsay Haslam, the artist who lives next door."

As Mr. Conway continues his guided tour of the store, he explains that some items are imported, because they can be bought more cheaply than Canadian - made.

"Take these South American wall hangings," he says. "We can sell them for $20, but if they were made in this country, material and labor would raise the final cost to at least $100."

Some things are commercially-produced, such as cotton print pot holders and a selection of jars.

Others are antiques, lamps and glassware and utensils of all kinds. In a bookshelf at the back of the store there are piles of old books from libraries that have closed.

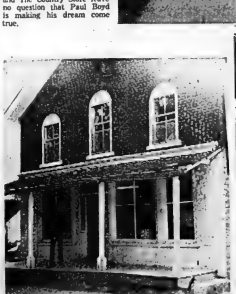
"We have some very old dictionaries and encyclopedias that we lend out to the kids in Redenersville when they need them for school," says Mr. Boyd. "They always bring them back."

The Country Store also has several pieces of antique furniture, like the pine corner cupboard that holds a selection of pottery. Most furniture is put to some use in the store, but just about everything is for sale, whether it's covered with merchandise or not.

At the back of the store is a small art gallery, recently begun by Mr. Boyd as a place for local artists to show their work.

Presently on display are paintings and water colors by Nadine Dolan, and pottery and weaving by Marion Closson, both Belleville artists. Cheese and crackers are spread out on a pine table for viewers to nibble as they enjoy the art work.

In one corner of the gallery stands a stately old pump organ, made in Medoc in 1870. In good working order, and perfectly refinished, the organ represents Paul Boyd's goals as well as anything in the store: it's old, local and unique.



Restored and functioning beautifully, the pump organ and The Country Store bring no question that Paul Boyd is making his dream come true.

Just Because It's Orange...

Afloat in a boat — unless it's a canoe or a rowboat — the law says you must carry one Ministry of Transport approved life jacket for each person on board. The trick is to know the difference between a life jacket and the overwhelming number of personal flotation devices offered for sale.

Just because it's orange it won't necessarily save your life.

First off, MOT approved life jackets are labelled "small vessel regulation life jackets". They come in two types and three sizes. Both types are traditional vest and a slab type with a keyhole opening for the head. When you buy an approved life jacket, you should get a folder explaining use and care. The sizes are for persons under 50 pounds, those between 45 and 90 pounds and for persons over 90 pounds.

Personal flotation devices don't say they're not approved, so check for the MOT label. There is a government standard regulating the devices but compliance is purely voluntary. In actual fact these devices aren't forced to meet any performance standards before being offered for sale.

You can find more information on life jackets in the June issue of Canadian Consumer.

If you're never quite sure just how much meat substitute is needed in your diet, here are some guidelines: the equivalent of a four ounce serving of meat is four tablespoons of peanut butter, two eggs or one cup of baked beans. Children under 10 need only 1½ servings of protein daily, other persons need two.

Knee deep in spring home renovations.

Keep in mind that the federal government has extended the Hazardous Products Act to ensure the use of safety glazing material in locations where ordinary glass might be a hazard.

All sliding patio doors, shower or tub enclosures and most types of storm doors offered for sale must be safety glazed.

The regulations — in effect since January— should help reduce the 10,000 annual cuts and contusions involving architectural glass.

Everything in its season.

An old saw but an apt one when you're thinking about saving food dollars. Here are best-buy dates for Ontario-grown vegetables to help you plan your long range purchases.

You've already seen asparagus spring up all over; buy from now until June 15. Green and waxed beans are in season from the end of June until frost, like cabbage. Look for cauliflower from mid-June to frost. Carrots should begin appearing early in July. Mid-July to the end of November is the time for celery and sweet corn will be available from July 15 or so until frost. Field cucumbers should begin appearing about the end of June. You can begin looking for field lettuce as a few weeks, along with radishes and spinach. Ontario onions are appearing now but yellow cooking onions won't be generally available until mid-September.

Early potatoes should appear in mid-July this year. Mid-August is the time for green peppers. Field tomatoes will probably be a good buy beginning in mid-July. Rutabagas — turnips to non-purists— will be available in late August.

Mayor of St. John's

'Name the Street, I'll Tell You the Problem'

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Dorothy Wyatt says she believes she was elected the first woman mayor of this oldest North American seaport city because many residents felt she understood their problems.

"You name the street and I'll tell you where the problems are — I'll tell you the names of the people affected," she said in an interview.

She learned many of the problems—and the names—during her four years as the first woman member of the St. John's municipal council.

Mrs. Wyatt defeats the mayor's job as an opportunity to do something about the problems.

She began working 16 hours or more a day after being sworn in as mayor Jan. 1, yet says she still finds time to spend with her husband, Dr. Donald Wyatt, and two children.

"I'm doing this job full-time—it's never been done full-time," she said of the $10,000-a-year post.

Mrs. Wyatt faces a host of problems, ranging from lack of sewage lines to the difficulties of guiding downtown redevelopment through struggling with a tax system she dislikes.

Many of the streets leading uphill from the St. John's waterfront are lined with brightly-painted wooden houses which provide colorful backdrops for tourists' cameras. But some of the back streets and alleys screened by the ship's green, dirty buff and ochre-red buildings are lined with sagging slums.

"We have the highest occupancy and lowest availability of housing in Canada," Mrs. Wyatt said. "Which means there is no choice—people who live in deteriorated housing now have no place to live."

We still have families who have water delivered and sewage picked up."

Her council plans to eliminate the few remaining outdoor privies as quickly as possible.

Municipal taxation is stunned," she said in reference to the St. John's system of assessing property tax on the appraised rental value. Stunned is a Newfoundland expression usually taken to mean stupid, dim-witted or clumsy.

Mrs. Wyatt favors a municipal income tax which, among other things, would ease the burden on retired workers or those on fixed incomes.

Yet property taxes are not high by mainland Canadian standards. Most new homes, bungalows or two-storey houses, are taxed between $200 and $300 annually.

The tax rate might be higher if the city had to pay for police and fire protection.

Both the Newfoundland Constabulary, which polices St. John's, and the city's fire department are provincial forces. Costs of both are paid by the provincial government, although the city pays a token $15,000 annually for the fire department.

Mrs. Wyatt said however, the city loses revenue from traffic fines and parking-meter income which goes to the government.

Despite the day-to-day pressure of work Mrs. Wyatt said she has no intention of removing her hand from the city's pulse.

"By keeping in touch I know what's going on in the community . . . people are going to be able to continue to get me."

Although availability to the public means long hours, Mrs. Wyatt said she is prepared to accept inconvenience.

"I don't go to bed until about two or 2:30—I never did.

"That's my thinking time.

"I am obsessed with work but I can relax completely.

"What I go home from city

Mrs. Wyatt was first ball I close the door . . . that's it."

Mrs. Wyatt wasn't elected to city hall in 1969. Her election slogan at the time was "Dorothy Wyatt won't be quiet."

Many times during the following four years she found herself opposed to then mayor W. G. Adams and the other seven councillors. She was frequently heard—and still is—on radio open-line programs. There were times when her views brought criticism from the mayor and other councillors.

Then, as last November's municipal election approached, she announced she would run for mayor.

Mrs. Wyatt said she figured John's are in nursing, arts and education.

She said it did not seem she was able to do much as a councillor.

"The opportunity to make changes was in the mayor's chair."

About 1,100 persons volunteered to help her in the campaign against Mr. Adams, and another contestant.

"The volunteers came out of the woodwork," she said.

"Many people who had never worked for a candidate—so this was the tremendous kind of force where people wanted a different kind of leadership at city hall."

Not only were the campaign workers all volunteers but about 62 per cent were men, she said.

While the other mayoralty candidates placed newspaper and other advertisements Mrs. Wyatt's campaigners went from door to door.

She figures now the campaign cost her between $2,500 and $3,000 while her opponents may have spent up to $60,000.

The fact that she was a woman has nothing to do with her victory in the mayoralty race, Mrs. Wyatt said.

"The issue (of being a woman) never came up."

'Shacking Up' No Guarantee Marriage Will Turn Out Well

Dear Ann Landers: My parents and I have carried on a running argument for three months. Will you please try to see all sides of this question and answer it honestly?

My boyfriend and I have been going together for over a year. We plan to get married when he finds a job he really likes. I am working but I live at home and have to pay room and board.

I want to move out of my parents' house and live with my finance. We could make it financially, with my check added to his. My folks are against it. They say it is immoral. We say it's sensible. We just might find out after we live together a while that we don't like each other well enough to spend the rest of our lives together.

Isn't it better to shack up for a time than to get married, find out you've made a mistake and then get a divorce? How else can two people really learn all about one another's little quirks? What do you say?— And B. . .

Dear M. and B.: Sorry, but shacking up isn't the same as being married. Moreover, the evidence is on the other side. A recent survey showed that couples who lived together before marriage had a higher divorce rate than couples who didn't play house before the ceremony. And what's more, the divorces tended to be filed within the first two years of those marriages. Those are the facts, ma'am.

Dear Ann Landers: Please be the referee. Freddy's parents have been divorced for three years. We plan to marry this summer.

I think Freddy's dad should be invited to the wedding. He says it would make his younger brothers and sisters very uncomfortable. They have not seen Daddy and Mom in a long while and my fiancee thinks it might be a traumatic experience for them if he showed up at the wedding. The kids range from 10 to 15 years of age. I think it's time they accepted the realities of life. Their dad lives in this town and they can't duck him forever.

What do you say?—Busbury, Ont.

Dear Bus: Never mind about me. What does Freddy's mother say? Is there a new wife? Would she be welcome? Was it a scandalous divorce or an amiable one? Before I could give an intelligent answer, we have to know a lot more than you've told me. I suggest the clergyman who is to perform the ceremony be the "referee."

Ann Landers.

Dear Ann Landers: For 15 years I have been married to a very decent guy. He has enough good qualities to fill this entire page. The problem (I am almost ashamed to tell you) is that his eyes nearly bug out of his head whenever an attractive woman walks by. She doesn't have to be beautiful, so long as she has a big front porch and is built broad across the beam. That's enough for him.

If he was starved for sex at home, that would be another story. But he's not. It's elevator operators, waitresses, sales clerks, anything female. Even teen-agers. I've mentioned to him how it embarrasses me when he gawks and leers, but he keeps on craning his neck and I die inside. What's the answer?—Embarrassed Wife

Dear Wife: Ignore it. When he stops looking at them, he'll also stop looking at you.

Successful Living

Where There's Life, There's Hope

By DORIS CLARE

Dear Doris: I am concerned about "Still Hoping"—the mother of the girl who was injured in a farm accident.

The very first thing I want to impress upon her is not to use the demoralizing term "vegetable" in referring to a person who has suffered severe brain damage. I abhor it! This is still a human being with a soul.

Do you realize that much of what is said in front of a person with such severe brain damage is heard and it registers on the mind, but they lack only the ability to show their reaction.

There was once elderly woman who was in a deep coma. Someone talked about this woman in her presence. When she was able to communicate again she told us they were all very attractive on the outside, but in their hearts they were not attractive at all. She had heard what was said about her although she could not react. She was badly hurt.

Now if this woman's daughter hears herself referred to as a "vegetable", it could hurt her or discourage her so completely that her will to live could be imprired. Mother must always be affirmative and positive and this will help her daughter immeasurably.

She says, too, that she does not want to spend money on faith healers". Most faith healers, or spiritual healers, do not charge a fee for their services anyway.

Healing is a gift of the Holy Spirit and most of those so gifted have a strong dedication to use this to help mankind. I am enclosing the name of a man who has been a faith healer. All he needs is the name of the patient, where the patient lives and a small outline of the nature of the complaint. If it is God's will that this young girl should be healed she will be.

Also Hoping.

Dear Also: I agree. On all counts. I have heard of discussions being carried on in sick rooms, overheard by the patient, in his dismay and depression, all too often.

I am sending your letter on to "Still Hoping" along with a whole pile of letters which have come in here for her. I know they will give her a lift, and perhaps one of you kind people will be the means of steering her to help for her beloved daughter.

One of my good friends — a fellow member of the McGill alumnae, is married to the kind of medical man who never gives up. His motto is, "Where there is life, there is hope!"

And he keeps right on working with seemingly hopeless ill patients. He often proves just how right he is. Bless him!

(Ask Doris about your difficulty, writing her in care of this newspaper. She will discuss it or send you to a source of help.)

Hand of God Evident In Apparent Troubles

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

Behind the story of Joseph and his brothers we discern the heavy hand of God. Prime Minister of Egypt now, Joseph broke and wept at the sight of his brothers from Canaan, who had sold him into slavery.

But Joseph wept, not to of remorse nor merely because he would soon see his old father again. He wept because he had become aware of a love and a meaning even deeper than family ties. He wept because he saw that, through seeming disaster, God had been shaping his life for good (Genesis 45:4-5).

Have we understood our own lives in this way? Have we experienced a love deeper than the most tender human affection, working in our experience to bring some real good out of the apparently tragic and sometimes cruel blows that may have fallen upon us?

To say that what happened to Joseph early in life or the harsh things which happen to us are the will of God is no help. How can we worship a God who deliberately wills evil? There is nothing of God in a meaningless experience.

We need to learn that time is a great revealer and to act accordingly. It took years for Joseph to understand how God could bring good out of evil. Meanwhile, Joseph did not return evil for evil, but remained righteous even as a slave in Pharaoh's household. That is a vital point to note.

There can be meaning even in the experience of "madness": Dr. Anton Boisen affirmed this in "Out of the Depths", the story of his life. After becoming a parish minister, he suffered a severe mental breakdown and was a patient in a mental hospital during many years.

Dr. Boisen never returned to a parish ministry. He became a minister to the mentally ill and served in this capacity for many years. He became a pioneer in the field of mental health and in theological education. In his old age he could look back and see the heavy hand of God working toward a meaning and satisfaction he could not foresee.

The Christian life begins as a response of trust, born out of hearing the Gospel. We become ordinary soldiers, plodding the way of the cross through the ever changing lights and shadows of experience. We no longer regard either our own lives or the lives of others as a meaningless turmoil ending in a void.

Instead, we, like Joseph, run to meet again the brothers who were lost to us. We fall on their necks and embrace them. We exclaim, "Now do not be distressed, or angry with yourselves, because you sold me here; for God sent me before you to preserve life."

Youth's Honesty, Dedication Impresses Top Salvationist

By JOHN WARD

TORONTO (CP) — Tall, spare, with thinning grey hair receding, and his rimless spectacles, Commissioner Clarence Wiseman of the Salvation Army fixes a questioner with piercing blue eyes and speaks earnestly of the subject close to his heart—God, youth and the Army.

Commissioner Wiseman, 61, for the last seven years territorial commander of the Army in Canada, and Bermuda, was elected in June this month to succeed Sweden's Erik Wickberg as the organization's new world leader—the first Canadian to hold the post.

At a news conference Wednesday, he and his wife explained their views and ideas on the Army and its role in society, now and in the future.

The commissioner, who assumes his new duties—and the rank of general—July 6, said he has great hopes for the young people of today.

"They have great honesty and decision," he said. "And are doing great things in the world today," he added.

Young people had great zeal and enthusiasm and while some elements seemed to be having problems attracting youth, the sincere discipline and purpose of the Army had a strong attraction.

He said that the Army is growing and expanding across the world, and the dedication of young officers is a powerful part of such consolidation.

There are about 133,000 Salvationists in Canada and about 2.5 million in the worldwide organization.

The Newfoundland-born commissioner explained a little of the Army's organization, saying that although the new position is one of great authority, there is still much consultation on the local level.

"It is more authority on the moral level. It is a position of responsibility for doctrinal and spiritual matters."

The Salvation Army, as its name implies, is organized on military lines, with soldiers and officers organized into corps. Territorial leaders hold the rank of commissioner and the world leader, who retires at age 70, is the only active general.

Commissioner Wiseman's wife Jenny, who has worked closely with her husband during more than 35 years of service, will continue to work with the women's groups in the Army.

She was asked about the women's liberation movement. She said she had little interest in such activities.

"Only a very small group are involved in that," she said.

"In the Army, women can hold any post and have even served as generals," she added.

Commissioner Wiseman has served with the Army since graduation from staff college in 1927.

South Vietnam Still Jails Scores of Buddhist Monks

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Several hundred Buddhist monks, imprisoned in South Vietnam, have given up their protest fast in demand for their freedom, but they still remain behind bars.

The monks started their fast March 5 "in homage to our Lord and teacher the enlightened Sakya Muni," vowing to continue, it until freed to "return to our sweet cities, pagodas and institutes."

There was conflicting reports—between Saigon government and religious sources—on how long it lasted.

The fate of more than 300 monks in Saigon's Chi Hoa prison remains uncertain. A religious group here said that at least one has died.

It also said Buddhist leaders, reporters and, at one point, a delegation of Vietnamese senators have been blocked from seeing or writing to the imprisoned monks.

"In the name of God, we protest the treatment of these peaceful men," said a statement here by 16 top Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic leaders.

Officials of the National Council of Churches have protested the jailings. The Saigon government is "making a travesty of freedom of speech and religion."

The monks, whose vows commit them to refusing violence to any living being, are accused of insubordination and refusing military service. In Saigon, government spokesman Bui Duc Tue said their fast ended "a long time ago."

However, this is "contrary to what we've heard directly from Buddhist leaders whose monks are in prison," said James Forest, publications director of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an interfaith pacifist organization.

"There has been some evidence the government is force-feeding the monks," he said.

"We know that one has died and that a person can't live much more than five or six weeks on just water," said Thomas Cornell, program director of the fellowship.

It said it keeps in regular contact by telephone with the situation through the Vietnamese Buddhist Peace Delegation in Paris, which gets its reports from Buddhist leaders in Saigon.

However, Forest said only scant information can be obtained about the monks, most of it from relatives who sometimes are allowed to visit the prison. "Occasionally, relatives are arrested, so most are afraid to go," he said.

He said the mother of one monk, Thich Manguyen Van Cu, went to the prison April 1 to take him a parcel and was presented with his death certificate.

Thep rotest fast was started by a reported 300 monks then in prison. On March 13, another 143 monks connected with An Quang pagoda south of Saigon were arrested.

Rev. Calm Tin, a Catholic militant ripest in Saigon, said about 340 monks still are in prison. He said the last fasted about a week.

However, on March 22—17 days after the fast began—a Saigon newspaper Dien-Tin (Telegram) quoted the government press spokesman as saying:

"There is no fast. They have only temporarily stopped eating although the Republic of Vietnam continues to bring them plenty of food."

The imprisoned monks belong to South Vietnam's largest Buddhist group, the Vietnam Buddhist Church, with more than 10 million adherents. It has been denied government recognition since 1966 because of its peace advocacy.

Rev. Thieu regime recognizes the National Buddhist Religious Society, a smaller body of about 10,000, which supports government policies.

Zambia Sends Missionary Here

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — Although Canadian churches have been sending missionaries overseas for years, it is only recently that Africa has sent its first missionary to Canada.

If the idea catches on, other missionaries will come to Canada from Third World countries.

Rev. Elijah K. Lumbama, 41, of Zambia is interim minister of Olivet United Church in Hamilton and ministry-at-large from the Third World.

"In the past, this mission business was a one-way street," Mr. Lumbama said. "It used to mean you give and we get. But we in Africa have been on the receiving end for too long. The time has come to share what we have and to exchange personnel."

The minister and his family arrived in Hamilton last August and are scheduled to stay for three years. The posting resulted from a joint decision by the United Church of Zambia and the United Church of Canada.

Mr. Lumbama said it is surprising that a country which sends many missionaries abroad does not show more signs of Christian influence at home.

"I expect to see more going on churches, for example, but church-going doesn't seem to be all that popular."

Christianity is rapidly expanding in Africa at the same time that church membership is decreasing in North America, Lumbama said.

But the greatest difference between African and Canadian society was in their valuations of people and property. Mr. Lumbama said many Canadian society seems property-centred while African society is people-oriented.

Tax Hike Held to 6 Mills By Slashing Estimates

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The City Council Friday approved a budget providing for a levy of $1.1 mills for a public school supporter.

Holding the tax rate increase to six mills was not accomplished without the city budget committee doing a lot of paring from original estimates.

Mayor Jeffrey told council if all requests had been agreed to the tax levy would have increased by 21 per cent. With slashing of requests, council was able to hold the tax increase to 14 per cent.

1974 taxable assessment is $138,382,405, or an increase of about 2.5 per cent.

Total revenue for city purposes including $4,860,424 general rate, $859,106 in special charges, $1,678,365 in grants based on subsidies, payments in lieu of taxes of $410,941, and $812,266 "other" revenue, will be $8,764,655.

With school levies of $2,893,634 and $78,000 in other school revenue, total revenue for the city is $11,943,823.

On the expenditure side, general government will cost the city $713,126; protection to persons and property (including police and fire) $3,631,993; public works $1,988,962, sanitation and waste removal $1,005,041; health, $297,368; social and family services, $304,285; recreation and community services (recreation, parks and library) $1,247,615; planning and development $337,336, financial expenditures $124,685, and "other" $250,700.

The city fire department will cost taxpayers $1,014,300; the police department $1,203,722. Street lighting $180,000; school grants $64,000 and animal control service an estimated $26,250.

Animal control estimates are less than requested by the Ontario Humane Society. Mayor Jeffrey said it was still unknown whether the 15 cents per capita increase, from 60 cents to 75 cents, would be acceptable.

The building and plumbing inspection department will be "beefed up" with the addition of two inspectors. The inspection service budget this year is for $52,900 up from $38,818.

The $1,988,962 road budget includes $331,118 for roads, another $300,000 for debt charges on road debentures, $137,000 for winter control, $125,000 for traffic control and $265,200 for administration.

The sanitation department includes $46,918 for recreation-waste disposal at Quinte College. This was expected to go ahead in 1977 if the land acquisition delays, is now scheduled for next year.

One item deleted from the budget was funds for the installation of traffic signals at the corner of Herchimer and Victoria Avenue.

Councillors questioned a figure of $48,668 as the city's share of this year's Heritage and Prince Edward County Health Unit, up about $20,000.

Alderman George Zegouras and Joe Cox wanted the item referred back to the health board, but Alderman Jean Smith said there was no way the budget could be reduced at this time of the year.

City treasurer Frank Morelli said this year's told health unit budget was up to $700,000 from $540,000 last year.

The Province normally pays a 70% subsidy but is now limiting budget increase to seven per cent. Costs are up 12 per cent and local municipalities must pick up the difference.

Aldermen Zegouras and Cox withdrew a motion to refer the health budget after it was promised an itemized budget statement would be brought to council at a future meeting.

Parks budget is $542,100 but with revenues deducted the levy against the city will be $414,100 or about the same as last year.

The recreation department will cost an estimated $2881,186, up $62,807 Expenditures for the Memorial Arena will be $172,211. Including $50,583 for capital equipment and renovation. Net cost of arena operations is estimated at $87,683.

Cost figures for operation of Dick Ellis Rink were given as $119,722 which reduced by revenues of $86,978, leaves an operating deficit of $49,744.

The library committee budget is made up of $84,779 for programming; $88,099 for operation of community centres and grants to city recreational organizations.

Corby Public Library expenditures are $191,600, reduced by $15,000 in revenues of $37,478, leaving $168,832 to be raised by taxpayers.

The commercial rate for public school supporters is 58.1 mills and for commercial separate school supporters is 58.1 mills.

More than one half the city budget is for salaries and staff benefits for employees.

Four Seasons Loses Civil Suit

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. has lost a civil law suit, under the Mechanics' Lien Act, in the Ontario Supreme Court and has been ordered to pay a general contracting firm from Ottawa $326,488 for improperly withholding payment of a debt Four Seasons incurred in building its luxury hotel here in 1971.

The court order was handed down late last week in a three volume, 244 page, judgement by Judge J. B. Robinson, ended a court action that was brought to trial in Belleville nearly two years ago.

Hastings County Sheriff Ross C. Bailey received a copy of Judge Robinson's judgement last this week.

In addition to upholding the claim of the plaintiff, C.A. Johanssen and Sons Ltd., Judge Robinson ordered Four Seasons to pay $84,940.17 interest on the $326,000 debt for the period of August 20,1971 to June 30, 1973.

The judge also ordered Four Seasons to pay Johanssen and Sons interest — at Bank of Canada's prime rate plus two per cent — on the sum of $326,488.88 from June 30, 1973 until the judgement has been paid in full.

The mechanics' lien action, instituted against the Four Seasons for money owed on a construction contract to build the Four Seasons Motor Hotel in Belleville, revolved around a claim by C.A. Johanssen and Sons that the Four Seasons had failed to honour its contract by refusing to make adjustments to a guaranteed upset price (lowest price) of $1,890,000 that formed the basis of Johanssen's 1969 bid for the construction job.

A clause in the final contract, which was signed in May 1970, between Johanssen and the Four Seasons stipulated that the upset price of $1,890,000 was to be adjusted to provide for the extra costs involved in changing from the plans and specifications that formed the basis of Johanssen's 1969 bid to the final contract plans of May 1970."

In making his judgement, Judge Robinson said, "Considering the conduct of the parties both before and after the signing of the contract, the only reasonable conclusion I can draw is that the parties had a common intention on May 19,1970, that the upset price of $1,890,000 was to be adjusted by the differences between the plans on which November the 10,1969 proposal was based and the final plans as described in the contract dated May 14, 1970 and signed on May 19,1970. If the defendant (Four Seasons Ltd.) had a different intention, it concealed such intention until after the contract was signed."

The position of the defendant after May 1970 was inconsistent with its prior representations, and in my opinion, strongly suggests an attempt to take advantage of a plaintiff, who had expended substantial time and effort on this project, but who may have failed to sufficiently particularize its agreement with he defendant."

Later in his judgement, Judge Robinson notes that: "The evidence is that the president and effective owner of the plaintiff company (C.A. Johanssen) is dead and the plaintiff has been forced into liquidation by the failure of the defendant to pay its just debt. As a result the plaintiff company has no employees, no assets and no means of earning money and its only asset is its claim against the defendant."

Johanssen and Sons Ltd. has calculated its claim against the four Seasons Hotel Ltd. to total $725,338.66.

Judge Robinson allowed $576,488.88 of the Johanssen claim and awarded Four Seasons to pay the $326,000 figure after noting that Johanssen's J.C. Anderson, of Belleville, had ordered Four Seasons to pay $150,000 of the debt to claimants other than Johanssen and after on January 7, 1972 as partial satisfaction of the defendant's statutory liability under the Mechanics' Lien Act.

The trial began in Belleville June 26, 1972 and concluded July 5, 1973.

During that period, 13 weeks were allotted to the trial and evidence was adduced on 45 days with submissions of arguments and another eight days of the court's time.

The transcript of the trial consists of 32 books and more than 350 exhibits.

Arson Charged In Three Fires

Newburg — Officers from the Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police have arrested a 19-year-old man, Scot Brian Lloyd and charged him with three counts of arson in connection with three barn fires in the small village of Newburg late this week.

Early Wednesday morning, fire destroyed a barn owned by Sidney Woods, of Concession Street, Newburg. Lost in the fire were two cars, and a boat.

Initially, the Wednesday morning fire was attributed to spontaneous combustion, but after a second fire destroyed a barn belonging to Benny Sutton, also of Concession Street, early Thursday morning, the Ontario Fire Marshall's office was called in to investigate.

The third fire, Thursday night, destroyed a driveshed owned by William Wagar, also of Concession Street.

The Wagar barn contained several pieces of farm equipment and a quantity of feed, all of which was lost. Several calves and pigs were saved by bystanders after the fire broke out.

All three fires involved old wooden structures before Newburgh firefighters could do anything except save nearby buildings.

Residents of Newburg, a small village of approximately 600 located seven miles north-east of Napanee, could be seen patrolling the town's streets with flashlights, dogs and clubs early Friday morning in an attempt to catch the person responsible for the three barn fires.

Damage from the three fires totaled approximately $15,000.

Youths Injured

PICTON — An Oshawa man was taken to Kingston General Hospital where he remains today in serious condition with chest injuries following a one-car collision on county road four near Talbot St.

Injured was Jack Robert Mayhew, 20, of Oshawa, passenger in a car driven by William D. Handley, 19, of Cherry Valley. Police were unable to state whether the driver received injuries.

Another passenger in the vehicle, 17-year-old Debbie Crewe, of R. R. 2, Picton was admitted to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital. Also passengers in the cars were Joanne Somerville, 17, of Bellleville, Jean-Anne Hrodey, 18, of Cherry Valley, Roseleen D. Struthers, 17, of Cherry Valley and Terry Eric Mitchell, 18 of R. R. 4, Picton.

Police were unable to state if they received any injuries in the accident.

The collision occured when the car left the road and struck a hydro pole.

Topsy Threesome

It's a topsy-turvey world for these King George grade six students at afternoon recess Friday. With the weekend just an hour away, Robbie Sautter, (from left), Mark Hurt and Ray Bochnek get into the swing of things and start mad cap weekend activities early. However ,the 12-year-olds will be back in school, hard at the books, Monday.

Council to Reconsider Guards, Lahr Exchange

The city's school crossing guard program and the Lahr student exchanges will be reviewed by city council.

The cost items for the above two programs, $2,000 for the student exchange, and $64,000 for school crossing guard program, although getting approval at Friday's city budget meeting, came in for questioning and Mayor's Robin Jeffrey noted that both programs would be reviewed.

Ald. Joe Cox wondered about the Lahr student exchange, noting that it benefitted only a limited few yet the cost was picked up by the taxpayer.

But Ald. Ben Corke, chairman of the student exchange program, which sees one year exchanges of Belleville and Lahr students, felt the program was worthwhile and was an opportunity that few people would have.

He noted that although the Canadian Forces provided transportation overseas there still were certain expenses in Canada. For instance this weekend the eight German students in Belleville are being taken on a trip to Niagara Falls.

Alderman Corke estimated that Lahr was spending a greater amount on Belleville students in that city.

Mayor Jeffrey said the program would have to be accurately assessed until after the return of the local student from Germany next month.

Ald. Stu Meeks questioned the $64,000 item for school crossing guards and wondered why senior students could not perform the same function.

This had been the case when he was going to school, he said.

Ald. Jack Ireland, chairman of the city traffic committee, replied that the use of another student as crossing guards had been considered in Belleville but had never been accepted.

The alderman noted that if such a program was adopted a saving to the city of about $40,000 might be expected.

Mayor Jeffrey said that the question of crossing guards was a matter which would be taken up with the school board.

Board Protests Council's Plan

TRENTON — Town council's bid to cut through land surrounding Mount Pleasant cemetery to extend Catherine Street to Front Street met with parks board consternation Monday night.

A letter from the board requested plans now in the offing for walking paths and ski runs for the mountain land, creating a season-round recreational facility.

The board points out "the location of the easement from butchery has been of concern to local citizens since the first bylaw was passed in 1881".

"To submit the municipality would lose more by the desecration of this land than it would gain," wrote Marion Baker, secretary of the board.

In her letter she asks if the gravel pit at the base of the hill is to be used as a gravel supply for the municipality and if council intends soliciting opinions from the ministry of natural resources.

There was no discussion during the regular council session.

Campaigns Over Top

This year's Easter Seal campaign went 47 per cent over its official target of $10,000. The last recorded total, for Easter Seal Chairman Linton Read, was $14,750.

And, added Mr. Read, this year's total even surpassed the Rotary Club's optimistic target of $12,000 set by club members by 25 per cent. The Rotary Club organizes the annual Easter Seal campaign.

This is the second campaign in the last month which passes its official target. Earlier the Canadian Cancer Society, Belleville and District unit, reported that its latest figure was at the $20,000 mark. The target had been set at $17,000.

Meanwhile the Salvation Army's Red Shield campaign carries on throughout the month of May and Major Ray Nelson expects this year's total to go beyond the expected target of $13,000.

Following the residential blitz night on May 6, two-thirds of a total of $8,000 of the goal was collected. Of this figure, includes $6,000 from the blitz and the rest from canvassing of businesses.

Resolution Endorsed

TRENTON — Trenton town council Monday night endorsed a resolution calling for provincial help in supplying municipal fire protection.

At present the province pays 100 per cent of the fire police, protection but does not participate at all subsidizing

Kay Kokesh To Manage Housing Units

A new manager has been appointed for the Ontario Housing Corporation family and senior citizen rental units in Belleville and neighboring municipalities.

Kathleen Kokesh will take over from William Jantz, manager since 1968, who is retiring. Mrs. Kokesh will also be responsible for administration of OHC housing in Brighton, Campbellford, Colborne, Frankford, Picton and Trenton.

Before joining OHC, Mrs. Kokesh was office manager for a Belleville finance company for more than 26 years. She is a member of the Argyle Chapter of the IODE and a captain in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Slides Shown Garden Club

A slide presentation and talk by Gene Gemmell, horticulturist with the Belleville Parks Board, highlighted the regular evening of the Belleville Garden Club on Tuesday evening. Mr. Gemmell parks illustrated the work done by the Parks Board in making improvements to the city's parks.

By way of slides members were taken on a short garden tour of England, Hawaii and Australia. The slides were taken by Harry Lambourne and Harry Collins on recent visits to these countries.

Vote of 7 to 3 Includes Potter Land in Budget

Ald. Zegouras felt there were other projects to be first considered. He opposed the city helping to acquire land outside the municipality, said the option price for the Potter farm was "ridiculous" and maintained the money would be better spent to upgrading roads and sidewalks and assisting the installation of sanitary sewers in Thurlow.

Alderman Ben Corke admitted the $700,000 seemed to be a lot of money, but noted the provincial government was opposed to purchase of half a million dollars. In view of the government grant he said voting against the purchase for future development as recreational land would be doing a disservice to the people.

As the discussion continued Ald. Jean Smith suggested time was being unnecessarily wasted, as council had already approved the purchase.

Alderman Keegan suggested the purchase price be left in the budget, but the matter should later be put to the people.

He failed to get a seconder and the motion by Aldermen Zegouras and Cox was defeated.

George Zegouras, Joe Cox and Arthur Keegan.

Ald. George Zegouras at the last meeting of council introduced a notice of motion opposing city participation in the purchase. The motion will be before council next Monday, but Ald. Zegouras admitted that in the view of the budget meeting vote it would undoubtedly be defeated.

Aldermen Zegouras and Cox objected to the $700,000 option price which was said to be above value.

Ald. Cox said he was not opposed to previous 60 per recreational land, but the price was at least $200,000 too much.

Pensioners Lose Out

The city of Belleville will pay a total of $52,350 in grants to community and social organizations in 1976 — the grant total approved by council at its budget meeting Friday.

Biggest beneficiaries from the council hand-out will be the Chamber of Commerce ($8,000) United Community Services ($12,000) and the YMCA ($2,500) all flures the same as last year.

The Central Volunteer Bureau will receive $1,200 down $300 from last year; The convalescent bureau, $2,000 down $500 from last year, and Hastings County Museum, $12,000 up from $6,750 last year.

Refused was the request of the Quinte District Labor Council for $12,000 for the citizens' bureau, and $35,000 for property tax relief for pensioners 65 years and over, couldn't see how harbor improvements would benefit the city as a whole contributing to further sharp reduction of the amount.

But Ald. Stu Meeks said dock improvements would attract large number of yachtmen to the city, expected to spend considerable amounts with city merchants.

The alderman claimed the harbor improvement committee was being stymied by dragging of feet by two or voting money for carrying out recommended improvements.

Included in this year's projects is the construction of a concrete retaining wall to anchor docks.

Council felt that such a major project should have staff supervision. It voted to leave in the $14,000 figure provided supervision was given by city staff.

Beat Phillies 4-2

Expos Close in on First

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ron Hunt sparked a pair of two-run rallies and Ernie McAnally scattered seven hits, leading Montreal Expos to a 4-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a National League baseball game Friday night.

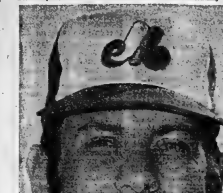
Hunt walked to open the game, took second on a sacrifice bunt and scored on Ken Singleton's single. Another walk and Bob Bailey's single brought home another run.

A walk to Del Unser and the Greg Luzinski double scored a run scoring double. Philadelphia run in the fourth.

— but the Expos struck for two more runs in the fifth with Hunt starting the rally.

The veteran infielder doubled with two out off loser Jim Lonborg and scored on a single by Larry Lintz. Hunt just slid in safely under the tag of catcher Larry Cox.

Willie Davis then extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a double, scoring Lintz.



The Phillies scored their second run off McAnally, 3-4, in the sixth on Tommy Hutton's double and scored on a single by Denny Doyle.

In the sixth, McAnally worked out of a jam when the Phillies scored their second run.

The way Ralph Garr is going this year, he could hit close to .300. That's not a .300 batting average, but .300 hits.

One of the hottest batters in baseball, Garr added three more hits to his total while leading Atlanta Braves to a 3-0 decision over Houston Astros Friday night.

"I'm not satisfied where I'm at," Garr said despite drilling two home runs and a single in boosting his hit total to 73 at the first-quarter mark of the season.

Garr's .378 batting average leads the National League, and if he continues at this frantic pace, he'll have about 290 hits for the year.

In the other National League games, St. Louis Cardinals nipped Chicago Cubs 1-0, Pittsburgh Pirates beat New York Mets 4-1.

Cincinnati Reds defeated San Diego Padres 6-3 and San Francisco Giants turned back Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

Buzz Capra pitched a three-hitter for Atlanta while getting Garr's splendid support.

Garr led off the Braves' first inning with his fourth homer of the season off Don Wilson, 1-3. He connected again in the third inning.

Garr beat out an infield single in the seventh, his 24th hit in 48 at-bats over the last 11 games. He walked in his other appearance at the plate.

Ted Simmons led off the ninth inning with a double, was sacrificed to third and scored in a run-down to give St. Louis and Gerry Siebert the victory over Chicago.

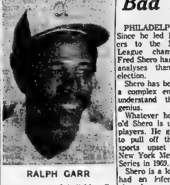
Simmons scored when pinch-hitter Tim McCarver grounded to first baseman Billy Williams.

Steve Carlton, 10-3, was the loser for the Cubs.

Dock Ellis, a pretty good pitcher in his own right, was the winner for Pittsburgh, limiting the Mets to five singles.

Jerry Reuss turned a six-hitter while loser Rick Reuschel, 3-3, also allowed five hits.

Jerry Reuss turned a six-hitter while loser Rick Reuschel, 3-3, also allowed five hits.



Willie Stargell drove in one run and scored twice, helping Pittsburgh beat New York.

The left-handed Reuss, in pitching his second straight complete-game victory and raising his record to 3-3, gave up his only run in the fifth inning when Don Hahn slugged a homer over the left field wall.

Pedro Borbon bailed Don Gullett out of a ninth-inning jam, leading Cincinnati out of a four-game losing streak with a decision over San Diego.

Borbon loaded the bases before getting a double play.

Bobby Bonds and Chris Speier each hit two-run singles in a seven-run third inning that carried San Francisco over Los Angeles.

Mayberry Turns Tough Guy

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Mayberry a fighter? Dick Allen, a peacemaker?

Unusual roles for both baseball players, but those were the parts they played Friday night.

Mayberry, Kansas City's usually mild-mannered first baseman, became incensed when he was struck just below the right knee by a pitch from Stan Bahnsen of Chicago White Sox. The ensuing fight cost him a third inning, one inning after Mayberry had lagged Bahnsen for a solo homer.

Mayberry charged toward the mound and tagged Bahnsen with both fists as players from both dugouts and bullpens streamed onto the field.

Several other fights broke out around the pitcher's mound and numerous punches were thrown.

Mayberry, an addition to clip ping Bahnsen, landed a shot to the jaw of Jim Kaat, another Chicago pitcher.

Finally, Allen, who has been involved in many fights, restrained Mayberry. When order was restored after 10 minutes, Mayberry was ejected but Bahnsen remained in the game to become the losing pitcher Kansas City's 4-2 victory.

In other American League games, Boston Red Sox beat Milwaukee Brewers 5-3, Minnesota Twins routed Texas Rangers 9-6, Cleveland Indians downed Detroit Tigers 3-1, Baltimore Orioles beat New York Yankees 6-3, and California Angels edged Oakland A's 4-3.

Rico Carty's homer, his ninth of the season, gave Kansas City a 1-0 lead and the Royals went ahead 3-0, just prior to the fight, on Amos Otis' two-run sing'e.

Fritz Peterson pitched a six-hitter and John Lowenstein drove in two runs in Cleveland's victory.

The Tigers wasted the 2,900th hit of Al Kaline's major league career and a sparkling relief performance by Woody Fryman, who allowed only one hit and no runs in six innings.

Rookie Jim Fuller doubled home the tying run in the seventh inning and Enos Cabell delivered the go-ahead hit on a sacrifice fly, helping the Orioles beat New York's Mel Stottlemyre his fifth consecutive loss.

Dave McNally was the winner, with last-out help from Bob Reynolds.

The Angels' victory was their first in nearly three years over Oakland ace Jim Hunter, who had beaten them eight straight times since July, 1971.

California's Mickey Rivers extended his hitting streak to nine games with a single and a home run while Oakland's Reggie Jackson hit his 13th home run.

Carbo and Cecil Cooper each collected three hits for Boston, while Dick Drago pitched four-hit scoreless relief over the last 4 2-3 innings and earned his fourth victory in five decisions.

Bill Bylevec, Minnesota's 23-year-old right-bander, pitched a five hitter for the 20th shutout of his major league career and received home run support from Harmon Killebrew and Larry Hisle.

Killebrew struck out 11, walked none and shackled Texas' Jeff Burroughs, Bumbry had driven in at least one run in his last 10 games, five short of the league league record, and saw his 12-game hitting streak end.

Killebrew's homer was the 584st of his career.

Shero in Bad Shape

PHILADELPHIA (AP)

Since he led Philadelphia Flyers to the National Hockey League championship, general Fred Shero has undergone more analyzers than a presidential election.

Shero has been referred to as a complex enigma. Some don't understand than Sanskrit, it seems.

Whatever he is, the 48-year-old Shero is undeniably a hell of a coach. He got enough across to pull off the biggest major sports upset since baseball's New York Mets won the World Series in 1969.

Shero is a loner. He says he's had an inferior feeling ever since he was a child in Winnipeg.

"I had so much fear in me that I'd go out of my way to avoid people," Shero said in an interview.

Flyers' general manager Keith Allen says of the man he selected to coach the team three years ago: "I don't think he wants people to know him."

Shero has been quoted as attributing the success of the Flyers to his brilliant assistant, Bobby Clarke, then to superb goalie Bernie Parent, and to a team that has guts, courage, worked harder than anyone had the right to expect, and also to sofe drills he learned from a Russian coach in 1965.

Now he comes up with another.

"All my life I've been fighting the establishment," said the man who was named coach of the year but then cut the team you can't win. Only the coach gets it. . . ."

The path to the championship hasn't been easy. Shero says he will never forget the last game of his first year with the Flyers. Philadelphia scored a goal with four seconds remaining to knock Philadelphia out of the playoffs.

"I felt just like I did when my mother died and father died."

Shero trains his team differently than any other in hockey. He's a non-drinker who always is looking for new methods.

In 1972, Shero took a group of Russian players—20 years old and whose names ended with Anatoly Tarasov. He liked what he saw and was determined to put it to his system.

"Without the Russian drills and our team's acceptance of them, we wouldn't have finished first and gone on to win the Cup. They (the drills) made us a better team. Tarasov was the key man, not me."

The drills include such things as chasing two pucks with two referees, three forwards skating up and down the ice passing the one puck, but three; firing eight shots at the goalie as the goaltender; pairing off in grouns and clapping hands at shoulder height and squeezing and twisting, strenuous knee-bending drills in place, lifting knees and tryint to touch with elbows from the back.

Shero has left for Russia for two weeks' clinics, hoping to pick up some more new techniques.

Referees Want More Protection

TORONTO (CP) — National Hockey League referees have prepared an appeal to the league for more protection against abusive players.

Members of the referees' association met Friday with their lawyer, Jim Beatty of Hamilton, Ont., to discuss submissions to be made to NHL president Clarence Campbell.

"We agreed to prepare some submissions to the league," Beatty said.

"That will be done, probably next week. Then I hope to meet Clarence Campbell for a general discussion before the June annual meeting.

"We decided it would not be in the best interests of everyone to make our discussions public at least until after the meeting with Mr. Campbell."

Punch Gets Pinched

BUFFALO (AP) — A luxury automobile belonging to Buffalo Sabres' coach Joe Crozier was pinched by a burglar—before Imlach knew it was missing.

Police said they arrested Laden Presley, 36, of Buffalo, Friday after he was caught in the act.

Presley was arraigned before Justice Robert A. Burrell of city court and released on $500 bail. The case was adjourned until June 6.

"The first time he knew it was gone from where he left it was when we called him and told him we had arrested a suspect," police said.

A spokesman for the National Hockey League team's branch office in Toronto but stays at a downtown Buffalo hotel while working here.

Crusaders Get Leduc From Boston

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Crusaders' general manager has signed a third forward from a National Hockey League club and hopes to get a couple more from the World Hockey Association team.

John Vivian talked with reporters Friday about acquisition plans after signing Rick Leduc, 22, a centre who played last season for Boston in the NHL.

Meanwhile, the Plain Dealer says the Crusaders will announce today the appointment of John Hanna as coach, succeeding Bill Needham. Hanna, 39, a former defenceman from Sydney, N.S., coached Cleveville last season.

Vivian said Leduc signed a "long term contract" but wouldn't say how long or for how much money.

"With the addition of Leduc, Al McDonough and Terry Holbrook, plus our returning players, the battle for the Avco Cup spots should be highly competitive this fall," Vivian said.

Dryden Returns

MONTREAL (CP) — Goaltender Ken Dryden who walked out on Montreal Canadiens last fall, is back with the National Hockey League team.

The Canadiens announced Friday that Dryden, 26, of Toronto, has agreed to a multi-year pact but the goalie said it is not "the five-or 10-year variety."

Dryden announced last September he would not play because Montreal had refused to renegotiate the second year of his two-year contract. He has been articling for a Toronto law firm.

I think what made me come back was the opportunity to come back," Dryden said. "I'm satisfied with what has happened."

Sam Pollock, Montreal's general manager, had been negotiating with the six-foot, four-inch Cornell University graduate for about two weeks.

"There was no sudden change of heart on my part," Dryden said. "I didn't know whether or not the opportunity to play here again would ever arise. When the chance came, I took it."

The return of Dryden, who starred in Montreal's Stanley Cup wins in 1971 and 1973, should alleviate the inconsistent goaltending coach Scotty Bowman complained of during the last season.

Wayne Thomas, Michel Larocque and Michel Plasse were the netminding chores this year and, at point, Bowman said the players had lost confidence in the goaltending.

With Dryden back, it is likely that one and maybe two goaltenders will be traded. Plasse recently expressed his contempt of Bowman's coaching, while he headed for Kansas City Scouts in the forthcoming NHL expansion draft.

There were several reports that Dryden had agreed to play with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association. Dryden served as a color commentator on the Toros' hockey telecasts this season.

The Toronto team made him an offer. Dryden said, "but I never said that's it. I'm going to play for the Toros."

A simple solution to your toughest garbage problem.

We're sure you know all about organic garbage. It's wonderful stuff like food scraps. And rotten fruit. And pet litter.
It's a big problem for you. And for the community. Even when there's a landfill operation. Not to mention when there isn't. Like at the cottage.
But we have a simple solution.
The Bardmatic.
A garden composter that consumes all your organic garbage and converts it into a rich compost.
All it needs to work is a little space in your backyard. A little natural moisture (just the once). Plus a lot of your organic garbage.
And because the whole process is sealed off, animals and insects can't get in. And odours can't get out. It's a clean machine.

WHA Holds Secret Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Defenceman Greg Joly of Regina Pats was the first player picked in the WHA secret draft, it was learned Friday.

Joly, of Regina Pats, was selected by Phoenix and Lochs of Oshawa Generals, by Indiana. Both clubs began play in the WHA next season. Cincinnati, which doesn't start until the 1975-76 campaign, picked Williams of Swift Current Broncos.

Michigan, formerly Los Angeles, selected fourth and landed left wing Tom Webster of Flin Flon Bombers. Vancouver went next and chose defenceman Rick Gresch ner of New Westminister Bruins.

The complete first two rounds of the draft held at St. Paul, Minn., two months ago and the remainder of the draft will be completed at the league's meeting next Wednesday in Toronto.

The WHA also will draft 18-year-olds Tuesday under a new agreement with the Ontario Hockey Association.

The rival National Hockey League holds a secret junior amateur draft by telephone next Tuesday.

The second round as chosen by the WHA was in order:

Black Belt Still Up for Grabs

By MIKE BRADSHAW

Big Time Wrestling returned to Belleville Friday and what a season the promoters have planned for 1974.

Top bendliners will be appearing regularly at the Memorial Arena every other Friday night. Brutes like Angelo Mosca and the Stomper. Vicious, back fighters like the Canadian Waldman the Beast and the Hungarian Wolfman. Not to mention of course the ladies and the midgets.

The features bout of last night's series pitted the Stomper against everybody's favorite Angle Mosca for the Black Belt of Wrestling. The Stomper had taken the belt some months ago in Calgary.

The two bruisers went at it in a 60 minute, or two out of three falls for the Belt.

Angelo a former member of the Hamilton Tiger Cats, in the CFL, took the worst of the match-up. Bleeding from his forehead the massive Mosca refused to quit until finally the tables started to turn and the Stomper got a small taste of his own medicine.

It was then that the defender of the Belt let the fans what lured to his dressing room, refusing to continue the fight.

Mosca went to the room and tried to goad the Stomper into continuing the fight. It didn't work.

Finally, after five minutes on the public address system Mosca left the ring and the Stomper into returning to the canvas.

The Stomper didn't try to outwestle Mosca. He simply slapped and bit at the severance on Angle's forehead until the blood began to flow steadily.

Mosca fought back and once again the Stomper left the ring and headed for his dressing room.

Angelo picked up the microphone and with the crowd of some 800 backing him he goaded the Stomper into returning to the ring.

Within two minutes Mosca had his foe at his mercy. It was then that the Wolfman and the Wildman clawed their way into the ring and began tearing Mosca apart.

The Stomper climbed out of the ring and headed for his dressing room only this time he was there to stay. There was no way he was going to come back out and face the wrath of big Angle.

Referee John Loxdon disqualified the Stomper from the bout, but because of the importance of the fight London was unable to award it to Angelo. The Black Belt will be held by the athletic commission for a rematch.

Promoter Norm Murrary informed the press that the rematch will likely be held right here in Belleville on the next wrestling night. Norm also said that the next time around there will be lady wrestlers.

In other bout last night, Lois Martinez made a come back half way through his 30-minute bout to wallop Johnny Fargo, the Wolfman went the 30 minute limit to take a decision over Vic Rozakis and in a challenge match the Wildmn said his trade methods to upset Martinez. The midget fight saw Billy the Kid and Little Bruiser clean up on Little Louis and BoBo Johnson.

Big Time Wrestling opened another season at the Memorial Arena Friday night and the crowds of 800 fans got wrestling treat from some of the top headliners in sport. The first match of the season pitted Johnny Fargo against Luis Martinez, the fan's favorite, had trouble with Fargo in the first 10 minutes of their 30 minute bout, but came back the second half of the fight to throw Fargo for a fall. Johnny has no trouble with Martinez here though, as he tosses him through the ropes.

House League Roundup

Belleville Minor Baseball Association house league teams have completed a busy first week of play in the new season. Action in Tadpole, Tyke, Peewee and Bantam divisions is now well under way.

In Tadpole games this week, Legion House Dart League scored a 15-11 win over Belleville Conductors while Kinsmen twice turned back Cablevue, 5-2 and 6-5.

Bobby Dafoe struck out 17 in Legion's win. Losing pitcher Glen Paper notched 15 strikeouts. Big hitters for the winners were Jamie Wright with a homer and two singles, and Vaddy Bezuti with three singles. Gord Maikawa collected three singles for conductors, while Burke had a triple and a single while Jim Crouchman belted a homer.

In the first Kinsmen win Sean Boombower and Pat Doran combined pitching duties to Cablevue's one hit, a single by Kevin Reid. Mike Kyrapoels and Brian Bird allowed only three hits in defeat. Doran, Andy McKinnon and Mike Jones each supplied one single.

The second meeting between the teams was a squeaker. Once again Doran and Boombower saw ground duty for Kinsmen but this time they got help from Bob Heighton. Pynappels and Bird split the pitching for Cablevue. Lolly led the hitters with two Kinsmen singles.

At the Tyke level, J. F. Nelles and Kinsmen played to an 11-11 tie and Bob's Sports tamed Bayshore 12-2.

Nico Petchiny who shared Nelles pitching chores with Dave Parker had a big day at the plate, banging a triple, double and single. Peter Burley doubled and singled for Kinsmen whose pitching was handled by Andy Balyx and David Turpin.

David Barbierstock and John Ord teamed up to record 16 strikeouts in Bob's win, as the Sox got homers from Trevor Powell, Larry Greenaur and Todd Crawford. Barbierstock helped his cause with a grand slam homer. Ord picked up three singles.

In another Tyke contest, Matt Whiley had five runs batted in to lead Brookdom to its first victory of the year, a draw with Mel Barriage. Big gun for the Barriage youngsters was John Ricketts with five singles. Four pitchers saw action for Brookdom, and three for Barriage.

Complete information is lacking on the Peewee division game between Legion 99 and Maitland Lumber. The Legion squad won 14-4 with Stephen Hay and Steve Goulah handling the pitching. Hay had four singles for the winners while Roger Tompkins and Dan McGrath each pounded a double and a single.

Still with the Peewee section Broadloom lowered the boom on Kinsmen 12-4 as Brian Cronkright, Mike Leger and Rory McLeod teamed up for a seven-hitter and 14 strikeouts. Kevin Hawkins and Johnathan Deut were the Kinsmen hurlers.

Richie Manderville collected a double and three singles or Broadloom. Jones led Kinsmen with three singles.

Moving up to Bantam, there was little to choose between the teams in a pair of contests.

Dick Ellis slipped by Scepter 12-11 and in the other game, Mulroney's and Kinsmen played to a 7-7 tie.

Steve McCrory and Dale McTaggart shared the Ellis pitching. Stellar for the losers were Chris Rizzo and John Taylor. Steve Carr and Mark Crawford each slammed a pair of safeties for the winners. Took for Scepcie was Terry Kingsman with two base hits.

Ray Skelly and John Guthrie led Kinsmen's attack as Mulroney pitchers Paul Dent and Peter Manderville, with two each. Kinsmen hurlers Gary Rideat and Dennis Greer scattered five singles with no Mulroney player collecting more than one.

Lockhart Stops Stewart-Warner

Pitcher Norm Lockhart came up with a sparkliez performance from the Post Office rubber Friday, as he handed Stewart Warner a 5-2 loss, its third of the young Belleville Industrial Softball League season.

The Posties' hurler gave up five hits and left nine Stewart Warner batters at the plate swinging. None walked.

In other BISL games Friday, The Intelligencer lost its first game of the season 10-2 to Brooke Bond. The Quinte Hotel Leaders took their second straight win with a 16-6 drubbing of CNR.

The Posties were helped along to their second straight win by the three hits of Ron Marriott. Tom Wood slapped off two singles while Steve Cruickright and pitcher Lockhart came up with a double each.

For Stewart Warner, Jim Hems rapped out a double, Don Lentini, Rod Bennett, Steve Board and Jack Nichol earned singles.

Losing pitcher Rod Bennett gave up 10 hits, walked one batter and struck out another.

At the Alemite, Brooke Bond's pitcher Ross Geen allowed only three hits on the way to a 10-2 victory over the Intell. He walked four and struck out five. Reg Pearson, gave up 11 hits for the losers.

Jack Walsh and Ron Stratton slapped out three singles apiece for Brooke Bond. Al Golden and Paul Sharpe each rapped the ball for doubles.

For the Intell, centerfielder Tony Goncalves rapped two singles on top of singles by Fred Sticle, Eric William, Glynn Reynolds and Bill Cooney.

Homeruns by Jersey Hill and Martin Walsh falled to pull CNR out of a 16-6 tailspin.

Ten Lender hits in the ninth inning snuffed out the daylight for the railroaders.

Winning Pitcher Terry Murphy gave CNR batters 14 hits, struck out six men and walked two. Losing hurler Brian Plombe gave up 18 hits.

Martin Walsh's top-notch batting performance two singles, a double and the homerun— was nullified by Leaders batters Craig Webb, three single hitter, and Bob Wilker, who twice singled. John Maloney, Cliff Hinsman, Bob Lloyd, Terry Murphy and Herm VanDaalen each rapped out a single and double.

20 TIPS TO BETTER GOLF

by George Knudson

Copyright 1974, Toronto Sun Syndicate

TIP NO.3 GRIP

Just as consistency in your golf game depends on the correct swing—the swing depends on the correct grip.

To control the club you must hold it firmly, especially at the point where you apply power — the upper end of the grip.

Fig. 1

Lay the club in the palm of your left hand running from the index finger to the fleshy part of the upper hand (Figure 1). Then with the last three fingers, grip the club firmly, pushing it into the fatty part of he hand (Figure 2).

Fig. 2

Use an "overlapping", "interlocking", or "baseball" grip —whichever is most comfortable and wear a golf glove if you feel it improves your grip.

POSITIVE KEY — Control the club with the last three fingers of your left hand.

This part of the grip is where the power is applied and should be firm enough to give good club control.

Close your thumb and forefinger on the grip with the thumb on top. The right hand merely sits on the club.

Match Penalty For Spearing

WINNIPEG (CP) — Amateur hockey players penalized next season for spearing or butt-ending will receive an automatic match penalty as part of a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association crackdown on hockey violence.

The regulation was approved by the annual CAHA convention that ended Friday.

Cliff Phillips, president of the Ontario Hockey Association, and Manitoba president Frank McGlynn of Winnipeg were among those pleased by the regulation but both suggested officials might have some difficulty interpreting the rule.

"At least now a referee won't have to make a choice between a minor and a major penalty," said Phillips, who introduced the motion supported by the lesser sentence.

George Allard of Winnipeg, MAHA secretary-manager, said his only concern is that some referees will impose match penalties too quickly while others might not impose it at all because "they may be reluctant to see a long suspension."

President Jack Devine of Belleville was one of three executive members returned to office by acclamation.

The others were first vice-president Don Johnson of St. John's, Nfld., and Roland Mercier, junior hockey vice-president of Quebec City.

JACK DEVINE
Returned To Office

Gordon Renwick of Cambridge was returned as vice-president in charge of senior and intermediate hockey.

Cherry Heads List Of Bruin Candidates

BOSTON (AP) — Don Cherry, coach and general manager of Rochester American Hockey League, heads the list of candidates for coach of Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League if Bep Guidolin rejects his contract offer, a Bruins official said Friday.

"Bep is insisting on a five-year contract," said Bruins managing director Harry Sinden, "but we're not prepared to give him one."

The Americans will be the Bruins' top minor league affiliate for the next two seasons under an agreement signed between the two clubs earlier this week.

Sinden said Cherry "is definitely in the running for the job" of Boston coach if Guidolin does not return.

"Don's teams play the same style of hockey we do, and he gets excellent results," Sinden said.

Guidolin is scheduled to meet Monday with Sinden to say whether he will accept a one-or two-year contract. Guidolin has said he will not settle for less than a five-year pact.

Success Confusing For Hubert Green

MEMPHIS (AP) — It isn't likely that success will spoil Hubert Green, but it confuses him.

"I really don't know how to handle it," Green said after taking his second consecutive tie for a 132 total and a two-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $175,000 Memphis Classic. Memphis open golf tournament.

His score matched the best 36 holes for the year on the pro tour and gave him a solid advantage over Red Curl and Tom Watson, tied for second at 134. Curl had a 69, and Watson one of the four 66s posted in the hot, muggy weather.

Green has won two titles and more than $162,000 already this season.

"Winning takes a lot more out of you than just playing in a tournament does," Green said. "You get real tired.

"I've never been in this position before. It's like any first time. You don't know when to rest, when to take time off, how to handle yourself.

"I just hope I can learn this year and have the opportunity to put it to use next year."

Bob Wynn was alone at 136 after a 70 while Gary Player, the Masters champion from South Africa, slipped from an opening 68 to a par 72 and was tied at 137 with Bobby Mitchell and Forrest Fezler, each of whom had a 66.

Dave Hill, a four-time Memphis winner and the defending champion, slipped to 72—140. Lee Trevino had a 71 and just survived the cut for the last two rounds at 144.

Ben Kern of London, Ont., also made it at 144 with a 74, but Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg missed the cut with a 72 for 147. George Knudson of Toronto withdrew after a first-round 71.

Button and Boileau Are Back

PITTSBURGH (CP) — General manager Jack Button and coach Marc Boileau have been hired for another season by Pittsburgh Penguins, the National Hockey League team announced Friday.

Thad Potter, president of the Penguins, said the two were signed to an "agreement of understanding" which would be self-perpetuating as long as both sides are happy.

Boileau was named as a replacement for Ken Schinkel midway through last season. He began the year as coach of Fort Wayne Komets of the International Hockey League.

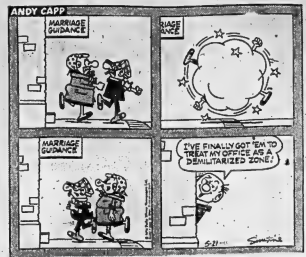
INVITED FOR TALKS



BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins' centre Phil Esposito, the National Hockey League's scoring champ, has accepted a personal invitation from Vancouver Blazers owner Jim Patrick to discuss playing in the World Hockey Association, the Boston Globe reports. Esposito is due in Vancouver Tuesday night to address the annual British Columbia Hall of Fame dinner, the paper says, but will stay over a couple of days to talk with Patrison about his future.

LIONS SIGN CANADIAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League club announced Friday they have signed Canadian defensive back Joe Falcani, 24, six-foot-two, 190 pounds, from the University of Western Ontario.

Indy Facts and Figures

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Facts and figures of the 58th 500-mile auto race Sunday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway:

Event—200 laps around 2½-mile, asphalt-and-brick track sanctioned by United States Auto Club but open to NASCAR, SCCA, Grand Prix and other drivers through international (FIA) listing; does not count in world standings because of engines up to 4.2 litres against Formula 1 limit of 3 litres.

Start—Noon, EDT, from flying start, following parade and pace laps led by Elm Rathman, the 1960 winner of the Indianapolis race, driving a Hurst-Oldsmobile pace car. Rathman will be accompanied by former astronaut Frank Borman. Finish is unofficial until posting at 8 a.m. Monday.

Field—Thirty-three fastest cars in 10-mile qualifications over two days; A. J. Foyt took the pole position with a record average of 191.632 m.p.h. Foyt, who has been on the pole three times and is a three-time Indy winner, is joined in the field by 1968 winner Bobby Unser and 1970 winner Mario Andretti; 1970-71 winner Al Unser, and 1972 winner Gordon Johncock. Foyt won in 1961-64-67.

Race record—3.0...4:05.54, 162.962 m.p.h. by Mark Donohue in 1972.

Purse—Depends on attendance and accessory awards; 1973 payoff was $1,006,105 of which Johncock received $336,022. Prize list will not be announced until Victory Dinner Monday night.

Crowd—Speedway never discloses attendance, admits only more than 200,000 reserved seats and room for 100,000 more persons in infield; in recent years, race day has drawn an estimated 500,000 persons to the Speedway.

Radio—Speedway Network to 630 stations in the United States and Canada, Spain and Radio Free Europe.

Television—The American Broadcasting Company (ABC) will broadcast the race on a tape-delay basis, beginning at 2:30 p.m. CDT and 3:30 p.m. EDT and PDT.

Foyt Favored to Win

INDIANAPOLIS AP — A.J. Foyt will be the favorite and defending champion Gordon Johncock part of the silent majority Sunday when 33 cars compete in the 58th Indianapolis 500-mile race.

The race is scheduled to get underway at noon EDT and the forecast is for partly sunny skies, cool temperatures and a very small chance of showers.

The 1973 race was plagued by rain and cold. It was postponed twice and had to be delayed for more than five hours on the day it finally was run.

Last year's race also was a tragic one, with driver Swede Savage suffering fatal burns in a crash during his 58th lap. One of the pit crewmen, Armando Teran, was killed when struck by a Speedway emergency vehicle in the pits. Driver Salt Walther was critically burned, along with several spectators, in a crash that aborted the start on the original race day.

Killed in Practice

Veteran driver Art Pollard had been killed earlier in a crash during practice.

Johncock won when the race was flagged to a halt because of rain after only 133 of the scheduled 200 laps. He had covered 332½ miles.

The story goes that winning at Indianapolis is worth $1 million to the driver in name value, commercials and speaking engagements. But one year later, Johncock's fortunes had notably changed from what it was before: a journeyman driver.

"I guess you could say that last year's race was a tainted victory for me," he said. "But somebody's got to win the tainted races, too."

The starting field also includes four other past Indy champs. Foyt, sitting in the pole position for the third time, is going after an unprecedented fourth victory. Al Unser has won twice here and Bobby Unser and Mario Andretti each has won once.

SIGNS WITH BRUINS

BOSTON (AP) — Gordon Conson Clark, right winger and captain of the University of New Hampshire hockey team, has signed a contract with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, club officials announced Friday. Clark, 21, is a native of Saint John, N.B., and is scheduled to graduate from New Hampshire in June. He has been selected as the Wildcats most valuable player.

CP News Roundup

Hull Crime Blamed On Visitors

HULL, Que. (CP) — Average Ontario residents are law-abiding "but they become bolder once across their provincial border," says Sgt. Hubert Reiter of the Quebec Provincial Police.

He was commenting on a recent Quebec Police Commission report which says that the presence of about 500,000 Ontario residents across the Ontario River from Hull is a possible explanation for the high crime rate in the area.

The report shows the Hull region has one of the highest rates of break and second assault in the province. It shares with Montreal the lead for the most robberies with violence and the highest rate of murders and manslaughters.

"It's a deplorable situation," said Sgt. Reiter, "but too many Ontarians feel they can get away with crime in this province just by simply hurrying back across the border."

Files Denied

EDMONTON (CP) — Records vital to researchers digging into Indian treaties have been placed off limits to the federal and provincial governments, a research spokesman said Friday.

Richard Price, director of Treaty and Aboriginal Rights Research (TARR) for the Indian Association of Alberta, said the governments are using various separate rules to exclude the files due to hurried research aimed at interpreting treaties.

Ban Urged

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Canadian scientist, one of a team carrying out controversial experiments in Ontario, urges an immediate United States ban on all detergents containing more than 2.2 per cent phosphorus by weight, as a measure to speed Great Lakes recovery from pollution.

Dr. D. W. Schindler of the fisheries and marine service, Freshwater Institute, in Winnipeg, makes the suggestion in an article in this week's issue of the magazine Science, published here by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Fuel Spilled

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lack of security allowed over 12,000 gallons of highly toxic jet fuel to spill from a tank at Canadian Forces Base Comox, an Environment Canada official said Friday.

The spill, which began Tuesday morning, was the second at an armed forces base on Vancouver Island within the last two months.

Waters Stable

MONTREAL (CP) — Flood levels on the Montreal west island were reported stable Friday night and civil authorities said that unless there are heavy rains the waters will recede within two weeks.

Flood levels on the Gatineau River north of Ottawa had receded as much as seven feet from a peak of 51 feet, and some of the evacuated residents returned home.

Undecided

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Friday that the government has only given "consideration" to making the use of automobile seat belts compulsory.

In a speech from the throne in March the premier told MPPs they "will be asked to consider provisions for the mandatory" use of them.

Mr. Davis said that the government has also changed its mind before on measures outlined in throne speeches.

Asked if it is politically hazardous to force the issue, the premier said: "I don't see it as the kind of thing that's that major. There are obvious strong arguments for and against."

Control Fails

OTTAWA (CP) — Almost one-quarter of all pregnancies in a University of Ottawa study of 800 women occurred while a method of birth control was being used.

Statistics from the study also showed that a wife or husband had been sterilized in almost 25 per cent of marriages surveyed.

Study Court

BROCKVILLE (CP) — An advisory committee to study ways of streamlining court procedures will be set up shortly, provincial Justice Secretary Robert Welch said Friday.

Other committee members are Solicitor-General George Kerr, Richard Potter, correctional services minister, and John Clement, consumer and commercial relations minister.

Rail Non-ops Sign Contract

MONTREAL (CP) — Unions representing Canada's 55,000 non-operating railway employees, ordered back to work by Parliament last summer after a week-long national strike, Friday signed a new contract with 11 railways, including Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

One of seven unions involved, the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, said in a news release that the contract incorporates the recommendations contained in the arbitration report of Mr. Justice Emmett Hall.

He was named to arbitrate a settlement in September after Parliament decided that weeks of regional rotating strikes and finally the national rail shutdown were harming the economy.

The statement said the two-year contract provides wage increases of 40 cents hourly in the first year, and an additional nine per cent as of Jan. 1, 1974. The retroactive increases are now in effect.

The average hourly wage under the old contract was $3.54.

A union spokesman said the agreement includes improved vacation arrangements which have been worked out since the Hall report was released last Jan. 16.

He said officials are still negotiating on job security.

The contract expires on Dec. 31 of this year, and negotiations for the next contract are to begin in November.

Non-Canadians to Lose Municipal Franchise

TORONTO (CP) — British subjects who are not Canadian citizens will no longer be able to vote in municipal elections if amendments to the Municipal Act are approved by the legislature.

The amendment, introduced Friday by Donald Irvine, ministers without portfolio, threatened to stir up a major political storm and several Conservative members have indicated they will break with party solidarity on the issue.

The New Democratic Party said the move would make it legally possible for a non-Canadian British subject to run for office but not to vote.

The matter was adjourned for the weekend to give members a chance to consider the matter.

Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) told Mr. Irvine that Premier Davis "Will crucify you" when he finds out the subject matter of the amendment.

James Breithaupt (L-Kitchener) said his party believes Canadian citizenship should be the only criteria for voting in an Ontario election. The federal Elections Act will require federal voters to be Canadian citizens in 1975.

The NDP proposed that anyone with landed-immigrant status should be allowed to vote in municipal elections.

Exempt Sale

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government said Friday it will exempt the Ontario Menonite relief sale from the Ontario sales tax up to a maximum of $30,000.

Municipalities Refused Shelter From Suit Over Pedestrian Malls

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government has taken a firm stand against municipalities that want to establish pedestrian malls without assuming liability for loss of business to merchants outside the mall area.

The right to sue a municipality for the consequences of its actions has always been considered in law.

But the province has been providing exemptions to the law on a year-to-year basis in the form of amendments to the Municipal Act.

The malls have been popular with citizens but controversial because of the rivalry between merchants with stores on the blocked-off streets and those on the fringes.

To protect themselves, many municipalities have been appearing each year before the government to seek the amendment waiving liability and damages they may have had to face from merchants who feel they have been injured.

"Our attitude to the municipalities in the past has been, well, okay, we'll do it this year until we can sue this thing out," a government spokesman said.

But a month ago, when Niagara Falls appeared before the legislature's private bills committee again seeking a waiver, the government refused.

"The cabinet decided only recently that we can't really waive the liability any longer," Ronald Farrow, of intergovernmental affairs, said in an interview.

"We're telling the municipalities that we won't waive the liability, but that they can have their malls if they're willing to take the risk."

While the cabinet decision is irrevocable, the province indicated this week in the case of Toronto's Yonge Street mall.

Donald Irvine, minister without portfolio responsible for municipal affairs, told Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey in a letter Friday that Toronto's plans for the Yonge mall were "well in progress," the province would provide the exemption for that one only.

The decision might have a profound effect on the future of pedestrian malls.

It means many councils will not want to put themselves in the position where they will be sued. Niagara Falls Mayor George Buktzer said in an interview.

His city is going ahead with a pedestrian mall, with merchants on the fringes to provide a route that will at least keep vehicular traffic to their business blocks.

Municipalities can work out an arrangement that can satisfy them," the mayor said. "I don't think the courts are grounds to sue us by the new method of relieving that we're not in use."

Meanwhile, the province is moving towards omnibus legislation to eliminate the need for municipalities to come before it each year for amendments to permit them to establish malls.

At the moment, ministry approval must be obtained before any municipality can reroute streets, or block off traffic.

The Campaign: Week One
Provides Shape of Things to Come

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Trudeau: Started the week with a whirlwind visit to Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island and said leadership is the campaign's key issue.

Said in Ottawa Wednesday the government stands by its policy of having parents free to choose English or French schools for their children.

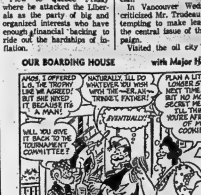
Dropped into Winnipeg Thursday just long to announce government plans to provide more jobs in the city's aerospace industry.

Campaigned in Vancouver and Abbotsford, B.C., where he accused the Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats of contempt for Parliament by first defeating the government's budget and then demanding that parts of it be implemented.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield: In a pre-campaign outing to Toronto Tuesday, promised that a PC government would invite retired auditor-general Maxwell Henderson to become an economic adviser.

Officially kicked off his campaign in Winnipeg Thursday, delivering a caustic attack on the credibility of the Liberal government and Mr. Trudeau.

Flew to Quebec Friday where he attacked the Liberals as the party of big business organized interests who have enough gimmicks lacking to ride out the hardships of inflation.



New Democrat Leader David Lewis: Called in Regina Tuesday for an independent inquiry into conflict-of-interest allegations against a former National Energy Board official.

In Vancouver Wednesday, attacked Mr. Trudeau for attempting to make leadership the central issue of the campaign.

Visited the oil city of Edmonton Thursday and accused the oil industry of using political blackmail to influence the outcome of the election.

Campaigned in Saskatoon where he attacked the Conservative price-and-wage controls policy and challenged the party to make details clear before July 8.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette spent the week campaigning quietly in his home riding of Temiscamingue.

Liberals Said Party Of Elite

By STEPHEN SCOTT

HALIFAX (CP) — Conservative leader Robert Stanfield called the Liberals the party of the "complacent elite" Friday night and called on Canadians to believe that there is an alternative to a Liberal government in Ottawa.

In his first Quebec stop of his newly-launched July 8 federal election campaign, Mr. Stanfield said the Liberals speak for those who are comfortable enough to ride out inflation and for the big and organized interests who have enough muscle and financial backing to ride out the inflation.

"They speak for a complacent elite, an elite which they do not choose to call an elite, a distant or to afford," he said in his second-day attack in two days on the government of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Stanfield flew into the Montreal area on the second day of his election campaign after delivering a strong blast against Mr. Trudeau in Winnipeg.

In a relatively easy day, Mr. Stanfield spoke at a news conference, went on a radio talk show and made a few miles north to this community to support Roch Lasalle, one of three Conservatives in Quebec in the last Parliament.

PM Says Foes Show Contempt for House

VANCOUVER (CP) — The rains fell on Prime Minister Trudeau's election campaign Friday, but didn't dampen his enthusiasm as he attacked both the Conservatives and the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Trudeau told a noisy afternoon meeting in nearby Abbotsford Friday night that Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and NDP leader David Lewis were contemptuous of Parliament for asking the government to implement some measures from a budget that the two parties rejected in forcing an election.

The meeting marked the end of a whirlwind day of campaigning for the prime minister who visited a uranium stalked voters on Vancouver streets and addressed high school students before heading to Abbotsford.

He told the evening meeting attended by 1,500 Liberal partyfaithful, that Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Lewis could have brought about implementation of the proposals they wanted passed if only they had waited a couple of weeks before bringing down the government.

Mr. Trudeau said he wasn't surprised to hear Mr. Lewis call for a cut in the federal sales tax, although he was surprised to hear the Conservative leader issue the same request Thursday night.

"Here these two gentlemen vote against the government's good bread-and-butter budget, but say we are a mean government," said the prime minister.

"After there was no parliament they say we should have gone ahead and done what parliament refused permission to do.

"What an extraordinary contempt of parliament these gentlemen are showing who want to be re-elected to Parliament."

Mr. Trudeau said the government won't implement any more budget proposals before the July 8 vote because others must "what is the election all about?"

Higher interest rates for Canada Savings Bonds, promised in the budget, have been implemented.

The prime minister also suggested the Conservatives are split over Mr. Stanfield's call for wage and price controls.

"As the election develops, you will see more and more Tories wide up on this issue, just as they were divided on every other issue."

Mr. Trudeau also attacked the idea of controls, calling it a prized to bear the Conservative "freeze now, pay later" plan.

Wage, Price Freeze Attacked

SASKATOON (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis capped a five-day visit to Western Canada Friday with a goading attack on Conservative-wage and price control proposals.

Initially, Mr. Lewis said, the freeze was to last for 60 days, then it became 90 days, and more recently party leader Robert Stanfield said it would be "a maximum of 90 days."

To underline what he described as the division the program had created in the Conservative ranks, Mr. Lewis referred to ministerial statements by a number of Conservative bopefuls in the July 8 federal election.

Conservative financial critic James Gillies had described the freeze as "a pause" rather than a period of controls.

Ron Atkey, former national CBC newsman and now a Conservative candidate for York-Scarborough, had called the proposals "a very messy policy to explain."

Crazy Coincidences

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

When is a coincidence more than a coincidence?

In Philadelphia recently, I was told this curious, yes, crazy story by a U.S. government official.

"I was in Washington for a day on official business," he said, "and somehow in the course of the conversation the Korean War came up. I said that I had served as a medic in an infantry unit.

"That led me to mention, for no particular reason, the commanding officer of the unit. I recalled that the last time I saw him he was very badly wounded and was being put aboard a plane to fly him to hospital. He probably died, I said.

"Well, this conversation got me thinking about that commander — for the first time in years. I couldn't get him off my mind. I wondered if he had died after all.

"Anyway, later in the afternoon, on my way to the train, there, sitting in the station was an army officer who looked strangely familiar. Curious, I couldn't resist going up to him and starting a conversation.

"You guessed it! He was, so help me, the man I'd been talking about earlier. He was alive and well and still in the army."

The man who told me this story was afraid I would find the bizarre coincidence too far-fetched to believe. But then I told him a few similar ones I've collected.

Such as a recent one involving my friend, The Rev. William V. Rauscher, an Episcopal clergyman, who, while doing research on ESP, ran across the name Adam Linmayer.

Linmayer was mentioned as the first high-scorer Dr. J.B. Rhine found in his famous ESP card-guessing tests at Duke University more than 30 years ago. For some reason his name stuck in Bill Rauscher's mind and he found himself wondering whether Adam Linmayer was still alive and still had his ESP.

Rauscher even contacted Dr. Rhine, now retired in Durham, N.C., and asked him about Linmayer. Rhine said he had lost track of his one-time ESP star but the last he had heard Linmayer was living somewhere in New Jersey.

The next week or so, Bill Rauscher, who lives near Philadelphia, was visiting an aunt in a small town in New Jersey. In the conversation turned to ESP and his aunt said: "Don't look now but speaking of ESP that man sitting at the other table is known around town as something of an ESP buff. His name is Lin...something."

Bill Rauscher's pulse jumped a little. He went over to the man, introduced himself, and said: "You aren't by any chance Adam Linmayer?"

He was.

"Coincidence? Mere happenstance? Sheer accident?

Of course, what else?

But sometimes one can't help wondering if a coincidence can be more than just a coincidence. Do we create some "coincidences" by our own unconscious ESP? Do we attract the people or circumstances we want? Or are we sometimes see the future, without knowing it?

There are some parapsychologists (scientists who study ESP) who claim that possibly all coincidences are the result of ESP working on the unconscious level.

However, there are weird, freak cases of happenstance which don't seem to fit any pattern but remain so crazy you wonder if the work coincidence really covers them. Such as this one:

In 1965, when I was religion editor of the Toronto Star, I wrote a story about a visit I had made to one of Father Divine's "heavens."

Father Divine was the black messiah whose followers called him God and who had been claiming publicly for at least 40 years that he would never die.

So on the story I wrote the headline: "Father Divine: The God Who Will Never Die."

The night before the story was to run, the Star phoned and said: "You know that piece about the God who'll never die? Well, he just did."

Father Divine, estimated to be 105 years old, had picked that day to die.

My story, now uncannily topical, ran with a slightly revised headline: "Father Divine: The God Who Died."

Feature Times

AT THE PARK — In Color — Showing for the last three days evenings "The Pyx" plus a full supporting program. Two complete showings at 7:00 and 9:10. Tonight's feature is "Kaczender's Love", starring David Selby. An adult love story, and well liked. Also showing "Foxy Lady", the story of a girl who becomes a super heroine. Last complete programme to be shown. All above programs are restricted to persons 18 years of age and over.

The Poolside Gang ...Join Them!

The fun is just the price of a day room at The Four Seasons. We have the pool . . . cool and sparkling clean, places to lounge, places to sun. We also provide a play area for the kids as well as tennis courts and other games. We give you a bright and happy room (doze or watch TV in air conditioned comfort if you want) and we take care of everything you need — food for the mood, refreshments and what-have-you. If peace and quiet are your wish, there's plenty available around our grassy lawns and flower beds.

Join the Poolside Gang any day of the week from mid-morning to 5:00 p.m. Day room charge is $10.00 (based on four adults). Extra adults $2.50 each. Maximum of six persons to a room — children under 14 are free. Call 968-3411 in plenty of time to reserve your room.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, May 26

Aries (March 21-April 19) If you find people giving you little attention wherever you go it's because your personality has some extra pizazz today.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20) Your artistic bent will be evident in anything domestic you put your hand to. Guests are in for something special.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) In situations where creative thinking is required, you are apt to outshine all others unless they too are Geminis.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Certain work you need done now can be done yourself. Save the money. You may not feel you can because you've never tried before.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) This should be a very pleasant day for you all-around. A situation that has had you bottled-up is losing its effectiveness.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will look like a hero in the eyes of one you go out of your way to be nice to today. This person doesn't forget easily.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will pick up momentum once you are out among people today. Though it may take some doing to get you out of the home first.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) Without having to be the least bit forceful, you will find others adhering to your suggestions. In fact, they expect you to assume the lead.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You are quite able to cope with large problems and large ideas today. Philosophicot or esoteric questions will afford mental exercise.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be willing to share. You will find it will awaken the generosity of another. Both of you will come out winners.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You will be more at ease with sensitive and gentle persons. Aggressive or abrasive types will offer you little.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You won't go wrong today in whatever you do, so long as it's in line with your highest ideals. Don't hedge one iota.

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Monday, May 27

You're still at a high point where acceptance by others is concerned. It should be a fun day, whatever you choose to do.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Conditions are favorable for you with individuals with whom you share c'ose ties. Benefits will come today through these channels.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) A busy but pleasant day is in store for you. You're likely to be dividing and lump into persons you haven't seen lately.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Matters that relate to business or finance will be your cup of tea today. If anyone can turn a profit, it should be you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) If you use your initiative you'll be able to provide events to Your liking. Dealing only in ideas is not enough.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Now and again we have to go to others for a favor. Instead of that your case today, your chances of having it granted are strong.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Some news you'll be getting will heighten your hopes regarding future plans. It may cause you to change course slightly.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Concentrate on doing something good. A secret ambition, Conditions now are ripe for some substantial progress.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A friend who is distant from where you live would be pleased to hear from you. This person has some interesting news, too.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're going to change the way you customarily do something in a routine nature. The change is a marked improvement.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The answer you're looking for to help you make an important decision is likely to come to you in a flash today.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) An unusual type of return will come to you if you apply yourself to the tasks or service you're involved in.

Government Will Buy de Havilland Ltd. and Perhaps Canadair

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced today it intends to buy de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. and to take out an option to buy Canadair Ltd.

However, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie told a news conference, the government does not intend to operate either firm "on more than an interim basis."

"It is the intention to seek responsible Canadian interests to purchase and operate these enterprises," said an accompanying news release.

The government's option to buy Toronto-based de Havilland from the British aerospace firm Hawker Siddeley Group Ltd. was taken out in 1973 and was to have expired June 28, 1974.

Canadair, based in suburban Montreal, is owned by General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis, Mo., and the government has served notice of its intention to acquire the purchase option.

Mr. Gillespie said the development of de Havilland and Canadair have been hindered because they are foreign-controlled. The Canadian subsidiaries had had little independence and, in some respects, had to compete with the parent corporations.

The option agreement with Hawker-Siddley, which is to be completed within 30 days, covers 10.7 per cent of the de Havilland shares and the price is based on the net book value of the company. The government has set aside $28.6 million.

Troops Control Oil Depots

Ulster Protestants Seek Power Blackout

BELFAST (AP) — Militant Protestants leaders today called for a major intensification of their strike, including a total power blackout, in retaliation for the British government's decision to use troops to take over Northern Ireland's oil depots and filling stations.

The Ulster Workers Council (UWC), which organized the crippling strike now in its 13th day, urged all workers to refuse to perform even the essential services which had previously been maintained through the strike.

But the UWC urged workers to remain calm and "ensure that their protests are entirely peaceful."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain, in his first major move to break the strike, today ordered the takeover of Northern Ireland's two main oil depots and 28 gasoline stations.

The operation involved about 500 troops, who rolled out coils of barbed wire around the gasoline stations and stood guard with weapons in hand.

There are about 16,500 British troops in Ulster, which the government says may be reinforced at any time.

The threat of a power blackout came despite assurances by the British government's Northern Ireland minister, Merlyn Rees, that he does not intend to send troops into the power stations.

An electricity board spokesman said all workers walked out of one of the Northern Ireland's five power stations, resulting in a progressive shutdown of the electricity system.

In another development, army chiefs said security forces during the weekend made their biggest detention of Protestant extremists in five years. A total of 57 persons were taken into custody in and around Belfast, including alleged leaders of the Protestant Ulster Defence Association and the Ulster Volunteer Force. Some face murder and intimidation charges.

The Ulster ministry of commerce announced that gasoline coupons —for use at the army-controlled stations—will be issued to about 6,500 persons employed in utilities and other essential services. But it is uncertain whether they will use them for fear of reprisals by the militants.

Militants began putting up barricades within hours of the troops' seizure of oil depots. Traffic was halted on the main highway to Dublin, the capital of the neighboring Irish republic.

Men, women and children linked arms in human chains to block roads in east Belfast and Sandy Row, both fiercely Protestant quarters. Marauding bands of youngsters hijacked vehicles on the east side of Belfast and blocked at least three main streets.

But the army moved in swiftly, smashing through roadblocks in several areas with armored personnel carriers. No injuries were reported.

Troops seized a clandestine radio station known as Ulster Free Radio in the staunch Protestant Woodvale quarter of Belfast. It had been used by militants supporting the strike.

Syrians Critical

Guerrilla Issue Snags Truce Talk

DAMASCUS (AP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger and President Hafez Assad of Syria met today to discuss an Israeli-Syrian troop disengagement but there was no immediate word on whether progress was made toward a final agreement.

Kissinger scheduled further talks with Assad before shifting back to Israel his evening—just about the time Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was scheduled to arrive here.

A spokesman said there was no possibility of a meeting between Kissinger and Gromyko.

Kissinger was to meet with Israeli leaders this evening and leave for Washington Tuesday, ending his peace 'mission after 31 days.

Today's final meetings with Assad were marked by an official Syrian statement accusing Kissinger of injecting the issue of Palestinian guerrillas into their deliberations.

Kissinger was advised to address his concern to the guerrilla leadership. The statement from the Syrian Arab news agency said the Syrians are not trained to discuss the guerrilla issue. It said that several "difficult points" remain for discussion.

The Soviet news agency Tass revealed Gromyko's visit, saying he was coming "at the invitation of the leadership of the Syrian Arab Republic."

Victims of Attack

Building Collapses

KUWAIT (Reuter) — Rescuers toiled through the night among ruins of a partly-built office building in which at least 20 workmen are feared to have died when three floors caved in. About 150 workmen were sleeping inside the building when it collapsed at dawn Sunday.

Prisoners Stabbed

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Edward R. Landry, 29, of Toronto, a prisoner in Collins Bay penitentiary, remains in fair condition in hospital here today suffering from stab wounds. Landry was found in his cell at the penitentiary last Friday with stab wounds to the head, neck, chest and back.

Fire-bombs Suspected

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Police and the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office are investigating the possibility that home-made gasoline bombs caused a fire Sunday which destroyed a pizza shop and damaged seven other businesses in a shopping plaza here. Deputy Fire Chief Warren Corp said two beer bottles containing gasoline and wicks were found on the floor of a dental clinic two doors from the pizza shop.

Drug Charges Laid

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-seven arrests and 35 charges were laid at a folk and country music concert attended by about 45,000 fans at High Park Sunday. Police said 34 of the charges were related to drugs.

Long Rule Ends

LUXEMBOURG (Reuter) — The conservative Christian Democrat party of the tiny Grand Duchy of Luxembourg lost its hardest knock in half a century Sunday when the 340,000 population swung their vote to the moderates in a general election. The Christian Democrats have governed either alone or in coalition for 55 years, but today's Socialists and Liberals emerging the biggest vote-catchers.

Priest, Youths Shot to Death

AKLAVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — RCMP today were seeking clues as to what prompted a 19-year-old youth to shoot a 67-year-old Roman Catholic priest late Saturday night and then commit another 16-year-old to die in a gun battle early Sunday, after the first youth was killed.

"There's a good possibility we may never know," Insp. John Sebastian of Inuvik said.

RCMP withheld the name of the priest, a member of the Oblate order who came to the Canadian North from Paris, France, in 1936 where he served first in Coppermine, N.W.T. and later at Tuktoyaktuk before coming to Aklavik, 1,250 miles north of Edmonton.

One of the youths was identified as Eugene Lawrence Thrasher, an Eskimo. The name of the other, an Indian, was withheld as police tried to reach his parents on their trapline.

RCMP Const. Eric Bunting, 24, was shot in the shoulder when, as the only policeman in the village of 700, he answered a report that the priest had been shot.

A resident of the village shot Thrasher after the constable was wounded, Insp. Sebastian said.

The priest and Thrasher died in hospital in Inuvik early Sunday.

About midnight Saturday, a seven-man force of RCMP arrived in Aklavik and heard gunfire. As they approached a house in the village, the other youth emerged from the front door and opened fire, Insp. Sebastian said the youth was killed when police returned the fire.

He said no connection has been established between the two youths killed.

Chemical Makes Cancer Cells Behave

TORONTO (CP) — A chemical "switch" that turns cancer cells back into normal cells is being studied at the Sloan-Kettering Research Institute for cancer research in New York, institute director Dr. Robert A. Good said Sunday.

Speaking to a centennial conference on laryngeal cancer, Dr. Good said that Dr. Larry Helson, a pediatrician, is studying cells from children with a form of cancer called neuroblastoma. He has found that in a test tube the chemical can tell the cells to stop their cancerous growth "and do their differentiated thing."

Dr. Helson has also used the drug in some of the children, Dr. Good said, but that it is not a cure—only an indication of the direction of research and treatment.

Half of all children with leukemia now live for five years after Dr. Good said, compared with only a few months a few years ago.

He added that the Sloan-Kettering Institute cures half its patients now.

He defined cure as "returning the patient to a normal life expectancy."

Hanging Around

While others watch from the safety of a second storey window, cadet Robert Ryan bounds from the Armory walls — a thin rope separating him from a fall and injury. The cadet took part Sunday in a repelling demonstration, one of several drills and exhibitions held during the Hastings-Prince Edward Regimental Cadet Corps' annual inspection.

Father of SLA Suspect Ends Vigil, Calls Daughter Criminal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The father of a Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) member has given up a week-long vigil to make contact with his daughter, leaving for home after saying he considers her and her comrades criminals.

Frederick Schwartz left for his suburban Chicago home Sunday after fruitless pleas to his daughter, Emily Harris, her husband, Bill and Patricia Hearst to surrender. Schwartz said an intermediary claimed to have made direct contact with the three, but said two meetings arranged for him with his daughter did not take place.

Schwartz, a consulting engineer, had said he would walk "hand in hand" to a safe surrender with the Harrises and Miss Hearst if they would only make contact with him.

However, he told an airport news conference before leaving, "Emily and Bill Harris and Patricia Hearst are in my view criminals, at least in the sense that they are, fugitives."

The three, said by an FBI agent to be the last persons sought as members of the terrorist SLA, are wanted on state charges of robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and kidnaping. They also are accused of federal firearms violations.

Schwartz said a claim of direct contact with the trio was made in two telephone calls by someone he identified as an intermediary He said he went to an appointed place in the Los Angeles area Friday, but arrived an hour late because of freeway traffic.

No one met him that day or Saturday when, Schwartz said, "I literally scoured the area, making myself as visible as possible".

Then he reported the calls to authorities.

"If it was a hoax, it was a cruel hoax," he said.

The Los Angeles Times reports that Mrs. Harris, through a job as a clerk-typist at the University of California at Berkeley, had access to data showing when Miss Hearst attended classes, her address and how she might spend her free time. Miss Hearst, 20, a newspaper heiress, was a sophomore art student at Berkeley when she was kidnaped.

The newspaper said police had found a notebook apparently belonged to Mrs. Harris. It said the notebook contained notes about Miss Hearst and the words "guns and action."

Also Sunday, authorities studied a tape recording received Saturday by Berkeley radio station KPFA. It carried the voices of a woman who identified herself by General Field Marshal Cabrella of the federated forces of the Symbionese Liberation Army and a man who said he was the minister of cultural affairs of the Black Liberation Army.

The woman announced formation of a coalition, the United People's Liberation Army.

"This united front of urban guerrilla organizations was forged out of an emergency meeting after the events in Los Angeles last week," she said. Six members of the SLA were killed in a gunbattle with police in Los Angeles 10 days ago.

She said her message was intended for Miss Hearst and the Harrises: "If you have not received our message through proper channels, I say to you, "Regroup, regroup, do nothing in haste—we will unite in time".

The Weather

Synopsis: An area of low pressure over Quebec will continue to effect the weather in southern Ontario today as it did all weekend. Unseasonably cool weather will persist, although more sunshine was expected today. On Tuesday another disturbance from west will spread cloud across most regions with the threat of showers late in the day. Little change is forecast in the temperatures.

Pigeons Stolen

Police here are looking for a thief who has a strange penchant for stealing birds.

Late Saturday night, Fred Waite, a well-known pigeon breeder, who lives at 46 Pinnacle Street, reported to police that someone had broken into his garage and stolen two fantail pigeons.

The birds, a male and a female, were valued at approximately $25.

Mr. Waite's son, said that one of the birds was a prize winner who took second place in its category at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto this year.

The birds are banded with numbers 1440 and 2115.

Roblin to Speak At PC Kickoff

Duff Roblin, former premier of the Province of Manitoba and Progressive Conservative candidate for Peterborough in the July 8 federal election will be the campaign kickoff speaker for Hastings candidate Jack Ellis.

Mr. Roblin will speak in support of Mr. Ellis' candidacy on Wednesday, June 5 at Centennial Secondary School. The meeting gets under way at eight p.m.

Mr. Ellis, a former Belleville mayor, was Hastings member in the House of Commons during the last parliament and was again chosen as Progressive Conservative riding candidate at a nomination meeting last autumn.

High Level Arrest

Two Belleville police constables performed, quite literally, above the normal call of duty this weekend in arresting a RR 1 Carrying Place man 115 feet above ground level.

While on regular patrol Saturday evening, Constables Ken Gutoskie and Paul Smith spotted a man atop the 155-foot Pine St. water tower.

After calling for him to come down, and receiving a refusal, the officers went up after him.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today, Irvin Strand, 22, of RR 1 Carrying Place was arrested by Constable Smith on the platform surrounding the water tower reservoir, 115 feet in the air.

Police have charged Mr. Strand with public intoxication, and having liquor in a place other than a residence.

Another charge — creating mischief to police property — was laid following a disturbance in a police jail cell on Campbell Street.

Leeway Leery

Corby Distilleries Ltd. driver Lorne Meeks checks carefully the space he has to manoeuver his loaded forklift truck Saturday in the second annual Prince Edward Hastings section Industrial Accident Prevention Association competition. Mr. Meeks was one of 27 competitors vying for top honors in the day-long event. The competition is geared to encouraging the safe and efficient use of forklift trucks in industry.

Second Try Pays Off In Forklift Competition

If at first you don't succeed, try, try again, runs the old saw.

It works, as Robert Courtney, a Deloro Stellite employee can easily testify.

Last year, during the Industrial Accident Prevention Association forklift competition, Mr. Courtney placed second, behind winner Jim Woolsey.

He came back this year and took top honors, collecting 421 points of a possible 446 in the day-long event Saturday.

Trenton Cold Storage Ltd. driver, Mr. Woolsey placed third in the second annual competition sponsored by IAPA's Prince Edward-Hastings section. Mr. Woolsey was squeezed out of the runner-up spot by Sheldon Sanford of The Corby Distilleries Ltd. employee last with Mr. Woolsey on equal point scores but came out ahead on a better time score.

The team trophy was taken by Mr. Woolsey and Barry Pyndiwhie, two of five Trenton Cold Storage Ltd. competitors.

Both Mr. Sanford and Mr. Courtney will compete in the IAPA provincial finals in Dresden in July.

The competition is held to encourage safe and efficient use of forklift trucks in industry. Competitors are tested over a nine-station course. Each station requires a driver to display his mastery of different driving and cargo handling skills.

In all 27 contestants representing 12 Belleville and Trenton companies competed.

Each competitor was checked on pallet lifting and stacking and exact placement. Driving precision and habits were tested by putting competitors through a nine-set course, a simulated railway boxcar, a blind corner, and a narrow straight-line alley.

Competitors and Dick Ellis Rink was held up temporarily when Mr. Ellis's Wilson Liftruck forklifts sprang an oil leak. However, two company mechanics were quickly rigged the trouble, allowing the contest to end ahead of schedule.

Letter Carriers Plot Tactics for Negotiation

The Letter Carriers Union of Canada executive is asking its members for a strike mandate before its negotiation team enters contract talks with the government, union national secretary-treasurer Alex Edey said this weekend.

Without such a mandate, Mr. Edey said during an interview, "it's like going to the table without a weapon."

The national secretary was in Belleville for two days of closed pre-negotiation talks with 46 delegates of District Four, one of nine across Canada. Decisions made during the two-day weekend sessions will be compiled and added to the national negotiating team's platform.

The delegates represent approximately 1,400 letter carriers in 34 locals stretching from Cornwall to Oshawa, north to Sudbury and east to Ottawa.

"Previously, we started without this mandate," said Mr. Edey. "We had to go back to our members to ask for a strike vote."

Delegates voted Sunday on the executive committee's request. Results are confidential and will be forwarded immediately to Ottawa union headquarters.

However, Jim Campbell, Local 45 president and district business agent said Sunday, delegates voted unanimously in favor of all other wage and working condition recommendations brought before the delegations are expected to begin September 1, Mr. Edey said.

The strike mandate was given to the negotiating team, he said.

"If after four months, negotiations are not fruitful, the negotiating team will seek conciliation. After 28 days, on January 21, we will be legally entitled to strike."

Mr. Campbell said the form of strike will be decided at that time, all the while emphasizing that the union is not look'ng for strike action and disruption of mail service.

The postal union will go before the government with a limited number of specific demands at the time negotiations are expected to begin September 1, Mr. Edey said.

"We intend to have a collective agreement at the expiry date of the current contract," he said.

The current 30-month contract, signed after 13 months of negotiations, expires December 31 this year.

Loyalist Graduation

Loyalist College graduates Mrs. Minka Wouda of Tweed (registered nursing assistant) and Yuk Fung Edman Yiu of Hong Kong (communication arts, now working in Kingston) received congratulations from Wilfred Wilkinson board chairman (left) and college president Herbert Young, following convocation on Saturday.

Split Jurisdiction a Problem In Rehabilitating Offenders

Ontario's correctional services are moving toward community-based programs for both adults and juveniles.

"Our sense of the feeling of the people of Ontario is that this is the tack they want to take — see property selected people back in the community, becoming productive citizens again under tutelage," said Dr. R. T. Potter, Ontario's minister of correctional services. He spoke Saturday night at a banquet for members of Belleville Lodge 123, AF and AM and their wives.

Dr. Potter attacked the split jurisdiction for management of offenders. The province is responsible for juveniles and for adults sentenced for two years or less. The federal government is in charge of those sentenced to more than two years and runs the national parole board. However, parole supervision for many in provincial institutions is in the care of federal agencies.

Reform of penal and parole programs depends on federal-provincial co-operation and national leadership, Progress has been "most disappointing" said Dr. Potter.

"The number of people for whom we are responsible always comes as a surprise to my audience," he said. "We are responsible for the welfare and security of some 26,000 adults and juveniles.

Only about 6,000 are in institutions. The remaining 20,000 are living in the community under some form of supervision. About 16,000 of these are on probation and the other 4,000 will be associated with community-based programs such as wardship from training school, parole or temporary absence from employment, education or family reasons.

Ottawa has promised to hand over parole jurisdiction in Ontario in respect to those in provincial care, but has yet to make good on its promise.

"Frankly, our patience is now beginning to wear a little thin," said the minister. "Clearly, continuity of care can best be ensured when the jurisdiction having responsibility for institutional care and the jurisdiction having responsibility for parole supervision are one and the same."

Ontario has enjoyed a 98 per cent success rate with those on temporary absence programs for its institutions during the last 4½ years, Dr. Potter attributed this to improved classification methods to determine those offenders fit to re-enter the community.

About 625 boys and 120 girls under 16 are admitted each year under the training schools or juvenile delinquents acts. The proportion of girls is increasing annually. Children who have committed no offence, but who have been declared "unmanageable" can be sent to training schools.

"The public is coming to a realization that there has to be a better way of handling these children than putting them through court, and no reform is not far off," said Dr. Potter.

The ministry now has 28 group homes in operation to care for some of these children.

"Some of the more popularly held theories about juvenile delinquency have been shown invalid by recent research," he said. "For example, our wards come from a variety of socio-economic backgrounds where over 60 per cent of the parents hold steady, full-time employment. Statistics show that just over 10 per cent of our wards have been living with both parents, a fact which indicates that children of single parent families and broken homes do not necessarily experience more problems."

Ontario is committed, he said to a program of adult community centres similar to the successful group homes for juveniles.

Raising the age limit for juvenile delinquency from 16 to 18 would be costly to the provinces, Dr. Potter said. Ontario is now studying the additional costs and added facilities necessary. A cost-sharing arrangement with the federal government is essential before such a move is made.

It is no secret that the bulk of the revenues now accruing to government flows to the federal level and the preponderance of expenditures occurs at the provincial level," he said.

Giant Corporations Blamed For Continuing Inflation

The rapid rate of inflation in Canada can be blamed upon the far reaching control multi-national corporations have on the economy, Desmond Morton told Letter Carriers Union of Canada delegates to a two-day conference here this weekend.

Author and professor of Canadian history at the University of Toronto, Mr. Morton is a former member of the New Democratic Party executive council.

The major parties, Liberal and Conservative, can do little against the country's economic plight. In 1973, Canada's rate of inflation topped 10 per cent.

"The brakes aren't holding," he said.

"However much Liberal and Tory leaders, in all sincerity wanted to, they could never deliver because their first loyalty had to be to the people who paid their bills."

Neither party "can attack the major causes of needless price-gouging in Canada because they are part of the problem".

On the other hand, said Mr. Morton, the NDP has a "rotten image in the boardrooms". Working men support the party financially.

"Unlike the Liberals or Conservatives, it is not financing its campaign with corporate donations and the blessings of industrial and financial magnates."

Corporation incomes are so great that Imperial Oil, an Exxon subsidiary, takes in more money each year than either the governments of Alberta or British Columbia.

"They control the prices their suppliers will be offered; they control the prices their consumers will pay and if either group doesn't like it, they have nowhere else to go.

"When a few vast corporations can raise their prices without fear of losing business, do you wonder that inflation is growing so rapidly, that prices all rise so automatically that you or I have no comeback in the market place."

Misses Sign, Car Wrecked

A Hamilton man escaped injury in a single-car accident on Highway 33 and the intersection of Hastings County road five Sunday.

Belleville provincial police said John William Walker, 54, of Hamilton was southbound on Highway 33 at the time of the accident.

Police said the Walker vehicle went through a stop sign and dropped 25 feet down an embankment before coming to rest in a ditch on the south side of county road five.

Mr. Walker has been charged with failing to stop at a stop sign by police.

Counselling Service Available in County

PICTON — A new program to assist families with problems has been initiated by the Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society.

This family counselling service is also designed to assess the need for ongoing family treatment service. The program is geared to helping families and children with various problems. These may include children who have manifested problems of adjustment or behavior, or persons who are experiencing marital difficulties.

Family counselling is described as a way of resolving problems by involving family members in individual or group discussions. The program is designed for short-term therapy and will last three months. Qualified staff will guide and assist in discussion sessions. Resource personnel, including a psychologist will be available for consultation.

Co-ordinator of the program will be Mrs Susan Quader who holds a Master's Degree in social work from Hunter College, New York City. She has had several years of varied experience counselling parents and children in family clinics in Canada and the United States. Mrs. Quader will work as a family therapist throughout the summer.

Persons interested in the new CAS program can obtain further information or make an appointment with the family counselling unit by contacting the Children's Aid Society in Picton.

Poster Winners Announced

PICTON — Poster winners have been announced in the sixth annual competition sponsored by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority.

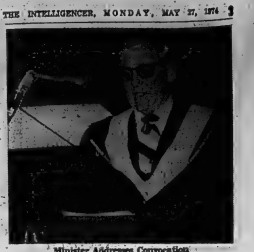
Twelve elementary schools in Prince Edward entered the competition and 33 posters were judged by the PERCA's Information and Education Advisory Board.

Winners are as follows: Category A — grades three and four, Sherry Lynn Salisbury, RR 1, Ameliasburgh, a student at Massassaga School. Runner-up, Laverne Hennessey, Pinecrest School, Bloomfield.

Category B — grades five and six winner, Jennifer Cole of South Marysburgh School. Runner-up Gordon Ludolph of RR 1, Belleville, a pupil at Rednersville School.

Category C — grades seven and eight winner, Colin Campbell, RR 2, Bloomfield, a student at Pinecrest School. Runner-up, Mary Rorabeck, RR 1, Milford, a pupil at South Marysburgh School.

Big Brothers Request Help



Big Brothers have been set up in the city and right now they need your help. On June 14 and 15, there will be a recruitment drive with action centred around a display at the Quinte Mall.

But for those who want more information about the group or may be interested in becoming a big brother, a telephone number has been set up — 962-3666.

Roly Thomas, one of the organizers of the group, estimates there are a potential of 200 boys in this area who could benefit from having a big brother. Many of the boys are referred to the group by such agencies as children's aid societies.

And while there is a potential of 200 boys, 35 boys have already been referred to Big Brothers. To deal with this need, Big Brothers are processing 15 applications and of this number, five or six big brothers are ready to match now, said Mr. Thomas.

Minister Addresses Convocation

Potter Praises Colleges' Role

Loyalist College administrators were told Saturday that they are "heading up a growth industry in Hastings county".

The speaker was Dr R T Potter, minister of correctional services for Ontario, addressing the seventh annual convocation of the college.

He said he was using the occasion to get something off his mind — his anger at criticism of community colleges.

The know-it-alls lambasted the government when it gave out the word of creation of community colleges, calling them second rate substitutes for universities Well, no one here today feels let down or put down or thinks he has been given second best."

The community colleges are shaping a cultural trend, said Dr. Potter. They are upping the age limit for education and adjusting to the needs of people at a time when the conventional universities are entrenching themselves and failing to respond to trends.

The expansion in post-secondary institutions will increase slowly in the next few years, he said

University enrolment will show little growth, community colleges will account for most of the increase," Dr Potter said.

About 1,400 people crowded into the gym-cafeteria of the college Saturday afternoon for the first convocation held on the college premises Of the graduates 275 were full-time regular day students who had completed one, two or three year courses, 17 were extension division students, some of who had attended colleges part-time for six years to earn credits for their diplomas and 218 were retraining division students.

W J Wilkinson, chairman of the board of governors, called for an alumni association to keep former students in touch with one another and with the college.

Two retired members of the board of governors, W C Down and Frank Rabel were presented with silver rose bowls as tokens of appreciation for their services Past board chairman John Donelan was presented with an honorary diploma.

A Little Longer

Whether or not the Ontario government legislates Prince Edward County into adopting a county administration (if County warden Keith MacDonald suggests could happen) the apparent reluctance of residents to sanction it at this time should not be discounted.

Apathy of course there is among citizens, but in a democracy the mills of God grind slowly and this is not necessarily a bad thing.

People do need more time to consider all the ramifications of county government which is now being slowed pending further study.

County government, like other regional administrations already in being, may or may not be a good thing, where Prince Edward is concerned, but at least it merits the release of further information to county residents of what it will entail.

Amelioration by one having a township administration and services that have afforded a fair degree of satisfaction, is entitled to know just what advantages it is hoped will accrue from a county set-up. Will communications between Amelioration residents and a proposed administration in Picton be any better for instance than under the existing township process? The ideal, with in mind an Old Picton road resident who says he received no answers to letters pointing out the need for a speed limit on this route, also known as County Road 28, and others like it.

Looking to the future, the concept of county government may well be the ideal, but that point has not yet arrived. We believe the wise course should be to make haste slowly. And should the government be contemplating shoving it down Prince Edward throats at least the present course will have given citizens time to think about it all a little longer.

The Circus

A lot of folks go to the movies — and end up eating popcorn and drinking pop. You know . . . crunch crunch crunch and clunk clunk clunk.

For much the same reasons the kids go to the circus and down front there is a constant stream of youngsters en route to the candy and soft drink counter. Neither roaring lions, nor trumpeting elephants, nor cavorting clowns, nor dazzling acrobats, can stem this happy traffic.

We wonder though if a little more control would not be possible in this respect. If the vast majority of youngsters can stay put for close to two hours, as they did at the Arena the other day, why not the others who were on the go for much of the time? If may be difficult for children to stay still for long — but not impossible, and when it is done it is as much a lack of parental discipline as any innate restlessness.

The circus acts we saw at the Arena were skilled and professional. The musical accompaniment however was a little thundersome and with at least one crying infant in its mother's arms we wondered at the effect of the explosions of the minicar novelty act on tender eardrums.

There are No Smoking signs everywhere in the Arena, and this is as it should be. A girl, among a group of teens grouped near the entrance, appeared to be the only one ignoring them.

A travelling circus is very much a cooperative thing where the performers are concerned. The blonde girl aerialiste looked after their own equipment following the performance and one was observed attending to chores around the trailer homes on Pinnacle Street afterwards.

Audience reaction could be warmer than it is. Applause at times seems scant or non-existent, while this may be due in part to inattention and in part to the distance that can separate audience and performer in the Arena, there was a feeling with some that the acts deserved a better response.

By and large though it was a fun time for young and old. The year in Belleville is never complete without the circus.

Quebec's Languages Act Could Harm Provincial Economy

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Economic opportunities for the people of Quebec could well be diminished if that province passes the Official Languages Act.

The new bill, recently tabled in the Quebec National Assembly, establishes French as the sole official language in Quebec.

Its unilingual position goes against the trend toward bilingualism throughout Canada in recent years—as evidenced in the consumer field, for instance, by packaging and advertising in both English and French.

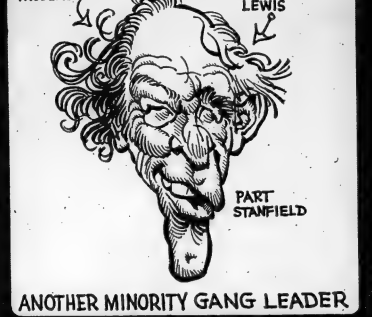
Some businesses that have operations extending across Canada have been eager to recruit fluently bilingual young people—of either mother tongue—and have been able to offer highly rewarding career opportunities to such people.

But if the proposed legislation should become law—and if Quebec were to be the only jurisdiction in Canada to suppress the use and study of English—the door to those opportunities would be effectively closed.

The province itself, in any field, usually proves to be self-defeating, just as the interplay of ideas and experiences usually proves to be valuable.

Provincial boundaries can never be made into an effective wall against such exchanges, whatever laws may be passed by misguided nationalists.

But those laws—especially when their administration is entrusted to over-zealous civil servants—could well lead to drastic economic consequences.



The province of Quebec National Assembly has warned, a civil servant would be given the power of financial life or death over a businessman in a provincially licensed activity—such as the retail-sale of beer—if that businessman's progress in learning French was not to the satisfaction of the civil servant.

Naturally, the culture of Quebec should be maintained and fostered. No sensible Canadian denies the fact of French in the province of Quebec.

But that fact can be reconciled with the world of 1974 without resort to harmful and retaliatory legislation, and without the economic estrangement of Quebec from the rest of Canada.

Fortunately, history shows that language and culture can survive the onslaught of short-sighted politicians and bureaucrats. Canada, including Quebec, will remain bilingual.

But if interprovincial business is driven out of the province, it is the people of Quebec who will be forced to pay the prices in terms of reduced economic growth and wasted career opportunities.

Racist Overtones 'Down Under'

Australian Aborigines Flex Their Muscles

GEOFF CURZON

The comfortable Australian hotel bar was crowded and the beer was as cold as a mother-in-law's kiss, but the middle-aged licencee looked worried.

"What if the blacks start coming in here? What would I do?" he asked, and then, answering his own question, "I don't know. B — I'd do."

Many people in the Australian hotel trade fear the next round of the increasingly ugly confrontation here between white and black will be an Aboriginal invasion of some middle-class bars in the cities.

A new, disquieting tremor, soft and distant, is whispering around the spotless bar tops, the well-filled ice buckets and the carefully-framed bushland prints in that vast majority of Australian hotels where a black face has hardly ever been sighted. Jovial, well-rounded licencees now sometimes drop their voices and cast worried glances over their shoulders, as they discuss the Civil Rights.

The men and women of the Aboriginal Civil Rights and allied movements are usually lightly colored or white, and while many are independent people of good will, some seem to believe that the happy boozing by white and black in their own chosen haunts has gone on long enough.

These aggressive Civil Rights types feel it is time for the Aborigines to "assert their rights" by pushing into hotels and bars they would never otherwise have frequented.

So far there have been very few instances of this, so few that the ordinary white Australian would know little or nothing of the trend.

Traditionally, aborigines have one or two favorite hotels in a city, and these are virtually exclusively black man's places. I sometimes drink in one of these hotels in order to observe the regular clientele. It's a good way to keep one's finger on the pulse. On these rare occasions when I have told an average person that I sometimes "drop in" at the ... for a beer I have been met with disbelief, horror or the obvious though unexpressed opinion that I am ripe for the funny farm.

The last time I was in there I wondered if some lightly-colored Civil Righter would interrupt the congenial talking and slurping with a frenzied appeal for the blacks to march on "Whitey's" nearest dive, but nothing like that happened.

The atmosphere was peaceful, relaxed and happy. The place was packed with Aborigines, and the rows of black shiny faces were split with happy white grins. Time was wasted to sit down to drink were in that "posh bar" in the next room, where there were tables and chairs, and in one corner a bevy of pretty, young colored girls were chattering excitedly with a couple of well-developed young black youths, slim and handsome in fancy jeans and hand-loaded boots. I was the only white, apart from the licencee and his barmen.

A couple of fullblood (pure Aborigine blood) women sat slumped against a wall, thin, blubbery, wretchedly clad in stained and faded clothes, like people who had walked a million miles, and expected to walk another million. An elderly, fairly light-colored man had obviously had too much beer for his own good. "Ah say Kathy ain't gonna marry no black layabout," he muttered, and a bunch of Aborigines glowered in his direction. "She could marry a light-colored man like me, but she's gonna marry a white man."

These seem to be popular phrases with colored people. I had heard them before. Usually surely in these days of emerging "Black Power" they must be heard less frequently. They express a fantasy. In Australia white blacks marry whites relatively unknown.

Unfortunately the powerful-looking fullblacks decided to ignore him.

Racist disputes and violence are fairly frequent here, but by all that it seems to be a happy place, a little cosy world away from the white man's world. It is a kind of voluntary apartheid.

Now, say some Civil Righters, all this must end, the Aborigine must assert his right "to drink with a couple of whites" and see really wants to. The trend, clearly, is causing concern and attention to Aborigines' demands.

These are then hauled by rail in outer suburban areas for landfill projects. No smell. No need to wait for years before the garbage rots. It's expensive, but it works in the cities willing to pay the price.

Others are experimenting with ways to burn trash — and it is the process to produce a gas that could be used for heating. But most experts admit they are still searching for a cheap, convenient way of removing the mountains of trash that accumulate in cities every day. The truth is that the global garbage disposal situation remains a great big mess!

Toronto's Garbage Disposal Chore

United Church

If you can imagine a trash can holding more than 1,500,000 tons of garbage, you have a picture of just what Toronto really needs. During this year, garbage trucks will pick up in Metro an estimated 1.59 million tons of trash.

Metro Works Commissioner Ross Clark must find some way of burying or burning almost half a million tons of garbage this year for which no solution has been found — and obviously nobody expects him to do it in his backyard!

In reality, garbage disposal is a serious matter that demands the attention of all Canadians. It is far more fortunate than most people in that we have a very large, relatively underpopulated land.

What do other peoples do with trash? New Yorkers each year have millions of tons shipped about 100 miles offshore to be dumped into the Atlantic. Hong Kong does the same in the Pacific — but it works there, whereas New Yorkers have been worried about the growing slick of filth floating off their shores.

Some U.S. cities have their trash compacted into solid blocks, as large as a kitchen table and hard as concrete. These are then hauled by rail in outer suburban areas for landfill projects. No smell. No need to wait for years before the garbage rots. It's expensive, but it works in the cities willing to pay the price.

Others are experimenting with ways to burn trash — and it is the process to produce a gas that could be used for heating. But most experts admit they are still searching for a cheap, convenient way of removing the mountains of trash that accumulate in cities every day. The truth is that the global garbage disposal situation remains a great big mess!

Land Speculation Tax Would Hit 'Little Guy' The Most

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Ontario Conservative Government's proposed Land Speculation Tax Retroactive to April 10 1974 aimed at taxing away 50 per cent of the Capital Gain in the sale of property will harm the Little Guy, not the Speculator.

Firstly, although everyone can exempt his own house and up to 10 acres of land according to the proposed law, farms over 10 acres are all eligible to pay 50 per cent of the Capital Gain to the Ontario Conservative Government upon the sale or transfer of the farm. Without prompt payment of this tax, a Statutory Lien will be placed on the property and probably will be the end be treated as a Tax Sale. This will interfere with the orderly transfer of farmland from older farmers to more active ones, take land out of production and result in increased consumer food prices. It is also another example where, as an illustration, a 30,000 city house will be exempt and a similar priced farm will pay 50 percent of the Capital Gain in Tax.

Secondly, all raw land subdivided into lots is subject to pay 50 per cent of the Capital Gain to this Ontario Conservative government upon the sale or transfer of the lots. This similarly will result in people withholding land from subdividing and decrease the amount of land coming into the market for housing and or increase the price when all political parties are calling for increased housing.

When will the people of Ontario object to this Ontario Conservative government using catch phrases such as "Speculator" in false pretence by implying that all farmers are speculators and that all Land Speculators who make Building Lots out of vacant Land are also Speculators?

Capital Punishment Decreed In Old Testament Times

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As a Christian, may I herewith be permitted to state my view on Capital Punishment.

Capital Punishment was ordained by God in the Old Testament times under Mosaic Law for certain sins. Even though we are not under the Mosaic Law but under the moral law of God, I do believe that it is God's holy will that we have capital punishment for those who contaict murder committed in sound mind, and by a person who can be made responsible for his action.

The view has been brought forward that if the state permits capital punishment for murder, then the state has committed murder, which of course is not the case at all. Natural. The state in these cases is only executing the righteous judgment of God in His stead.

We read in the New Testament (Romans 13:3,4; V. 2). For rulers are not at error to good works, but to the evil. Will thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same. V. 4: For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid, for bearest not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. The sentence: "be afraid for he bearest not the sword in vain," contains in my opinion the implied command of God to use even the sword (Capital punishment) in executing judgment in God's stead and appeasing his righteous wrath. Others have stated in effect that a merciful Christ does not believe in capital punishment for premeditated murder. I believe that God does not want us to have capital punishment for premeditated murder if a person truly repents and turns with all his heart to Him and His Son as Lord and Saviour. I think in a case like this we should have Executive Clemency. We have, at the Penitentiary at Millhaven, a chaplain whom I know personally and also one at the Don Jail in Toronto, affiliated with the Church Army of Canada. They would be able, I am sure, that willing to give a convicted murder spiritual council and help.

In my opinion, based on Holy Writ, abolition of capital punishment for premeditated murder would contribute to inviting God's righteous judgment upon these nations (2 Sam. 21, 1-9). I welcome comments and invitation to lawlessness.

W. BOCHMANN.

Brawls Mar Hockey Scene

Oshawa Times

There seems to be no end these days to the bad publicity which the game of hockey receives the world. Brawling and hooliganism on and off the ice, aided and abetted by players, officials and spectators, has become commonplace.

It has also blossomed into unsavory headlines, the kind that quickly downgrades a sport.

It isn't a new trend. It has existed for years in minor hockey. The philosophy of violence is highly popular in modern sport, regardless of protests to the contrary. The public spectacle brought when such ugly incidents are brought to their attention through the media; then angry editorial pens are aroused as well as letters-to-the-editor flow, but those who created the mess do nothing meaningful to clean it up. They don't want to.

Such deadly behavior is inevitable. Hockey fans glorify the tactics of teams like the Philadelphia Flyers (including Dave "The Hammer" Schultz and "Mad-Dog" Kelly). The Flyers are successful well in the NHL because they know how to brawl better than anyone else. It's amazing to see players of tender years use the same tactics. But it isn't surprising, not at all.

Museum Adds Displays

AMELIASBURGH — Telephone equipment placing a long distance call from past to present this season is on display in Ameliasburgh township museum.

A telephone switchboard and related equipment once owned by the Sprague Telephone Company Ltd. invites viewers to recall the days before dial it yourself.

The exhibit is highlighted by a collection of photographs of the Sprague Telephone Company's employees. Among them are Myrtle, Spencer Parliament, one of the first Sprague operators. Miss Elizabeth Jordan, clerk and operator, Miss Ivy Delaney operator and Miss Mildred Parliament, operator.

Other interesting displays at the museum this season include a village smith's shop, a wide collection of pioneer farm implements, a turn-of-the-century Model T Ford, a collection of old lamps and an exhibit of old fashioned dolls and doll dishes.

For the youngsters, Pioneer Park with its real life log cabin remains the highlight of a visit to the museum.

At the rear of the museum is a mini-zoo with rabbits, pheasants, pigeons and ducks.

This display provides a change of pace from still life exhibits and adds a something for everyone touch to Ameliasburgh's unique village complex of historical artifacts.

The museum is located in the former Unified Church building in the hamlet of Ameliasburgh on County road 13, midway between highways 14 and 33. The former church is built of quarried limestone and was constructed in 1862. curator is Harry Blader, an Ameliasburgh resident.

Point Traverse Is for the Birds

POINT TRAVERSE — The most southerly point of Prince Edward County has been the gathering place this month for hoards of birdwatchers and watchers of birdwatchers. Point Traverse, in South Marysburgh Township has been attracting naturalists every spring at this time for many years, since being acclaimed as a prime bird migratory route in the early 1900s

For both birds and birdwatchers, this spring was especially rewarding with as many as 111 species of birds being tallied every day during the peak of the migration.

Responsible for the discovery of this point, ornithologically speaking, were the Kingston Field Naturalists The peninsula lies very conveniently within their 30-mile-radius field study area, and ever since their first visit in mid-May of 1960, the club, one of the largest of its kind in the province, has undertaken a series of migration studies at the point.

According to two members of the Kingston club, Mrs Helen Quilliam and Dr Fred Cooke, it is the wide variety of habitat which appeals to the birds Containing a mixture of wetlands, deciduous growths, open water, wide fields and bushes, the relatively small acreage is able to support an unbelievable population of birds

Considered ideal conditions for birdwatchers is a day after a passage of a warm front followed by cold weather and strong winds The warm front brings the birds surging northwards and then reluctant to continue their journey, they take shelter at the point

Heading up an extensive study for the past three years has been Dr Ronald Weir, of Kingston He has been able to accomplish the almost impossible feat of having one or more observers at the point every day from mid April until the end of May The results of his work are published every year in the Ontario Field Biologist, a journal published in Toronto dealing with studies in natural history

His studies have concluded that the area lies on a minor, but regular hawk route; In addition the geographic features of the land give rise to a funnelling phenomenon which can result in spectacular concentrations of arrested migrants Dr Weir also observes that although the concentrations do not surpass those of Point Pelee (Lake Erie), they probably compare respectably with them for some species

Three Youths Face Charges

TWEED (Special) — Three Oshawa youths have been charged with breaking into seven cottages in the Sloco area and stealing goods, including quantities of alcohol, valued at close to $1,000.

The youths, all in their teens, were released by police for court appearance in Madoc on June 11.

Police say the seven cottages in the Sugar Island area of the Moira River south of Tweed were entered some time between May 20 and May 24. The break-ins were discovered Friday th one of the cottage owners arrived for the weekend.

Charged are David Alexander Bovay, 17; Terry Allan Aylward, 16 and David William Bacon, 16, all of Oshawa. Bovay, the son of an Oshawa Cayuga owning a Sloco area cottage, was apprehended by OPP Constable Carl Campbell of Madoc at Tweed. The two other boys were arrested at Oshawa.

Sophiasburgh Has Garbage Problem

SOPHIASBURGH — The cost of garbage collection in Sophiasburgh Township may rise from the present $8,000 a year to almost $10,000 if township residents continue to refuse to co-operate, says George Foster, reeve of Sophiasburgh Township.

At present the township's garbage is deposited into 14 pickup boxes, situated at four locations throughout Sophiasburgh. The boxes are emptied twice a week during the summer months and taken to the Belleville city dump, in sidney Township.

According to Reeve Foster, the problem could be alleviated if residents would burn a large proportion of their waste in their incinerators.

Twice, area residents have been asked through special mailings and a public notice in the local newspaper, to please place their garbage in boxes or bags. In this way, when the pickup boxes are filled to capacity, loose papers won't blow over the countryside. At present, a large percentage of the residents are not complying with the request, resulting in the sites being littered with flying garbage.

Even a greater problem, according to Mr. Foster, is the type of garbage being placed in these boxes.

"We have asked residents to keep their garbage as compact as possible. Yet we repreatedly find items protruding 10-15 feet into the air out of these containers."

Some of these items have included poles, boards, sheets of metal, trees, bulky brush and mattresses. Donald Potter, Road Superintendent for the township reported that one resident could not fit his second refuse pole in the pick-up boxes so he left them a heap on the ground at the site.

Mr. Foster became curious as to the contents of one box and upon looking in, and up, discovered a discarded barn litter carrier along with some 100 feet of iron track jammed into the box.

"It is strictly up to the people if they want to co-operate in this matter", urged Reeve Foster.

Five Injured In Collision

TWEED (Special) — Five persons were taken to Belleville General Hospital Saturday evening as the result of a two-car accident on Victoria Street in Tweed.

Four of the injured, all occupants of one car were treated for cuts and bruises and released, while Clayton Courneyea, 50, of Victoria Street, Tweed, driver of the second vehicle, was admitted for possible head injuries, was released for observation.

The accident occurred about 9:15 p.m. when the northbound Courneyea vehicle was in an angle collision with a car driven by Harry Turcotte, 23, Other car occupants were Cathy Turcotte, 19, Peter Turcotte, 23, and Gwen Genereaux, 16, all of RR 3 Tweed.

Damage to the Courneyea truck was $750 to the Turcotte auto, $500 and to a parked auto, $150.

Madoc provincial police said that earlier in the evening, the Courneyea truck sideswiped a car driven by Arthur W. Sweet, 61, of 35 Johnston Street, Belleville, causing $250 damage to the Sweet auto. The mishap occurred on the Marlbank road a short distance east of Highway 37.

Quinte Cuisine

Widely-known in the area for her cake decorations, Doreen Carrington of RR 1, Consecon enjoys all kinds of baking and cooking. She likes baking for her family — she has two children still at home — and also does decorating as a sideline.

Mrs. Carrington says that this recipe for Prism Dessert is a favorite with her family and with guests, and has the virtue of being a guaranteed success.

Prism Dessert

2¼ cup graham or vanilla biscuits
one-third cup melted butter
3 or 3 pkgs. flavored gelatin dessert powder
(use two contrasting colors)
2 pkg. whipped topping
1 cup pineapple juice
¼ cup sugar
1 pkg. lemon gelatin dessert powder
Make a crumb base using crushed wafers or biscuits mixed with the melted butter and pressed into a pan eight inches by eight inches by two inches deep, which has been oiled.
Prepare two or three gelatin desserts in the colors desired, using one cup of boiling water and ½ cup cold water for each. Pour into separate shallow pans and let set. When set, cut cut into small squares or cubes about ½-inch size.
Heat pineapple juice, adding ¼ cup sugar. Bring to a boil, remove from the heat, add one pkg. lemon gelatin dessert powder, and chill until syrupy.
Prepare the two pkgs. of whipped topping as directed on the pkg. instructions.
Fold this topping into the syrupy lemon mixture, and then fold the colored jelly cubes in to this mixture.
Pour over the crumb base and let set. Serves at least 16.

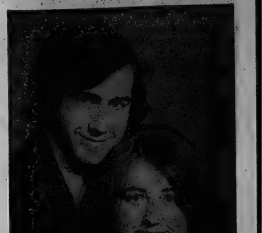
MR. AND MRS. DOUGLAS WAYNE COONEY

Cooney — Morton

The April 30 wedding of Ann Elizabeth Morton and Douglas Wayne Cooney took place at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, with Rev. John May officiating at the double ring ceremony.

Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Morton, Stirling; Wayne is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cooney, Trenton.



Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of venetian lace with long sleeves and scalloped neckline. The gown featured a cathedral train of matching lace. Her headpiece entwined withorganza daisies and bows held an elbow length veil of silk. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, gladioli and white carnations.

The bride's sister Kathryn Morton was maid of of honor in a pink floral sheer gown. She carried yellow gladioli florets and white daisies. Anne Ross, Peterborough and Sandra Charlton, Trenton, also attended the bride in similar ensembles.

Best man was John Charlton, Trenton assisted by ushers Doug Morton, the bride's brother and Brian Cooney, brother of the groom.

After a reception at the IOOF Hall, Stirling, the couple travelled to Kapuskasing and other points North.

They reside in Belleville.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Woodcock are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter Catherine May to David Philip Jamieson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Jamieson of Foxboro. The wedding will take place Saturday, June 22 at 2.30 p.m. in Calvary Temple, Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. LIPPERT

Anniversary Celebrated

On Saturday, May 11, the Trent Valley and Village Squares of Frankford honored Peter and Irene Lippert on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

On arrival at the regular Saturday night dance, Mr. and Mrs. Lippert were surprised as they entered the hall decorated by newly green branches and flowers around a 50th anniversary motif made by Ab Clarke.

The Madoc Merry Mixers Club was present to celebrate the event also, since the Lipperts lived in Madoc prior to retiring to their present home on the Trent river near Frankford.

The Lipperts' only daughter and her husband arrived during the evening in time to hear a poem written and recited by Ross Friesen reminiscing about their 50 years of married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Lippert were presented with a headdresses and a corsage, and were serenaded by Charles Margetson accompanied by his wife Ruth at the piano.

After square dancing a smorgasborg dinner was served. The celebrating couple's table was decorated with white and gold candles and an anniversary cake made and decorated by Keith and Jean Woodcox.

Jack Duffie and Harry Ashton presented the Lipperts with gifts on behalf of their respective club members.

Chairmen for the evening were Jack and Blanche Duffie, Gene and Audrey Hietala, Ab and Queenie Clarke, Dyal and Betty Waddell and Earl and Jean Dafoe.

At the close of the evening, everyone sang a song to the Lipperts written by Ruth Margetson wishing them good fortune.

MR. AND MRS. ALAN BURKITT

Burkitt — Watkin

Christ Church was the setting for the April 27 wedding of Wendy Ann Watkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.A. Watkin and Harry Alan Burkitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.P. Burkitt.

Rev. R.B. Wright officiated at the service.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white antique satin over taffeta with a high neckline, front and back bodice of Alencon lace with ribbon inserts, long sleeves and an A-line skirt with the same lace trim. A waterfall lace-edged train fell from the shoulder, and a halo headpiece of lace and seed pearls held the four-tier veil. She carried yellow roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honor, Beth Watkin, sister of the bride, wore a floral print gown in shades of green, orange and yellow, with a ruffled V neckline, long sleeves with ruffles at the wrist and an orange ribbon bow at the waistline. Her white wide-brimmed hat was trimmed with orange ribbon and she carried a bouquet of yellow and white roses.

Jean Burkitt, the groom's sister and Nancy Watkin, the bride's cousin, were bridesmaids in outfits like the maid of honor's.

The flower girls were Mary Ellen and Jennifer Burkitt, the groom's sisters, and the ring bearer was the groom's brother Paul.

Greg Burkitt, the groom's brother was best man. The ushers were Ron Chaplin, Stephen Burkitt and Tom Burkitt.

After a reception at the Belleville Shrine Club, the couple went to Ottawa on their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Burkitt now live at 212A Charles Street.

Madelaine Young Cosmetician

A newcomer to Belleville, Madelaine Young moved here with her family about three years ago.

As a wife of a serviceman, Mrs. Young has lived and travelled in Europe. However, she and her husband enjoy this area and hope to settle here.

For the past two years Mrs. Young has worked in the cosmetic department at Walker's department store on Front Street. She had previous experience in London, Ontario as a cosmetic consultant, and enjoys working in the field of make-up.

"The cosmetic industry is an exciting one," says Mrs. Young.

The type of person who likes to stay on top of her work, she has certificates from several cosmetic companies, such as Du Barry, Bonne Bell and Yardley, for her knowledge of their products.

Mrs. Young attends annual make-up shows in Kingston where she finds out what the newest products are and how to apply them.

The secret of good make-up is not the amount that's used, but the application. Expertly applied, very little make-up creates a better impression than a lot of "powder and paint". Mrs. Young uses just enough make-up to give her what that "natural" look.

"Young girls in high school shouldn't use much make-up," she says. "When you are young your skin is so fresh and natural that you don't have any need for a lot of make-up."

Mrs. Young likes helping customers discover the right type of make-up for their complexion, and enjoys demonstrating application techniques to get the best results.

Her favorite products at her counter are the perfumes and colognes.

"It's a nice feeling when the customers say I smell so good," Mrs. Young says.

Crib Death Still Mystery Killer

TORONTO (CP) — A condition which kills apparently healthy babies is the greatest cause of death in the first year of life but its cause is still unknown, researchers at an international symposium were told Friday.

Dr. Abraham B. Bergman of Seattle said the condition, variously named sudden infant death syndrome, crib or cot death, is second only to accidents as the leading cause of death in children under 15 years old. It kills three infants in every 1,000 under one year old, the pediatrician said.

Doctors attending the three-day international symposium on sudden and unexpected deaths in children, sponsored by the Canadian Foundation for the Study of Infant Deaths, heard a variety of theories on the cause of the syndrome.

Suggestions advanced over the years have included allergy to cow's milk, suffocation, viral or respiratory infections, or bleeding in the spinal cord, but none of the theories have been proven, the symposium was told.

Various theories concerning the infant's breathing mechanism, the nerves that control reflexes which keep an infant breathing, were presented at the symposium.

Two Toronto doctors said they have discovered that premature babies seem to rely on a different kind of nerve control to keep them breathing. If these primitive reflexes fail, said Dr. A. C. Bryan and his wife Dr. Heather Bryan, the child may stop breathing and need to be shaken to start breathing again.

A representative of the British Foundation for the Study of Infant Deaths said parents who have lost children as a result of the syndrome need help.

Crib death causes parents to feel guilt and anxiety and arouses unfounded suspicions in neighbors, friends, and even relatives, the Countess of Limerick said.

She said a post-mortem examination should always be done on infants who die unexpectedly in order to inform parents and to advance scientific knowledge.

Mountie Gets Her Man

OTTAWA (CP) — The mountie always gets her man?

Not yet, but perhaps within a year.

RCMP Commissioner M. J. Nadon announced Friday that women, both married and single, and married men will be accepted into the force. Until now, recruits have been restricted to single men.

The commissioner's statement said married men will be eligible for regular duty and women for most regular duty, but another officer said "the sky's the limit" for women recruits.

"We'll try to use them anywhere they can fit, right from our major squads down to traffic duty," said Inspector J. J. Poirier of the force's information division.

He said the first group of women will begin training at the RCMP centre in Regina this September before going on field duty after the initial six-month course.

Inspector Poirier said the only women connected with the force now are civilian employees, most of whom are involved in research with a few engaged in more secret operations.

The admission of women to the force has been under consideration for a long time, he said. Preparations for their recruitment were almost complete.

"We have a uniform designed, but I haven't seen it yet. I assume it will have a skirt and also pants for some duties."

Admit King's Children

Successful Living

Agency Helps Jobless Executives

It is a great blow, both financially and emotionally, for an over-40 executive to find himself unemployed.

Forty-Plus of Canada Inc. (250 Bloor Street East, Toronto, Ontario), helps unemployed executives get back on their feet. The emphasis is on the executives helping themselves to find new positions. The program is so successful that about 85 per cent of the members find new jobs within 11 weeks.

Such action and associate memberships are available in Forty-Plus. Active members must spend two and a half days a week or 10 days a month working in the organization office, and learning how to go about embarking on a new career.

The program does wonders for the rejected executive's self-confidence and self-understanding. — Dorothy Parotte.

Dear Doris: When it comes to travel, a person is sometimes stumped about the many things to see and the very few hours in which to see it. It happened to me in Britain a few years ago when I took a sort of meandering jaunt on my own.

Among other things I had agreed to call on some folk who were relatives of neighbors.

Some of these visits involved rather time-consuming journeys, cutting down some of the "important" places I wanted to see. Then I did a double take on R. I thought about the people I was seeing; the places I was going; and realized that the whole experience was rewarding. I decided then and there to cease worrying about the things or places I failed to see because what I was doing was so good.

Somehow this approach has added much to the enjoyment of subsequent holidays. I know that on any vacation it is impossible to do everything one would like to; there will always be something you have missed. But I have also found that, with few exceptions, what I have seen and the experiences I have had were wonderful. — Thoughts.

Dear Thoughts: I've been through the same experience and went through the same convolutions of reasoning. Came out at the same place.

PHOENIX (AP) — Benjamin Smith, 32, was in U.S. District Court on an auto theft charge. Asked by the judge at what time did he realize the 1972-model truck he bought for $50 was stolen, Smith thought for a bit, then answered, "I guess it was when my wife asked me where the papers on it were."

Ann Landers

Drink in the Saloon Not at the Salon

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please tell your women readers who are alcoholics to try to stay sober the day of the week they have their hair done at the beauty salon?

I speak not only for myself but for three other men in this shop. We are sick and tired of liquored-up dames who arrive roaring drunk, yelling as if everyone in the place was deaf, knocking into things, unable to make up their minds how they want their hair done, changing their minds after the head is all set.

The ones who fall asleep under the dryers are the worst. It's very difficult to wake them up and when they do finally come to, they are bearcats to comb out—ornery, hostile, impossible to please.

I've been reading your column for years and I don't think I have ever seen this problem before. It needs to be brought out into the open. Thank you very much. Hundreds of hairdressers will bless you.—Sick-dit

Dear H.: Strangely enough, I read your letter when I was having my hair done, so it was easy to get a "professional opinion." I asked my hairdressers, Leon Kaufpe, if he ever had the problem. He replied, "Yes, several times. I think it would be a very good letter to print." So—here it is.

Dear Ann Landers: I married a divorced man who had a vasectomy three years ago in a last-ditch effort to save his marriage. His wife had three children and she didn't want more.

The physician told Barney that the operation is sometimes reversible and he'd try to perform the surgery so that he might possible be changed back. If Barney and his wife should later decide to have more children.

Well, now we are dying for a baby of our own and the doctor who did the vasectomy has left the country, permanently. Should Barney go to another doctor or is it hopeless? I trust this letter will serve as a lesson to all males who consider this method of birth control. What's your answer, Ann?—Heartsick And Childless

Dear H.: Barney ought to check with another physician. I can tell you, however, that every surgeon I have talked to says a vasectomy must be considered permanent sterilization.

Bourassa Firm On Language Law

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Sunday he does not plan to withdraw legislation which would make French Quebec's sole official language and still hopes it will be passed by summer despite a rising tide of criticism.

He accused the Parti Quebecois of making political hay of the new bill and said at least some critics have taken positions without bothering to read the bill thoroughly.

He told reporters amendments to the legislation following committee hearings are "possible" but he gave no indication of how extensively his government would permit the controversial bill to be modified.

The Parti Quebecois and nationalist groups have protested that the new legislation does not go far enough to prevent assimilation of French-Canadians. English-speaking groups are concerned that the legislation withdraws parents' rights to choose the language of education for their children and that provisions for minority rights are not clearly spelled out.

Mr. Bourassa said at a regional party meeting here earlier that freedom of choice in education had not been removed but made "conditional" with provision for the education department to intervene "to correct any abuses."

The legislation stipulates that a child must demonstrate proficiency in a language before he can be educated in it. Children who speak neither French nor English would automatically be directed to the French-language school system.

This provision is aimed at reducing the number of immigrants who choose the English-language system and at controlling transfers from French- to English-language schools.

Mr. Bourassa said the policy would be "applied with flexibility" because French-speaking parents now cannot be guaranteed that their children would receive adequate training in English in French-language schools.

"It would be better to improve the teaching of English in French schools so students will not want to change schools," he said.

He rejected the Parti Quebecois proposal for a fixed number of facilities which would teach only English-speaking students because such a system would totally prohibit French-speaking persons from attending English-language schools.

"This would be an element of lottery in a fundamental law," he said.

Mr. Bourassa said the question of immigrants' rights is the "most complex" but nowhere in the world do immigrants have a choice of schooling and Quebec, as a French nation, is justified in steering immigrants to the French-language system.

"But if you push absorption too much, you can lose on other fronts," Mr. Bourassa said.

Quebec now is negotiating with Ottawa for a greater say in the selection of immigrants to the province.

Mr. Bourassa said Quebec might limit the number of English-speaking immigrants coming into the province as long as manpower could be kept up with immigrants from other countries who would be channelled into French schools and society.

Top Lawyer Critical Of Nixon's Attitude

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key Senate Democrat and the president of the American Bar Association have expressed dismay over President Nixon's refusal to comply with subpoenas for Watergate evidence.

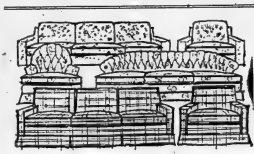
Senator Robert Byrd (Dem. W.Va.), the Democratic whip, said Sunday that Nixon's rejection of subpoenas has increased the prospect that the Senate would convict him if the House of Representatives votes for impeachment.

And Chesterfield Smith, president of the ABA, said: "I have been shocked and annoyed that the White House doesn't clearly state that, 'Yes, I am subject to the rule of law. I am not a king. I am only a man elected by the people, and when the Supreme Court decides that I have to do something, certainly I am going to do it.'"

Smith, interviewed on NBC's Meet the Press, said he would prefer if Nixon could find a way to withdraw from public power" until Watergate-related charges against him are disposed of.

But, Smith said, he does not know of any way the president can do this. He said he is not certain that the 25th Amendment could be used for this purpose, as has been suggested by some lawyers.

Byrd, interviewed on CBS's Face the Nation, said: 'I think what we're seeing here is defiance up and down the line.



"We've seen defiance of the House committee as it carries out a constitutional duty. We've seen defiance of the special prosecutor who was appointed by the administration, and who was given complete independence."

Down Kingston 5-0

Sharp Defence Sparks Olympics Home Opener

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Olympics started their new season off on the right foot as they whipped Kingston Portuguese 5-0.

Saturday's victory, at OSD, was the first game of the regular schedule for Belleville in the Premier Soccer League.

Opening ceremonies were held previous to the game and included an exhibition junior game in which the Golden Mile Juniors, the Olympics farm team, were defeated 1-0 by Kingston United Juniors.

Dignitaries on hand to open Belleville's home schedule were MP Jack Ellis, Alderman Joe Cox and a representative from OSD, Bill Kilcher.

Mr. Ellis, a former Belleville soccer player, commented, "I'm glad to see the sports expanding in Belleville. It's good for the city and good for the sport."

The MP opened the new season with the official kick-off from centre field.

After hosting the ball 30 yards along the centre line, Ellis said, "Perhaps I should have taken my old cleats out of moth balls. These new shoes don't allow you to put much on the ball."

Following the Ellis kick, the game got under way and the near 100 fans that came to support the Olympics got a real treat.

The game opened with Kingston pouring on the pressure trying to score an early goal. For the first ten minutes Belleville could not get the ball upfield.

On the other hand though, Kingston couldn't set up a good scoring play. Despite the pressure they applied they were totally incapable of breaking through the Olympics defence.

After 10 minutes Belleville began mounting an offence.

Half backs John O'Neill and Peter Hillier took out aggressors rights on mid-field. Tse two controlled the area exceptionally well and gave Kingston nightmares with their long passes to wingers Ernie Brown and Stuart Mitton.

Mitton and Brown were receiving bad dreams of their own as they defended and spoiled their way through the Portuguese defence.

The locals went ahead at the 15 minute mark when Kevin Kirby drifted a low shot into the left hand corner of the net. Kirby fired it through a ruck and Kingston goalie Raj Overman had no chance of covering that far side of his goal.

Belleville kept their offensive drive alive with a goal from Nick DeGrosso just minutes after the opening tally.

The first half ended with the Olympics on top 2-0 and way out in front in controlling minutes.

For the first 25 minutes of the second half, Kingston put forth an all out effort to try to get back in the game.

The Olympics were corralled in their own end, but the Portuguese were still unable to put the ball in the net.

Belleville's defence was outstanding and goalkeeper Zoltan Vigh made some tremendous saves during the Kingston drive.

Fullbacks Mike Dornellas and George DeGrosso, and centre half Bob Kilcher were the most prevalent defenders keeping a tight rein of the Portuguese attacks before the visitors had an opportunity to establish themselves in the locals end.

After a 25 minute surge Kingston ran out of steam and the Olympics began to take control of the game offensively.

Kirby collected his second goal of the game when he hammered the ball over the head of the Portuguese goalie on a breakaway.

Belleville went ahead 4-0 as a result of a free kick when inside right Charlie Nesterenki was pulled down just outside the penalty area.

John O'Neill took the kick and placed the ball right at the feet of Nick DeGrosso. From an almost impossible angle DeGrosso booted the ball in off the goalpost for his second of the contest.

Kirby rounded the scoring with his third goal of the game on a shot that gave the Kingston goalkeeper no chance.

A solid team effort and a great defensive display gave Belleville a 5-0 win.

Sunday June 2 the Olympics travel to Peterborough for a 2.30 game against the Vi Mars.

There will be a meeting of the Belleville Olympics club at the Golden Mile Restaurant, Wednesday May 29 at 8 p.m. All players, members and any interested parties are asked to be in attendance.

Ellis Kicks Off

MP Jack Ellis gets his foot into things as he opens the Belleville Olympics regular season with the official kick off from centre field. The Olympics will be playing in the new Premier Soccer League which includes teams from Ottawa, Oshawa, Kingston and Peterborough. Behind Mr. Ellis is Alderman Joe Cox who was representing the city at the opening ceremonies.

Premier Soccer League Opens

The Kingston Canadian Portuguese goallender has just finished making the stop on Belleville Olympics' Charlie Nesterovski in this action from Saturday's Premier Soccer League opener at the OSD field. Portuguese took a 5-0 pasting from the Olympics in the first game for both teams.

Melrose Wins 3rd Consecutive Game

Melrose took their third straight win in South Hastings Baseball League play Saturday night, edging Shannonville 4-3 in one of two games played. In the other contest, Plainfield Lanes recorded their first win with a 6-3 victory over Read.

Terry McTaggart got the win for Melrose, with seventh inning relief help from John Pepper. McTaggart went six and a third innings, giving up three runs, and four hits. He walked two and left ten batters standing at the plate. Pepper came on in the bottom of the seventh, walking two and striking out one.

Glenn Barberstock took the loss on the Shannonville mound, going all seven innings. He allowed seven hits, walking four and leaving three batters looking at third strikes.

Glenn McMechan led the winners with a home run and single, while Bruce Pascoe added two singles. Ted Abrams, Ron McTaggart and Terry McTaggart teach had a base hit to round out the hitting.

Glenn Carlton had a double to pace the Shannonville attack, with Chris Green stroking two singles. Bob Reid had a single to complete the hitting.

Latta got four hits pitching from John Masterson in downing Read. He walked six and fanned the same number.

Larry Coffey gave up seven hits to Latta, walking three and striking out seven.

Bob Smith had a home run to pace Latta, with Damon Richardson and Masterson each collecting two base hits.

Wayne Harrisson and Harry Culkin also singled for the winners.

Bert Sherry had the only extra base hit for Read, a double, with Carrv-Millage, Peter Walsh, and Bud O'Connor all bagging a single.

Read failed to score on three separate occasions when they had loaded the bases.

Brooke Bond Tied for 2nd

In Industrial Softball League action Sunday, Brooke Bond pulled into a three way tie for second place with a 10-6 win over Black Diamond.

Al Colden led the way for the winners with a pair of doubles and a pair of singles. Jack MacDonald was next with two singles and a double.

Gene Francis was top for the losers with a home run and a single while Jack Gilroy hit two singles and a double.

Ross Geen took the win striking out eight and walking four.

Ron Bateman and Jack Francis absorbed the loss fanning five and issuing six walks.

Junior Olympics Shaded

Despite the fact that the Golden Mile Juniors lost 1-0 to Kingston United Junior coach John O'Neill was pleased with his teams performance.

The game was very close and "entertaining " for the fans that were on hand to watch. The contest was part of the opening ceremonies for the Belleville Olympics, for which the Juniors are a farm team.

It was the first time the Juniors had played together as a team and O'Neill commented that he was pleasantly surprised at the efforts of halfbacks Rob Foser and Donnie Wright.

Jim Searle scored the only goal of the game to give Kingston the win.

Brooks Optimistic

After playing only three games, Belleville SADO Peewees' coach Ken Brooks is optomistic about his team's chances this season. With only four workouts under their belt, the locals travelled to Cranbrook on Saturday, making it to the semi-finals of the A division before bowing out.

In the first game, the Belleville squad dumped Burlington 13-3 to move into the A competition, behind the seven hit pitching of Ron Segbey. The veteran hurler had two RBI's to help his own cause.

Andy Rosati had four RBIs with his single, accounting for two with a home run. Clarence Brookema had one with a double.

In the second the locals were down 3-1 after two frames, but came back to record a 14-3 victory.

Tim Soule fired the win, allowing only seven hits, walking only one and fanning eight.

Darrell Coltman led the attack at the plate with a homer, while Ken Segbey had a pair of doubles. Ron Segbey had a triple, as did John Henry.

In the semi-final game, played only ten minutes after the second contest, Belleville left 11 men stranded on base, dropping a 10-3 decision to Grimsby, last year's OASA champions.

Starting pitcher Andy Rosati went three innings in the game, allowing four hits, striking out two. Tim Soule came on to relief giving up nine hits, fanning three.

Kirk Floor Hockey Team Takes Three Out of Five

Although they didn't win the privilege of representing the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International Tournament to be held in Winnipeg in June, the team of Belleville area floor hockey players from William R. Kirk School still showed a good amount of success on the weekend.

The team of 16 young athletes travelled to Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens to play in the first Annual Invitational Floor Hockey Tournament for the mentally retarded on Friday, and returned Sunday morning with three wins under their belts in five games played.

The Belleville teams was classed in the B division of the ten team tourney, with three divisions formed. Along with Belleville in the B section was Thunder Bay and Sudbury. Sudbury won the division, taking an 11-4 decision from the Quinte team. Belleville also lost, 10-8 to Thunder Bay, but defeated the lakehead team 5-3 in a Friday contest.

A Toronto team took the A division title and the right to represent the Leafs in Winnipeg, eliminating three other teams in the finals, Smiths Falls, and Blenheim.

In the C division of the tournament, Windsor took the crown with wins over Burlington and Exact (Peterborough).

The two other Belleville wins came in exhibition contests with the Peterborough team, 12-0 and 13-1 wins.

The team scored a total of 42 goals in the five games they played, with Rick Johnston the high scorer with 12 of his team's markers. Tom Givens had 10, Ron Vesterfelt, eight, Rick Vesterfelt five, Ray Baker, four, and Brian Brown three.

One of the highlights for the team members during their stay in Toronto was talking with hockey celebrities George Armstrong, a former player with the Leafs who will coach the Toronto team in Winnipeg, and Foster Hewitt, probably the best known hockey announcer of all time.

The tournament was sponsored and run by the Harry Reef Foster Foundation. All the teams stayed at the Royal York Hotel, with meals provided at the Gardens by the Foundation.

EOBA Teams Rack Up 66 Runs On Weekend

Two Belleville EOBA teams produced no less than 66 runs in three contests on the week end, and unsurprisingly enough, took three wins.

The UAW Local 1839 Peewees produced 45 of the plate counters in defeating Keene Saturday to the tune of 29-9, and Port Hope Sunday 16-4.

In the Saturday game, played at Parkdale, Dale McTaggart had an easy afternoon on the mound, giving up only two hits to Keene batsmen. He walked six in picking up the shutout, leaving six stranded at the plate.

The victims of Belleville's attack on the Keene nurses were twins Tom and Ted Kemp. They were swamped with 18 local's hit, giving up 14 walks. They combined for seven strikeouts. Six errors in the Keene field did not aid the situation any, either, in all fairness to Keene, it should be mentioned that their regular starting pitchers were not available for the game.

Charlie Doran and Steve McCrowter led the Belleville hitting with a double and two singles each, while Steve Hayward adding three base hits.

Vic Kempt had a double for Keene, while Tom Kemp had the only other hit, a single.

Sunday, St. Port Hope, the locals pounded out 12 hits to take the 16-4 win. Mark Crawford led the way with a triple and two singles, with Shawn Mulvaney contributing two doubles and a single. Shaun McDonnell had a pair of singles.

Ted Sidley had a triple and single to lead the losers, with B. Blakely and C. Bullen collecting the other hits, both singles.

McRorie and Steve Carr shared the win for Belleville, giving up only the four hits to Port Hope. They walked eight and struck out the same total.

Al Palmer and Pete Sotton absorbed the loss, walking seven and fanning seven.

The Legion Branch 99 Bantams took advantage of 15 hits and seven Thurlow errors in taking a 31-3 pasting from their township rivals.

Peter Hall, Rory Radford, and Gary Quaiff led the attack on the Belleville mound, allowing five hits, walking six and whiffing 14.

Barry Beer, Rick Woodward, and Gary Badgley all worked on the Thurlow rubber, walking seven and fanning eight in addition to giving up the 12 hits.

Mike Burke paced the winners at the plate with a home run, three runs, with Pete Hall and Ken Revoy each contributing a double.

Dave Chisholm had the big hit for Thurlow, a home run.

The two contest with Orono was cancelled when it was learned that the community has withdrawn from EOBA competition.

Two midget contests were scheduled, one with Belleville at Tobans, and Thurlow at Lindsay, however no results were submitted.

Stretch in Vain

Mike Burke of the Belleville Legion 99 Bantams stretches, but still can't reach the throw to get the unidentified Thurlow baserunner out at first base in Sunday's game at Centennial Park. Burke did get most of what he wanted in the game, though, collecting a pair of home runs in leading the Belleville team to a 21-3 pasting of Thurlow.

Garrison a Grateful Bobcat

Al Garrison ungrateful Never!

Al wants everyone to know that he is very appreciative for the support he received from the Belleville Bobcats, the Bobcats Booster Club and the Bobcats fans while he was recuperating from his eye injury.

Garrison was taken to Belleville General Hospital in the first period of a Bobcat game against St. Mike's last November 9.

Al was only with the Cats for six games during the regular season, but during that time he scored 12 goals and added seven assists.

At the Bobcats' Awards Night, held May 3, Al was presented with a large cheque by the Bobcats to help defray the cost of treatments.

At the Booster Club Party he was awarded a trophy and a bond for his efforts during the season.

Well, your very welcome Al and believe us at the Intelligencer when we say you won't be a forgotten hero.

WINS ELITE TROT

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Former Hambletonian winner Timsaley Frost finished behind Sunjay and won the $73,000 Elite Trot race at Solvalla ahead of French entries Jimmy and Emilee. The seven-year-old Italian-owned stallion, favorite in the race, was driven by Giancarlo Baldi.

QUITS BASEBALL

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tiger pitcher Chuck Seelbach has chosen to quit baseball and return to college rather then be demoted to the minor leagues. Seelbach, 24, has been demoted to the Tiger farm club in Evansville, Ind., after Tiger ballpen in 1972, Seelbach injured his arm on the first day of training camp in 1973, and has seen little action.

WHALERS SIGN SELWOOD

HARTFORD, Mass (AP) — Defenceman Brad Selwood has signed a multi-year contract with the World Hockey Association New England Whalers, a team officials said Monday. Terms of the new pact were not disclosed. Selwood was the first-round draft choice of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1968 amateur draft.

CARDS GET WUNDERLY

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League announced Wednesday the acquisition of defensive tackle Don Wunderly from Pittsburgh Steelers for an undisclosed future draft choice. Wunderly, 23, was the Steeler's 102nd-round draft choice last year. He was to be tried at defensive back, but voluntarily left the Steeler training camp.

BRITISH WALKER DIES

LONDON (AP) — Phil Edgerton, a British walker, died of leukemia in a London hospital Wednesday, Exhibition, 25, was one of Britain's Olympic prospects after setting a world record of 41.35.2 for the 10,000-metres walk in 1972. But leukemia set in by the time he competed in the Olympics at Munich and he finished 14th in the 30-kilometers event.

Rutherford Takes Indy 500 From 25th Starting Position

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — They sent Johnny Rutherford to the back of the class but he refused to stay there.

The Texan, forced to start near the back of the 33-car starting grid, barreled out to the pack at the start and, with some help from A.J. Foyt's pit crew and Bobby Unser's empty tank, won the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race Sunday.

Unser was second and Bill Vukovich third, followed by defending champion Gordon Johncock and Englishman David Hobbs, the only foreign driver in the race.

"I always said if I ever finished this race I'd either win it or finish in the top three," said Rutherford. "This year I finished it and I won it."

Rutherford was relegated to 25th place in the lineup, his worst start since his rookie appearance in 1963, because he didn't get a chance to qualify the first day of the trials. Still, he wound up with the second-best qualifying time, behind Foyt.

It was Foyt and Rutherford for most of the race—Foyt starting from the pole position won with his 191.632 miles an hour qualifying speed.

But an oil leak with about 40 laps to go put Foyt out of the race, narrowing the contenders down to Rutherford, Bobby Unser, Sr., and, for a while, Bobby's younger brother Al, who won here in 1970 and 1971.

Bobby, the 1968 Indy winner and victor at the California 500 and Trenton 300 earlier this year, said he lost the race because of a miscalculation and bad breaks.

"Rutherford just outran us at the end," Bobby Unser said. "Of course, running out of fuel before the second pit stop didn't help.

His car owner and team manager, Dan Gurney, said: "We lost 47 seconds on that second pit stop and then we lost 25 seconds later when the air wrench for the right rear tire didn't work and we couldn't change the tires."

Fuel, decreased to 280 from 350 gallons of methanol for the race, was a key problem for many of the drivers, including Rutherford. His crew said he finished with only a bit more than six gallons left.

However, only Lloyd Ruby ran out of fuel. He coasted into the pits after completing 199 laps and wound up ninth.

Rutherford, 36, from Fort Worth, led 122 of the 200 laps. He averaged 158.589 miles an hour for the three-hour race, well off Mark Donohue's 1972 record run at 162.962 m.p.h.

Three-time winner Louis Meyer, who came from the 28th position to win the race in 1936, was the last driver to win from a victory from that deep in the pack.

A crowd exceeding 300,000 watched the almost routine race, in contrast from last year's death-and-rain-marred event in which Swede Savage and a pit crewman were killed by fire, who raced again Sunday, was critically burned along with several spectators and the race was delayed three days by constant showers last year. Another driver, Art Pollard, also was killed in practice that month.

That race and the ensuing uproar led to the cutting of the 1974 field, alterations on the race cars and several changes in the Speedway track.

The new rules—yellow caution light periods totalling 34 minutes and 21 seconds Sunday, but none was flashed because of a serious accident.

The only injury was to Jerry Karl, whose car slammed into the outside wall on turn No. 3 late in the race. He was treated for a puncture wound to his leg and released from the Speedway Infield hospital.

Three Leafs Sign

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs announced today the signing of Ron Ellis, Brian Glennie, Jim McKenny and George Ferguson to multi-year contracts with the National Hockey League club.

Leafs general manager Jim Gregory said only six players still are unsigned from last year's club: Mike Pelyk, Gary Monahan, Dennis Dupere, Eddie Shack, Paul Henderson and Rick Kehoe.

The NHL trading deadline is midnight tonight. The Leafs had no trades to announce, but were still discussing trades, Gregory said.

Team Canada 74 Series Lengthened to 8 Games

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Team Canada 74 hockey series with the Soviet Union has been extended to eight games from the original six, Ben Hatskin, chairman of the World Hockey Association's board of trustees, confirmed Sunday.

Hatskin, also president of the WHA's Winnipeg Jets, said the change was made at the request of the Russians who wanted a four-and-four series similar to that played against a selection of National Hockey League players two years ago.

That series ended with Canada winning four, losing three and gaining a tie.

Hatskin also confirmed the starting dates in Canada would be Sept. 17, 19, 21, and 23 and three of the four sites would be Quebec City, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Arrangements for selecting the fourth site are in the hands of John Bassett, Jr., president of Toronto Toros of the WHA.

The four dates in Russia have not been set, but Hatskin said the series there would start as close to Oct. 1 as possible.

Hatskin's confirmation follows a steering committee meeting Friday comprised of Bill Hunter, representing WHA Edmonton Oilers, Gordon Juckes and Jack Device, representing the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and Chris Lang and Lou Levavre of Hockey Canada.

During further complications, Team Canada 74 will hold training camp at Edmonton. Any player born in Canada will be eligible to play in the 1974 series.

Team Canada 72 was composed solely of players who signed contracts with the NHL clubs and representation from the WHA was not allowed.

Walther-Glad It's Over

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "I feel great, but I'm just kinda glad it's all over with," said David (Sail) Walther after finishing an unofficial 11th in Sunday's Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Walther, critically burned in a race-starting crash here last year, piloted his McLaren around the 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway for 141 laps before being sidelined by engine trouble.

"We didn't have the car performing just like we wanted it, but it kicked to death we did so well here," said Walther, who in two previous starts at Indy never completed a lap.

Walther almost didn't get away for the start again this year because of gear troubles.

"We didn't have first or third gear for the first few laps, and after the car was started, Gary Bettenhausen was late getting off the starting grid in front of me," Walther recalled. "I was trying to get moving in second gear and the crew had to push to get the thing going."

Pearson Claims NASCAR 600

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson fought off a strong challenge from Richard Petty Sunday to win the $43,000 World 600 stock car race, the longest NASCAR Grand National race in history.

Pearson, driving a Wood Brothers Mercury, finished both Petty and Cale Yarborough in a heated race that saw the trio trade the lead six times during the last 100 miles.

Earl Ross of Atlas Craig, Ont., driving a Chevrolet, finished fifth.

Yarborough was battling Pearson for second when the veteran driver lost control on an oil slick and slammed sideways against the guard rail with 34 miles remaining.

Yarborough walked away from the crash but his car was badly damaged.

This set the stage for a bumper-to-bumper duel between Pearson and Petty, the two most successful Grand National drivers in history. Pearson went ahead for good on the last of his 334 laps, with Petty's Dodge on his bumper most of the way.

Pearson collected $31,500 while Petty won $18,500.

Pearson and Petty fought for first place, Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison, both Chevrolet drivers, battled for third. Allison roared across the finish line just a few feet ahead of Waltrip.

The average speed was 135.720 miles an hour in the 540-mile race.

New Record Set In Monaco GP

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Sweden's Ronnie Peterson set a track record Sunday to win the Monaco Grand Prix auto race.

The race was marred by a flurry of accidents and mechanical failures in the opening seconds.

Driving a four-year-old car, the 30-year-old Swede gave the JPS Lotus team its first triumph of the season and second his fifth Grand Prix victory.

Brazil's Emerson Fittipaldi, piloting a Ferrari, came in fifth, a lap behind Peterson to maintain a narrow lead in his effort to win a second world drivers championship.

Peterson covered the tight course through city streets at 80.74 miles an hour. His time was one hour, 58 minutes and 3.7 seconds.

South African Jody Scheckter drove a steady race in his Tyrrell to finish second, in 1:58:22.8 and France's Jean-Pierre Jarrier fought an engine problem in his Shadow to take third. Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland, in a Ferrari, wound up fourth.

After an hour only 10 starters remained, and only nine of the 23 starters completed the 158.875 miles. After Fittipaldi came three Britons—John Watson, Graham Hill and Guy Edwards—and Patrick Depailler of France.

The opening accidents eliminated Denis Hulme, Brian Redman, Tim Schenken, Carlos Pace, Arturo Merzario, Jean-Pierre Beltoise and Vittorio Brambilla.

Imports Hurt Game Davidson

BOTHWELL, Ont. (CP) — Jeneville hockey in Ontario is suffering because of the practice of importing players from other communities, Floyd Davidson, president of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, said Saturday night.

He told the annual awards dinner of the Continental Senior B Hockey League that in the last season there were 86 more midget than juvenile teams in the OMHA. Midgets are ages 15 to 16, juveniles 17 to 18.

The best juveniles leave their homes to play as imports in other towns, he said. Often the team they have left folds and the remaining players have nowhere to play.

The problem soon may reach down to the midget teams, said Davidson.

"My answer is to get back to homebrew hockey."

If all branches of hockey in Ontario used local players costs would be kept down and more players would be kept in the game.

Toronto's Simpson Vaults 17'

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Simpson of Toronto won the pole vault at the California Relays Saturday with a leap of 17 feet, while record-setting Columbia girls placed in finals.

Brenda Eisler of Burnaby, B.C., placed second in the long jump and, along with winner Martha Watson of Lakewood, Calif., missed setting a record because of a following wind.

Miss Watson jumped 21 feet, 9¼ inches which would have been a United States record had it not been for the wind. Miss Eisler's jump of 21-7¾ would have broken her own Canadian record of 21-4.

Debbie Brill of Burnaby placed second in the high jump with a 5-foot-10 leap behind winner Joni Huntley of Oregon at 6 feet.

Patty Lovercock of Vancouver placed third in the 100-yard dash with a time of 10.6. Renaye Bowers of Lakewood won in 10.5 and Debbie Byfield of Berkeley was second, also in 10.5.

FERGUSON

Player Takes Thomas Open

MEMPHIS (AP) — Gary Player has won 18 tournaments on the United States professional golf tour, and a total of 86 in his globe-trotting career.

And it is getting easier all the time, says the man who won the Masters only last month.

"For 20 years I played golf fearing a bogie," the South African said Sunday after his five-under-par 67 in the final round lifted him from five strokes off the pace to a two-shot victory in the Danny Thomas-Memphis tournament.

"After my operation last year I changed to a more upright stance, which prohibits me from coming over the ball. I have much more confidence in my swing now than I ever did," Player said.

"I don't have the fear I once had. In that respect, winning now is easier than it was for the first 20 years I played golf."

Player had a 72-hole total of 273, 15 under par on the 7,153 yard Colonial Country Club course.

Hubert Green, a two-time winner this season who had led through the second and third rounds and for 11 holes of the final 18, tied for second with Lou Graham at 275. Green had a closing 73, Graham a 70.

The group at 278 included Don Bies, Bob Wynn and Tom Watson. Watson had a 66. Miller 71 and Bies 70.

Dave Hill, a four-time Memphis champion and the pre-tournament favorite, wasn't in it after the first round and finished with a 74—284. Lee Trevino blew to a final 76 and 288.

Hanna to Coach

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Former Cleveland Crusaders star John Hanna confirmed today a report that he'll become coach of the World Hockey Association team next season.

"This is a step in the right direction," Hanna told WTLV-TV in Jacksonville, where he coached the Crusaders' farm club, the Barons of the American Hockey League.

"I'm very happy about my new job," he said.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer had reported in Saturday editions that Hanna would return to Cleveland next week to replace Bill Needham.

Hanna said the announcement of his new position was to have been made public Tuesday.

The Plain Dealer said Hanna, 39, would receive a one-year contract for $20,000.

Hanna confirmed the length of the contract but said the salary was too low. He would not discuss the pact.

WIN BISON RALLY

STEINBACH, MAN. (CP) — The current national motor sport rally champions—Walter Boyce and Doug Woods of Ottawa—handily won the Trail of the Bison Rally here Saturday in their factory-sponsored 1972 Toyota Corolla 1600 Coupe. The two, current champions since 1971, led the 400-mile event from the start Friday night to the finish Saturday afternoon. Only 19 of the 34 cars entered completed the rough, competitive event through the Sandilands Provincial Forest region of southeastern Manitoba.

Rookie Blair Wins First for Montreal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dennis Blair won't be with the graduating class at California State University for a while. Playing baseball with Montreal Expos has put him behind schedule as far as college is concerned.

Blair allowed just four hits in his eight innings, striking out six and walking six in winning his first major league appearance.

The only Philadelphia run scored in the third when Dave Cash singled, stole second and scored on Greg Luzinski's single.

Ken Singleton, Ron Fairly, Jim Cox and Willie Davis had runs batted in for Montreal.

Joe Torre had two hits and two runs batted in, and Lynn McGlothen held the Cubs to one hit until the eighth inning, carrying St. Louis past Chicago.

Dave Rosello's infield single in the third was the only Chicago hit until Don Kessinger scored on Jose Cardenal's single.

Ted Simmons, Ted Simmons, Mike Tyson, and Bake McBride brought in other runs for St. Louis.

Roger Nelson's six-hitter, two hits by Pete Rose and a sacrifice fly by Dan Driessen led Cincinnati past San Diego.

Willie Crawford drove in two runs and scored three for Los Angeles in their triumph over San Francisco.

The Dodgers took a 5-0 lead with two runs in the second and three in the third. Giants' Jim Francisco made it 6-5 on a home run by Gary Matthews, a run in the fifth, another in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Felix Millan, with New York losing 3-1 and two outs in the ninth inning, lashed a two-run singe to tie the game and John Milner added a two-run single to win the contest against Pittsburgh.

Bob Robertson had driven in two runs with a home run and a sacrifice fly for the Pirates entering the ninth.

Reds defeated San Diego Padres 4-1, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated San Francisco Giants 9-5 and New York Mets clipped Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3. The Houston, Astros-at-Atlanta Braves game was rained out.

Saturday, the Phillies swept a doubleheader from the Expos 4-3 and 4-2, the Cubs edged St. Louis 5-4, Los Angeles beat San Francisco 9-5, New York defeated Pittsburgh 4-3, Houston trounced Atlanta 5-1 and Cincinnati whipped San Diego 12-4.

"I really didn't expect to be in the majors until 1975 or '76," said Blair, who attended Cal State when he wasn't working in West Palm Beach of Class A ball, and Quebec of Class AA ball.

After his impressive debut Sunday, it's possible that Blair will be spending more summers with Montreal.

Ken Singleton

Blair won't be 20 years old until June 5, but he pitched like a veteran, lasting until the ninth inning against a 2-1 National League victory over Philadelphia Phillies.

In other National League games, St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago Cubs 7-1, Cincinnati

Darwin Blast Travels 515 Feet to Upper Deck

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The fans in the left field second deck of Minnesota's Metropolitan Stadium not only got to see a baseball game Sunday—they got to see a baseball.

Only once before had anybody hit a ball that far since the Twins have been in the park.

But Bobby Darwin drove one 515 feet into that faraway place and the home run helped carry the Twins to a 6-1 victory over Texas Rangers.

Team-mate Harmon Killebrew had done it before, back off Lew Burdette June 3, 1967.

Fernando Arroyo, who got the ham, Ont., was the victim Sunday.

"Mack Jones once hit one out with a strong wind behind it in Chicago that bounced on top of a roof across the street from Wrigley field," said Jenkins. "But 515 feet? That's quite a poke."

In other American League games Sunday, New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from Baltimore Orioles 6-5 and 7-5, Oakland A's defeated California Angels 6-5, Detroit Tigers beat Cleveland Indians 7-1, Kansas City Royals beat Chicago White Sox 4-1, and Boston Red Sox turned back Milwaukee Brewers 4-1.

Saturday, Baltimore beat New York 5-1, Milwaukee whipped Boston 9-2, Detroit edged Cleveland 5-4, Texas beat the Twins 4-3, Kansas City defeated Chicago 4-3, and California beat Oakland 8-2.

Darwin's two-run blast, his eighth of the season, capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning and helped Joe Decker coast to his fifth victory in nine decisions. Decker pitched an eight-hitter.

"He (Jenkins) had been throwing me slow breaking pitches all day," said Darwin, "then blew one at me with a curve.

Jenkins not only had trouble with Darwin, but also Rod Carew. The AL's leading hitter increased his batting average to .403 with a home run and two singles in the Minnesota cause.

Jenkins, whose record dropped to 7-5, said:

"Carew's the best hitter in his division. A pitcher can't pitch to him inside."

Thurman Munson and Bill Sudakis hit two-run homers, helping New York snap a five-game losing streak with its first-game victory over Baltimore.

Singles by Elliott Maddox, Bobby Murcer and Ron Blomberg and Graig Nettles double keyed a five-run fourth inning that carried New York to victory in the second game.

Sal Bando's seventh-inning sacrifice fly scored Bill North with the winning run to help Oakland snap a three-game California winning streak. The Angels had tied the game the inning before with a two-run three-run homer by Charlie Sands. Oakland scored two times in the top of the inning to erase a 2-0 deficit.

Mickey Lolich fired a five-hitter for his fourth straight victory, leading Detroit past Cleveland. Lolich struck out a season-high 11 batters in improving his record to 5-4. Cleveland's Steve Kline suffered his fifth straight loss and dropped to 2-7.

Jim Wohlford's run-scoring triple in the midst of a three-run fourth inning helped Kansas City beat Chicago. Steve Rojas led off the Royals' fourth with a single off Jim Kaat and scored on a double by Cookie Rojas, tying the score. Wohlford then tripled, sending Mayberry home with the tie-breaking run, and scored on a single by Al Cowens.

Rico Petrocelli and Carlton Fisk hit home runs, leading Boston over Milwaukee. Left-hander Bill Lee allowed eight hits and walked three, but worked out of trouble in several innings.

Pitchers Dominate OFL In Weekend Action

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

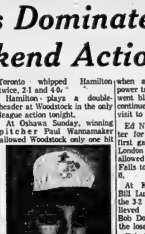
Pitchers, with the extraordinary speed ot't heir underhand throw, again dominated the five weekend doubleheaders in the Ontario Fastball League.

Bill Drennan, on the mound for Burlington, and Dick Balint, pitching for St. Catharines, went through 14 innings Sunday with their teams tied 1-1.

The game broke in the 15th inning when Dan Bemallick smacked a homer for Burlington which then got a second run on a St. Catharines error.

St. Catharines managed only one run in the bottom of the 15th and Burlington won 2-1.

Drennan gave up 13 hits and struck out 15 while Balint allowed only six hits and fanned 20 batters.



Bob McSporran hit a homer for St. Catharines in the first game and got two in the second game which St. Catharines won 5-4.

In other double bills Sunday, Niagara Falls blanked London 3-0 and 5-0; Oshawa shut out Woodstock 2-0 in the first with the second game halted because of power failure; and Newmarket beat Kitchener 3-2 and 2-1.

In the only game Saturday, Toronto whipped Hamilton twice, 2-1 and 4-0.

Hamilton plays a doubleheader at Woodstock in the only league action tonight.

At Oshawa Sunday, winning pitcher Paul Wannamaker allowed Woodstock only one hit and struck out seven in the first game for Oshawa a 2-0 win. The club now has five straight victories without a loss.

PAUL WANNAMAKER

Gord Pullen was the loser.

Oshawa was leading 2-1 in the third inning of the second game when a foul ball banged a power transformer and the field went black. The game will be continued on Woodstock's next visit to Oshawa.

Ed Woodard pitched a no-hitter for Niagara Falls in the first game for a 3-0 win over London and Jake Neufeld allowed only one hit as Niagara Falls took the second contest 5-0.

At Kitchener, Newmarket's Bill Lanney was credited with the 3-2 win although he was relieved in the ninth inning by Bob Domnik. Keith Wagler was the loser.

Bob Domnik as back on the mound for Newmarket in the second game and got the win, despite being relieved in the fifth, as Newmarket scored twice in the final seventh inning for the 2-0 victory. Ron Robinson was the Kitchener loser.

In Hamilton Saturday, Toronto pitcher Mike Mohns whoiked a triple in the seventh inning to score the winning run for a 2-1 victory in the first game. Wally Dick was the loser.

In the second game, Pete Lander allowed one hit and struck out 13 as Toronto won 4-0. Dick again was the loser.

East Wins Eight Titles

OTTAWA (CP) — While eastern Ontario won eight of 10 Canadian amateur boxing titles Saturday night, Jerry Day of Edmonton captured the top event—the heavyweight crown.

The 27-year-old fighter easily won the three-round featured bout, taking a unanimous decision over Richard Petch of Thunder Bay, Ont.

The only other win for the West came in the second bout when Guy Boutin of Edmonton defeated Salvatore Cuffaro of Montreal to capture the bantamweight, 119-pound, class title.

Ian Clyde of Montreal won the flyweight, 112-pound class title with a technical knockout in the first round over Rick Eedy of Langley, B. C.

The eastern champions met little resistance from the West in the Canadian amateur championships.

Darrell Huard of Montreal won the 125-pound featherweight title defeating Dale Anderson of Rocky Mountain House Alta.

About 2,000 fans

Cleveland Clementy of Montreal won the 132 pound lightweight title over Lorne Dalgreuilt of Surrey, B.C. before about 2,000 fans at the Ottawa Civic Centre.

In the 139-pound light welterweight class, Michel Bruyere of Montreal won a close decision over Randy Jackson of Edmonton.

Jules Bosse of Edmundston, N.B., took a unanimous decision in the 147-pound welterweight class over Wayne Crowe of Richmond, B.C. Bosse controlled the match which was stopped momentarily in the third round when Crowe started bleeding heavily from the nose.

Michel Prevost of St. Hubert, Que., battled back to capture the 156-pound light middleweight title over Steve Tobill of Vancouver.

In the 165 pound middleweight division, San Williamson of Sarnia, Ont., won an unanimous decision over Bill Garlepy of Richmond, B.C.

The 178-pound light heavyweight title turned ot to be the boldest match of the night as Byron Gibson of Montreal knocked down Dennis Belair of Toronto three times before the fight was stopped in the third round. Gibson, who displayed a devastating right-left combination, staggered Belair twice in he first round and then knocked the Alberta fighter to the mat twice in the second.

BEARS' PLAYER JUMPS

ANAHEIM (AP) — Chicago Bears offensive lineman Bob Lansney has signed a contract to play for Southern California Sun starting in 1976, the World Football League teams announced Friday. A guard, Newton earned all-America honors at Nebraska in 1970 and has been with the Bears of the National Football League since 1971. He is under contract to Chicago for 1974 and must play out his option there in 1975 before joining the Sun under a long term contract.

Socred Price For Support $200 at Sixty

OTTAWA (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette says a guaranteed annual income and a $200-a-month pension at 60 would be his party's price for support of a minority government.

Mr. Caouette, speaking on the CTV program Question Period which was pre-taped for broadcast Saturday, had been asked what conditions would be set if Social Credit members hold the balance of power and Progressive Conservatives form a minority government.

He said he would not hold up as conditions some other items in the Social Credit platform, such as changes in the monetary system and outlawing abortion and birth control.

". . . If I do have the balance of power I will not use it just to play politics with it or to call another election. I'll try to get as many results as possible for the benefit of our people and I'll look at the situation very seriously."

Another issue the party would press for would be to have the next government limit the possibility of allowing the Bank of Canada to make loans to governments.

Mr. Caouette's party had 26 elected members and the balance of power in Parliament when former prime minister John Diefenbaker led a minority government in 1962.

Mr. Caouette said he is confident the Social Credit party would improve on its standing in the last Parliament when it had 15 members, all from Quebec.

Stanfield Might Bar Two Nominees

OTTAWA (CP) — Carrying a small thorn in his political side, Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield today begins the second leg of his July 8 federal election campaign tour.

The thorn, which may be partially removed tonight, surfaced in New Brunswick during the weekend when two Conservatives, both opponents of the official language policy, announced they are seeking nomination.

The Conservatives have accepted as part of official party policy the government's bilingualism program.

Mayor Leonard Jones of Moncton, who drew national publicity with his opposition to the bilingualism policy, seeks nomination tonight in the federal riding of Moncton.

Mr. Stanfield, on a one-day Maritime tour Saturday, said that if Mr. Jones or Dr. Bennett Macauley a nother opponent to current language policies, were nominated, there was a way to reject the nominations.

Mr. Macauley, a nephew of W. A. C. Bennett, former Social Credit premier of British Columbia, is seeking nomination in the riding of Fundy-Royal, now held by Conservative Gordon Fairweather.

Mr. Stanfield said all Conservative candidates must be designated as an agent of the party to the chief electoral officer. Under this designation they could not be official Conservative candidates.

Party officials said that if such a refusal occurred, the party could establish the local constituency association and create a new one.

Mayor Jones said Sunday in Moncton that he is confident he will be nominated by a four-to-one majority despite open opposition from party officials.

The Supreme Court of Canada recently turned down a bid by Mayor Jones to have the federal law on bilingualism overturned.

Mr. Macauley will seek nomination later this month.

While in Montague, P.E.I., Saturday night, Mr. Stanfield spoke to a crowd in the same hall where Prime Minister Trudeau addressed supporters a week before.

At that time, Mr. Trudeau criticized the opposition for defeating the government on the budget debate.

Mr. Stanfield said the government was defeated "as it deserved to be defeated on the matter of a budget which did nothing to attack the root cause of economic inflation . . . a budget which was premised on the government's philosophy that Canadians will just have to ride it out, graciously suffering in silence."

"The binge must end and it will not end so long as Progressive Conservative government—a government Canada can afford," he said.

Mr. Stanfield said in Saint John, N.B., earlier Saturday that he wants to encourage adequate development of that city's port.

Provincial Premier Richard Hatfield had told the Conservative leader that a project to develop the port area would eventually cost $30 million and the federal government refuses to help finance the project.

Dief Sees PM as Bad Example

SELKIRK, Man. (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker lashed out strongly at Prime Minister Trudeau Saturday, stating that he fears for the country if Trudeau is re-elected for another four-year term.

Speaking at a Conservative rally in this small city some 20 miles northeast of Winnipeg, the former progressive Conservative party chief said the prime minister encourages the present inflationary trend by his spending habits.

He cited expenses of $180 for cab trays in the prime minister's office and a $61,000 expenditure for office renovations as examples of prime ministerial extravagance.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Trudeau's high-spending habits set a spendthrift example to cabinet ministers in a time when taxes are higher than at any time in Canada's history.

The former prime minister compared the $6-billion budget that he submitted when he was national leader with the $24 billion budget the Trudeau government presented to Parliament at the time of its defeat.

Turning to the actions of NDP Leader David Lewis and his party, Mr. Diefenbaker said the New Democrats say they're against higher prices but would not support measures proposed by the Conservatives to control prices.

Trudeau on Move

Campaigns Fun Again - - PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, whose style has changed dramatically since the 1972 election, begins the second full week of his campaign today with his most obvious display of enthusiasm since becoming prime minister.

"Campaigns are fun again," he said last week, blazing a fast election trail from Newfoundland to British Columbia. And this week, he will board a special train in Sydney, N.S., and whistle-stop his way to Montreal, reliving the old fashioned campaigns that re-elected many earlier prime ministers.

"There are no voters up there," John Diefenbaker used to say in reference to airplane campaigning.

Mr. Trudeau begins h week with a tea party in Toronto, followed by a visit to a senior citizens' home and a nominating convention.

He flies to Sydney early Tuesday accompanied by his wife Margaret and baby Sacha. They will have a private car on the five-car special train.

Meanwhile, Mr. Trudeau is giving the appearance of enjoying this campaign much more than he did in 1972 when he was quietly criticized by party officials for not putting forth enough effort.

He acknowledged this himself in Drummondville, Que., Saturday when he said: "I was the time we didn't work hard enough" and that "this time you can count on us."

So far he has been delivering virtually the same speech at all stops. Neither the government nor the country would this July 8 election; it was forced by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, "who can't even keep control over his own party," and New Democratic Party leader David Lewis, "who couldn't stand the responsibility. . ."

And after the two opposition parties defeated the government's budget, their leaders wanted the tax measures implemented anyway, he says.

"What an extraordinary contempt of Parliament these gentlemen are showing," he told a cheering crowd in Abbotsford, B.C.

Mr. Trudeau appears to be enjoying his counter-thrusts at the leaders, both of whom he mostly ignored in 1972.

The Liberal battle plan is for Mr. Trudeau to carry the same message to all regions of Canada in the first two weeks of the campaign. After that he will place more emphasis on Liberal policies.

So far the prime minister has been meeting well-filled auditoriums and getting a more enthusiastic response than two years ago. He is also more relaxed to the point he entertains an improved sense of humor and appears to be caught up in his mission.

In the last campaign, he flew in a private compartment in the front of the plane—this time there are no partitions in the chartered Air Canada DC-9—and his quiet "dialogue with Canadians" of 1972 has been replaced with a hard-hitting, get-'em approach.

There are few rests for Mr. Trudeau in hotel rooms. The prime minister is using all his time to meet people, and in Vancouver, during a pounding rainstorm, he went mainstreeting in a residential area.

The best speech of his campaign so far was delivered in Drummondville, where he aroused a packed auditorium as he seldom did in previous campaigns. His perspiring face glistened under floodlights, while the crowd alternately laughed and applauded. His gestures and humor seemed sharper when he spoke in French, adding bite to a speech almost identical to those delivered in the West.

Lewis Says Prices Issue, Not Personal Leadership

CHELMSFORD, Ont. (CP) — Contrary to what Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau says, personal leadership is not the issue in the July 8 election campaign, New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis said Saturday night.

In an off-the-cuff speech to 175 persons in this community 10 miles north of Sudbury, Mr. Lewis said that living-cost increases remain the central problem to be resolved by a new government.

He took satiric pokes at both Mr. Trudeau and Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, saying both had been "streaking across the country, calling each other dishonest."

"Who am I to disagree with them?"

But the NDP leader added that personality attacks should not take the minds of voters off the real issues.

Leadership was more a matter of programs, philosophy and sensitivity to the needs of people.

He urged voters, when confronted by statements that party leadership is at stake in the election, to ask these questions.

"Pierre, what will you do for me tomorrow to make life possible in this age of high living costs?

"Bob, you tell me how you will impose wage and price controls in a way that will help me, rather than the corporations of this country?"

He urged the meeting to remember that everything that makes life worthwhile in society is collectively arranged.

Schools, universities, hospitals, libraries and other publicly funded institutions were made possible by society acting "as one."

But all these things depended for survival on money and whatever large corporations failed to pay in taxes, the Canadian people were forced to pay with their taxes.

Mr. Lewis repeated that he has interest in eliminating corporation profits but said his party is interested in protecting consumers from corporate greed which had pushed profit levels unnecessarily high.

He said the NDP is the only party committed to reducing the cost of living at the expense of corporations and for the benefit of the consumers.

Earlier, Mr. Lewis taped a television program in Sudbury for broadcast today.

The NDP leader's evening visit to this Northern Ontario town followed a five-day campaign swing through Western Canada.

Lewis Seeks Support From Parti Quebecois

MONTREAL (CP) — New Democrat Party leader David Lewis has appealed for support from Parti Quebecois backers in the July 8 federal elections.

At a news conference Sunday, the NDP leader urged PQ members to reject advice from their leader Rene Levesque and vote on election day.

Mr. Levesque was being "totally irresponsible and even immoral" when he advised his membership to abstain from voting.

Mr. Lewis said that the NDP had no interest in the PQ position that Quebec should be independent from the rest of Canada, but both the NDP and the PQ had similar social policies.

Therefore, Mr. Lewis said, those who support the PQ social program provincially should vote for the NDP federally.

The 64-year-old NDP leader said that all Quebecers should vote in federal elections because national laws affect a great deal of daily lives.

"As long as Quebec is a part of Canada—which will be for many years—Quebecers should be able to have a say in the government of the country."

Mr. Lewis also took a shot, his second of the campaign, at recently-introduced Quebec legislation that would make French the sole official language in the province.

He urged Premier Robert Bourassa to withdraw the bill because it satisfies no one and is the interests of neither the province nor the country as a whole.

The bill, Mr. Lewis said, was a blunder.

Mr. Lewis' one-day stop in the Montreal region followed a five-day swing through Western Canada and appearances Saturday in northern Ontario.

He capped the day here with a speech in nearby Longueuil where he expounded NDP pension policy.

He said an NDP government would raise the basic old age pension to $200 a month from $110.

Further, it would reduce the eligible age for pensions to 60 from 65 over a five-year period.

Mr. Lewis said that the money for such a proposal could be found through a fairer taxation system where corporations would turn over to the federal treasury money held in deferred and back taxes.

But he added that the increase in pensions would be introduced during a two-year period to give the Canadian economy a chance to adjust.

The NDP has never elected an MP from the 74 ridings in Quebec, but Mr. Lewis said he was optimistic "some progress" would be made in this election. The party now has 11 separate candidates in at least 73 ridings, he said, but he refused to predict whether it would win any seats.

Flood Danger Seems Past

MONTREAL (CP) — The danger of further flooding in western Quebec appears to have passed, but civil protection crews and residents of towns from Maniwaki, 80 miles north of Ottawa, to western Montreal Island are continuing bolding or cleanup operations in the wake of an estimated $75 million in damage.

A statement by the civil protection service said Sunday the situation near Montreal is relatively stable and floodwaters in the Maniwaki area are slowly receding.

Crews continue to pump water from basements in the Montreal suburbs of Ste. Genevieve, Pointe-Claire, Pierrefonds and Ile Bizard.

Officials said it could take two weeks for the waters to recede because of the narrowness of the Riviere des Prairies.

More than 150 families have been evacuated from their homes and typhoid inoculation clinics have been established through sewage-fouled water.

Provincial police said it would be about a month before the situation at Maniwaki and Pointe Gatineau, across the Ottawa River from Ottawa, return to normal.

Many homes are filled with mud while others have cracked walls and split ceilings.

In Maniwaki, a town of 6,600 more than 400 families were evacuated from their homes May 14 and now are returning to collapsed foundations, oil-stained interiors and damaged that may be as high as $10 million.

Many residents blame the flooding on Hydro-Quebec, saying the utility held water behind the Mercier Dam, 30 miles north, to build up reserves for the Baskatong reservoir before the spring runoff. When record rains hit the area, residents say Hydro had more water than it could handle.

Hydro officials contend the rains caused the flooding.

Provincial police spokesmen at Maniwaki estimate $2 million worth of logs were swept away. About 1,200 workers who were laid off are not expected to be recalled for at least a month.

MUCH UNDEVELOPED

Only about one-third of Canada's total area has been brought under development to date.

Larynx Cancer Toll Reduced

TORONTO (CP) — The larynx has altered from "the most lethal" to "one of the most favorable sites for human malignancy" in the last 100 years, a centennial conference on laryngeal cancer was told Sunday.

Douglas Bryce, chairman of the otolaryngology department at the University of Toronto, said that improvement in surgical sciences, development of radiotherapy and education of doctors and patients are responsible for the progress.

But he told delegates that "great leaps forward" in treatment of cancer of the larynx is needed because doctors have reached a plateau in their efforts to treat it.

He said survival figures for patients suffering from the cancer, which attacks the upper part of the windpipe containing the vocal cords, have changed little in 20 years.

Delivering the first Charlie Conacher memorial lecture, in honor of the former National Hockey League player, Dr. Bryce said preservation of the voice must remain a challenge to doctors because it is the human voice, conveying the concepts and emotions generated by the human brain, that may make life sublime.

The conference continues this week.

Vote to Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — A vote Sunday by about 150 members of the Council of Newspaper Unions could close The Citizen and curtail publication of The Journal, Ottawa's two English-language daily newspapers.

The vote unanimously endorsed strike action June 1 for the four unions in the council—The Ottawa Newspaper Guild, the International Typesetters Union, the International Mailers' Union, and the International Printing and Graphic Communications Union.

Depression Said to Be Price Of Orthodox Cure for Inflation

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Senator Eugene Forsey of Ottawa said Saturday that orthodox remedies against inflation would only work at the cost of a depression . . . and that's too high a price to pay.".

Speaking to a Liberal party workshop attended by about 100 persons, he said orthodox methods of combatting inflation include raising interest rates, restricting the money supply and drastic cuts in government spending.

"The problem is shortage of supplies as against rising demand and the main remedy is to increase production."

Federal Public Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube told the workshop the "gut issue" in the campaign for the July 8 federal election is leadership but that may change before voting day.

"You don't know what the last one (issue) will be," he said.

Housing may become one of the key issues, said Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

Because of rising house prices, Mr. Nixon said many young people starring married life "see the prospect of ever owning a home passing over the horizon."

Liberal Worker Switches

TORONTO (CP) — John Murhead, who in three previous federal elections was campaign manager in Toronto for Liberal Jack Horner, minister of state for multiculturalism, says he is switching the Conservatives.

He will be campaign manager in the July 8 election for Lisbor Zink, the Conservative candidate in Parkdale, Mr. Murhead said Sunday.

He said he had been involved in 19 previous municipal, provincial and federal elections as a Liberal supporter and managed the campaigns of Mr. Hadzas in 1963, 1965 and 1968. He sat out the 1972 election.

Mr. Muirhead said he is dissatisfied with the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Bilingualism Foe Seeks PC Backing

MONCTON—N.B. (CP) — Mayor Leonard Jones of Moncton, who drew national publicity with his opposition to federal bilingualism policies, seeks the Progressive Conservative nomination for the federal riding of Moncton tonight. Once again, controversy bubbles around the 63-year-old mayor's politics.

Mayor Jones, who has announced he is stepping out of municipal politics after 21 years as mayor of this eastern New Brunswick city, said Sunday he is confident he will be nominated by a four-to-one majority despite open opposition from party officials and a strong hint Saturday that Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield does not want him as a candidate for the July 8 election.

The Moncton PC Association executive and the New Brunswick PC Youth Federation issued statements Sunday supporting Charles Thomas, Conservative member for the riding in the last House who wants to run again.

Mr. Stanfield said at a news conference Saturday in Saint John, N.B., he can reject any candidate he does not consider acceptable to the party.

Asked about the acceptability of Mr. Jones, Mr. Stanfield replied:

"His views on bilingualism are well known; the position of any party is well known and my views are well known. I would ask that you draw your own conclusions."

He added that he found Mr. Thomas "an excellent men-and he has had a series of ber, and a hard-working clashes in recent years with member of our caucus." Acadians, who make up about

Toyota has the lowest priced popular small car: $2599*

Two thousand five hundred and ninety-nine dollars.
We think that's a lot of money to pay for any car. But we also think it's the best bargain in town. Here's why.

Lowest priced of all popular† small cars.
Economy has to begin with price. (But it shouldn't end there.)
And when you compare prices, one fact stands out: of the 10 best selling small cars in Canada, Toyota has the lowest priced model. The Toyota Corolla 1200 KE20RKB.
Now check the dollar difference between Toyota and some of the other popular economy models.

Model	One economy 2+2 Hardtop	Lowest Priced Model Manual transmission	Suggested	Difference
TOYOTA	1200/KE	$2 599	—
Vega	2300/TS	$2 837	$238
Ford	2000/	$2 852	$253
Datsun	1200	$2 795	$196
VW	1600/LS	$2 999	$ 360

 Imp./P. figures not released.

Now consider this: The Toyota Corolla 1200 is not only the lowest priced model of the popular† small cars.
It's also the one that goes the farthest on a gallon of gas.

Small car mileage chart.
Best mileage obtained by cars in their class from test runs, gov.

Make	0 5 10 15 20 25 30 35

These figures are from the Environmental Protection Agency—a U.S. government body that tested 486 different vehicles to determine gas mileage. And in the E.P.A. Gas Mileage Study of 74 models, the Toyota Corolla 1200 averaged 32.5 miles per imperial gallon. The best gas mileage of the 10 best selling small cars in Canada. (Of course your own mileage may vary depending on road conditions and the way you drive.)

Economy. And much more.
Still not satisfied?
Good.
Because, with today's shrinking dollar, an economy car should offer you a lot more. Not only good price and good gas mileage. But good value right down the line.

That's why even the lowest priced Toyota models come equipped with a wide range of extras ... like front disc brakes, four-on-the-floor transmission, and fully reclining bucket seats.
Where many car manufacturers list these as extra cost options, they're all standard equipment on every Toyota.

22 beautiful ways to save.
At Toyota, the big option is choice.
We give you a wider selection of small cars than any other manufacturer; 22 models in 6 different series.
And they're not only different in size. They're different in character.
Chances are one of them is just right for you.

Change your car. Not your lifestyle.
Now more than ever, the small car is the car of the future.
In the face of rising prices, it's one of the few alternatives left.
And if you're looking for small car economy with big car performance, styling comfort and model range—Then the only alternative left is Toyota.
Which brings us right back to the beginning. $2599.*

CP News Roundup

Letter Delayed

MONTREAL (CP) — A letter addressed to Mrs. J. Murray of Lakeshore Drive in suburban Dorval and postmarked March in Cambridge, Mass., was delivered Friday.

It seems, however, the letter was not meant for the current Mrs. James Murray. Instead, it was meant for her predecessor three generations back—Mrs. Murray's great-grandmother.

It was postmarked March 28, 1918, in Cambridge and received in Dorval March 30, 1918.

There were no other postmarks on the letter, nor was it accompanied by an explanatory note.

The current edition of the J. Murrey's live less than a mile from the post office.

Party Split

BRAMPTON (CP) — Terry Grier, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Toronto Lakeshore, said Sunday that only a few Progressive Conservatives believe in wage and price controls.

100-mile Run

TORONTO (CP) — Philippe Latulippe ran 100 miles in 20 hours, 161 minutes while raising volunteering to do it again.

Mr. Latulippe, 35, a retired chief warrant officer with the Canadian Armed Forces, began the endurance test at 2 p.m. Friday and completed the 100 miles by 9 a.m. Saturday.

Maj. Kurt Allen, a physiologist on the Downsview air base, where the run took place, said Saturday: "We don't know how he can do it."

Bruner Irked

TORONTO (CP) — Albert A. Bruner, former president of Global Television Communications Ltd., has sharply criticized the new management of the TV station.

The new group committed "a breach of the understanding and commitment to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) and the previous Global board," he said in a letter to be mailed today to debenture holders.

Mr. Bruner was referring to a proposal by the new management to pay unsecured creditors of Global 25 cents on the dollar or full payment spread over five years, starting in 1979.

Boycott

BARRIE (CP) — Teachers at Georgian Community College here boycotted convocation exercises for 229 students Saturday to protest delay in negotiating a contract at the provincial level.

Of 80 faculty members, about six took part in the morning exercises but none took part in the afternoon ceremonies although many sat in the audience.

Watergate Cases Are Now Year Old

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marking its first anniversary, the special Watergate prosecution force announced Saturday that its investigation of the Watergate break-in and cover-up is "nearly completed" and that its inquiry into election campaign "dirty tricks" is in its final stage.

Spokesmen for the prosecutors said the greatest amount of criminal investigations still pending involve campaign contributions.

Other investigations also are proceeding in a case involving International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) and in matters resulting from the investigation of the so-called White House plumbing unit, including alleged misuse of executive power, alleged illegal wiretapping and alleged misuse of the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service and other United States government agencies, the spokesmen said. The plumbing unit was created to plug news leaks.

The spokesmen gave a boxscore of the year's activities:

—Thirty-six men and 13 corporations have been charged by the special prosecutors with some federal crime. Of those, 22 men and nine corporations have been convicted, two men have had indictments dismissed, and the remainder either have yet to plead to the charges or are awaiting trial. Those who have pleaded guilty include former attorney-general Richard Kleindienst, former White House aides John Dean, Jeb Stuart Magruder, Frederick LaRue, Egil Krogh, and Herbert Porter, and the president's former lawyer and fund-raiser, Herbert Kalmbach.

—Legal papers have been filed in court on 54 separate occasions, including a court battle over the first subpoena demanding presidential tape recordings and documents from President Nixon.

PEARL GUINDON

Davis Sorry To Lose Guindon

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Saturday he is disappointed that Labor Minister Fernand Guindon has decided to leave the Ontario cabinet to contest the riding of Stormont-Dundas in the July 8 federal election.

In an interview, Mr. Davis said Mr. Guindon's decision will prove beneficial to the federal Progressive Conservatives. He was confident the labor ministry would be a successful candidate.

The premier also said he hopes to name a cabinet replacement for Mr. Guindon this week.

Slowdown

TORONTO (Reuter) — About one-fifth of Britain's nurses in the government-run health service began a work slowdown today.

For Liberty

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — One of Canada's newest political parties, the Libertarian Party of Canada, held a national convention during the weekend and decided to run candidates in the July 8 federal elections.

Bruce Evoy of Toronto, a former teacher now an independent personnel consultant, formed the party last July 7.

Its philosophy is "total liberty for the individual to live his life free of liberties and the economic sphere," he said.

The Libertarian party believes the function of government should be reduced to policing, court activities and national defence.

Mr. Evoy said the party, which has 150 paid members across Canada, opposes such government services as unemployment insurance and subsidies because it believes people will take care of each other.

Taxes would be replaced by fees for services.

Protest Blast

TORONTO (CP) — About 50 demonstrators marched through downtown Toronto Saturday to draw attention to Canada's role in helping India develop a nuclear bomb.

The group, sponsored by the Association of Pakistani Canadians, marched from the city hall to the Ontario legislature.

Mountie Chief to Discuss Possibility of Association

TORONTO (CP) — RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon says he will meet representatives of RCMP divisions across Canada Thursday to discuss whether the men want to form an association.

Commissioner Nadon said in an interview Sunday that the alternative to an association would be improvements in the existing divisional representation system.

He also has ordered a study of police associations in Canada to discover whether they are effective.

Meanwhile, Michael Ryan of Toronto, who resigned from the RCMP a week ago, called Sunday night for a full public inquiry into the force where RCMP members might speak without fear of reprisals.

Mr. Ryan, a constable for seven years earlier was named representative of the Toronto D division to investigate the possibility of forming a national RCMP association.

He later charged in published reports that there is dissension and dissatisfaction in the ranks.

Commissioner Nadon said the RCMP has a number of moral codes and other problems, most of them resulting from rapid growth of the force in the last 10 years and changing economic and social conditions.

"We have 18,000 people spread across the country in various economic conditions and situations and we definitely have problems," he said.

"We'd certainly admit that. We'd be crazy to say we haven't because its obvious we do have them."

Since May 1 more than 4,000 RCMP members have attended meetings in Vancouver, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal to discuss formation of an association to negotiate wages and working conditions.

But under a federal order-in-council, approved in 1918, members of the force are prohibited from engaging in any form of collective bargaining.

Mr. Ryan, who joins the nearby Peel regional police department today, said in an interview Sunday he resigned mainly because of the aftermath of a drug raid in which he participated outside Toronto more than a year ago.

Lawyers representing some of those arrested in the raid later made allegations of brutality against some of the arresting officers.

The RCMP conducted an internal investigation and Mr. Ryan said he was given an "official warning" by an officer and transferred from the drug squad to duty at Toronto International Airport at Malton.

Mr. Ryan said he fought the "official warning" on grounds that the complaints of brutality was contradicted by medical evidence and that of the justice of the peace who arraigned those arrested.

If it had not been for the transfer out of the drug squad, he still would be with the RCMP, said Mr. Ryan.

Meanwhile, E. R. Lyons, Assistant RCMP commissioner commanding the force in Toronto, issued a statement Sunday denying pressure had been brought to bear on Mr. Ryan over his connection with possible formation of an association or union.

Hospital Strikers May Seek Support

WOODSTOCK (CP) — A union leader said Sunday that unless a strike of non-medical personnel at Woodstock General Hospital is settled today, he would ask workers in other hospitals in southwestern Ontario to leave their jobs in sympathy.

John Askin of London, Ont., president of Local 220, London and District Building Service Workers Union, said he would of their current two-year contract which expires Dec. 31.

They want a new two-year agreement with wage increases totalling $1.50 an hour. Current salaries range between $2.73 and $4.63 an hour.

Peter Smith, executive director of the Woodstock hospital, said it functioning "really during the weekend with professional staff aided by volunteers. However, only emergency surgery is being performed.

Mr. Smith has said he will seek a court injunction today to ensure that pickets do not prevent persons from entering the hospital.

Meanwhile, Tom Mitchell of London, business agent of Local 220, charged that a nurse refused to provide a stretcher Saturday for a picket who collapsed with heart seizure.

"It was 15 minutes before they got him inside," he said, because an ambulance had to be called.

Ronald Grindley, the stricken picket, was reported in satisfactory condition in the hospital's coronary unit Sunday night.

Mr. Smith said the nurse had questioned the ability of strikers to take responsibility for moving the man and had called for an ambulance.

IN MEMORIAM

DANIELS — In loving memory of a dear son and brother Ronald Roger Daniels who passed away May 27, 1973.
Years go by the days we used to share. But in our hearts you are always there.
The pain of memory will never part.
We miss you more than anyone knows.
With tender love and deep regret.
We who loved you will never forget.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Mom and all the family.

TURNER — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather Ralph who passed away May 27, 1972.
Those we love we never lose.
We watched and felt you leave.
Our hearts were almost broken.
But God knew what to do.
He wanted you to rest from suffering.
Our sympathy rest from pain.
We would wish you back, dear one.
To suffer that again.
Lovingly remembered by wife Alice and daughter Joyce and grandaughter Laura.

Two-man Effort

Joe Boucher and his son Daniel, 5, tangled with a turtle during a fishing excursion in Trenton's Centennial Park. "The worst thing I can do to punish Daniel when he's been bad is by telling him he can't fish for a week," said Mr. Boucher. Most catches are still small and mainly perch and rock bass.

District Veterans To Mark D Day

By HOWARD KOKESH

Two local wartime units will have representation among the nearly 800 official delegates visiting France next month to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Normandy landings of June 6, 1944.

The Canadian delegation will be headed by Veterans Affairs Minister Daniel Mac-Donald and the Canadian Ambassador to France, the Hon. Jean Chapdelaine. It will include surviving D Day formation commanders, survivors of each battalion and of the supporting arms and services, representatives of the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Air Force, and the National Council of Veterans Associations.

Dick Burns from the 4th Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment RCA and Dave Beck from the 16th Field Regiment RCA will represent the many area veterans who formed part of the 150.00 men who went to the beaches of Normandy on D Day.

J. C. Lundberg, as chairman of the Canadian Council of Veterans, will also be attending the 30th anniversary program. The principal Canadian event will be a Remembrance ceremony in Beny-sur-Mer Canadian War Cemetery at 4:30 p.m. on June 5. The Canadian forces a fifth of the total invasion force and by the end of that "long day" they had come ashore and reached their objectives, at a cost of more than 1,000 casualties.

The official delegation will leave Ottawa on June 1, and return June 8.

The flag above the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 ANAF was flown at half staff out of respect for Lt. Gen. Guy Simonds, possibly Canada's greatest battlefield commander, who was buried in Mount Pleasant Cemetery with full military honors last week.

The ladies auxiliary of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit ANAF recently concluded their Monday night dart league with a roast beef buffet held in the Tartan Lounge. Their Labatt Trophy was presented by Jack Gosson to Bessie Sorma, captain of the winning team. Other team members were Mabel Galbraith, Isabelle Kollar, Eileen Sills, Jean Meagher and Jolie White who each received individual trophies and ceramic trays. Unit president Hank Ford presented the runners up with the Duke of Edinburgh trophy. Winner of the Charlotte Cliff trophy for high 3 darts was Peggy Hornsby.

Bonnie Storms will head the league for next year with Charlotte Edwards as Sec-Treas. Following an election conducted by Hank Ford and Jack Gosson, the evening concluded with a dart elimination contest conducted in the lower lounge.

The first golfing event for the members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit ANAF this season is planned for Sloco, Sunday June 9. Tee-off time is 8 a.m. and members are asked to make a note of this date.

Entertainment chairman Cliff Ouderkirk introduces a new personality on Friday in the person of Jim Jay. Entertainment in the lower lounge commences at 8:30 p.m. for members and their guests. A Jize Ball will be held in the Tartan Lounge on Saturday June 1. Music will be provided by the Dawnwoods and tickets are now on sale at the bar. Members are asked to read the bulletin board for complete details of this outstanding event.

Jack committee in Belleville General Hospital are: Ab Semark in room 706 while Charles Forbes, a Navy Veteran, is in room 383.

Sam's Sermon: George Washington threw a silver dollar across the river; now the politicians think nothing of throwing millions across the ocean.

LONDON (AP) — A David Cassidy pop concert in London was halted Sunday night as thousands of screaming teenagers crushed forward toward the stage at Whale City Stadium.

Estimates of the injuries were as high as 1,000 with dozens of youngsters in hospital for broken limbs, shock and what one nurse described as "David Cassidy hysteria."

One 15-year-old girl suffered a heart attack and was in critical condition.

Trouble started 20 minutes after the concert began when some of the 30,000 fans started pushing forward. Girls were knocked down and trampled on in the ensuing melee.

Cassidy left the stage as 250 security guards tried to carry away the injured who paid $3.50 each for a ticket. Two security guards collapsed from exhaustion.

Cassidy later resumed his hour-long concert.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Oh, no, not another crazy actress!" said Gloria Swanson when she was asked to end a 22-year absence from the screen and appear in Airport 1975.

"As soon as I heard they wanted me to play an actress, I figured it was another weirdo," said Miss Swanson, 75.

Producer Bill Frye and director Jack Smight do not want her to play a prostitute as in a sequel to Universal's biggest moneymaker, Even so, she found the dialogue "titsie-poo."

She came up with a solution: Instead of portraying some mythical movie star, why not call the character Gloria Swanson?

"Then I could talk the way I do normally, and I could bring my own food aboard the airplane. Everybody knows I'm somewhat of a nut about food," she said.

So she now is playing herself in the multi-star case of jet travellers in jeopardy.

Miss Swanson started in movies in 1914 in the Essanay studios in her native Chicago. She has three children and seven grandchildren, and a great-grandchild on the way.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Donald Crisp, 90, an Academy Award-winning actor and one of the last movie industry pioneers, died Saturday following a series of strokes in recent years.

Crisp appeared in more than 400 films in a career spanning about 60 years, winning a supporting Oscar in 1941 for his work in How Green Was My Valley.

His last film was Pollyanna in 1960.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Johnny Weissmuller, who spent a good portion of his life either in the water or swinging through trees, is back in the water again, this time for health purposes.

Weissmuller, 69, broke his hip last December during a fall at Caesars Palace hotel here, where he had been employed as a host-greeter.

After four months in the hospital, the former star of 19 Tarzan films and holder of five Olympic gold medals for swimming has taken to the family pool for daily workouts to build up his shattered body.

Weissmuller set 57 world records as a swimmer, and has been honored as the greatest swimmer in the first half of this century.

SPAN CONTINENT

Canada's 1.7 million square miles of forest extend in an unbroken belt 600 to 1,300 miles wide from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Belleville branch Red Cross workers Murray Workman (left) and Robert Howell set up a projector to show several first aid and water safety films during a regional seminar in the city Saturday. The afternoon gathering was attended by about 30 representatives from eastern Ontario Red Cross centres in Bancroft, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Uxbridge.

Red Cross Will Accent Training in First Aid

Improvements should be made in the first aid content of Red Cross water safety programs, Belleville branch president Murray Workman said this weekend.

A recommendation to that effect will go to Red Cross Ontario division headquarters in Toronto.

The action stems from discussion during what is believed to be one of the first joint first aid-water safety regional seminars.

About 30 representatives from eastern Ontario Red Cross branches attended the Saturday afternoon seminar-workshop at Quinte Secondary School.

To a large part, first aid instruction is lacking in Red Cross water safety programs, said Mr. Workman. Resuscitation is, and always has been taught, he said.

However, he questioned whether water safety program graduates, such as lifeguards, know how to handle a child, bleeding severely from a gash sustained on a broken glass bottle at a beach. He further questioned whether they know the treatment procedure for a spinal injury after a diving accident.

This has not been adequately dealt with," he said.

Mr. Workman, Belleville branch executive member Robert Howell, and water safety chairman Lesley Ingram will draft the recommendation this week.

Another concrete result of the seminar, said the president, was the increased knowledge regional Red Cross workers gained in promoting first aid and water safety program aims in their communities.

Approaches and methods — use of the media, schools, service clubs and public demonstrations — were outlined.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE EDDE OSOL

Tuesday, May 28

Aries (March 21-April 19) If you're employed by someone this is not the day to take an extra-long coffee break. Your boss wants his pound of flesh.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) This is definitely not the time to involve yourself in any risky ventures where you have to dig into your purse for dollars.

Gemini (May 21-June 2) You may have to wear your earplugs around the house. Everyone will be blaming someone else for things that went wrong.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will act today without thinking of the consequences. This will get you in a jam. Consider all your moves cautiously.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Before the day is over you're likely to feel your patience is as leaky as a sieve. Emotional demands cause you concern.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be extremely tactful today. Otherwise, it will seem that everyone is looking to knock the chip off your shoulder.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today's events are likely to box you into a corner. Lots of outside pressures from all angles. Be prepared.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you're involved in some form of group activity it would be best to be seen, but not heard.

Sagittarian (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Competition will be extremely keen in anything you're going after. Halfway measures won't win blue ribbons.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You won't find a very large or receptive audience for your ideas today. It's best to wait till you're sure others are interested.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'd be kidding yourself if you're counting on others to cover a certain obligation for you.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't put a lot of stock in judgments you make at this time. For the moment they may seem right, but chances are you've overlooked some essentials.

Vaginitis Easy To Spread About

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a male transfer vaginitis from an infected female to a noninfected female? If so is there a certain amount of time between sexual partners that would be considered "safe"? I have answers as soon as possible.—L.B. ....

Can't tell from your initials whether you are male or female. In any case in such a hurry, the quick answer is no, there's no "safe" interval between partners.

And now to explain why not.

Vaginitis is an infection term which can mean any sort of infection or inflammation of the vagina. That includes several diseases. The several diseases differ in their potentials for spread through sexual contact; there are other forms of vaginitis which can be acquired without sexual contact. Or many of the transmitted either with or without it.

The most common vaginitis that is not usually considered V.D. is trichomonas, an infection from a micro-organism known as a protozoon. Although this causes a discharge and irritation in the female, the male can carry the same infection yet have no symptoms—he usually uses what he has it.

A wife may, for example, be treated and have the trichomonas entirely cured. But if her husband (or other sexual partner) undertreated for his infection, he will promptly give it back to her. Or to some other sexual partner.

That, in fact, is a continuing problem among doctors treating trichomonas. Too often the husband insists that there's nothing wrong with him and he refuses to be treated when the wife is being cured.

But there is no "safe" waiting time between partners. He will continue to have the infection and be able to transmit it. (Remember, though, that trichomonas can be acquired other than by sexual contact.)

The opposite situation, we are learning, can be true of gonorrhea. The male usually (although not always) will develop a discharge in about three to five days after catching gonorrhea, and knows he needs to be treated. Unfortunately, many (but not all, of course) females aren't "safe" in this manner as far as transmitting

Houdini Hoodwinks 'Em Again 100 Years After His Birth

NEW YORK (CP) — On July 6, 1914, Harry Houdini stood on the stage of a Manhattan theatre and announced that he would walk through a solid brick wall.

He then proceeded to do just that. Or so it appeared.

A huge carpet was spread over the stage to dispel suspicion of trap doors and was covered by a sheet of seamless muslin. A team of bricklayers built a wall of bricks and mortar, eight feet high and 10 feet long, on a steel beam.

People were called from the audience to stand on the edges of the carpet and encircle the wall to guard against Houdini slipping around one end. The top of the wall could be seen by all.

Small folding screens were placed on each side of the wall and the magician stepped behind one, raised his hand above the screen, and called, "I'm going . . . going . . . I'm gone!"

A drum roll from the orchestra and an instant later, from the other side, Houdini called, "Here I am," and stepped out from behind the second screen.

Out of that performance grew the legend of the man who could walk through walls, emerge after being buried in a coffin and escape from prisons, packing cases thrown deep into rivers, straitjackets and any kind of fetter known to man.

Along with the legend grew a conviction that the short, intense magician with the sharp piercing eyes possessed an all-encompassing secret which enabled him to perform his miracles. Houdini did little to dispel the notion.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the British author who had become interested in spiritualism, expressed his belief that Houdini had solved the secret of "dematerializing"— that is, dissolving his physical body and "rematerializing" later.

Houdini died on Halloween, 1926, and with his death there developed another myth, that on the 100th anniversary of his birth on April 6, 1974, his lawyer would open a small box containing his secrets and make them known to the world.

As 1974 approached, people began calling newspapers and skirp when the box would be opened. Even the Moscow bureau of New York Times received calls asking when The Times would publish Houdini's secrets.

April 6, 1974, came and went and no lawyer spoke. Houdini's lawyer, B. M. L. Ernst, died in 1933 and Milbourne Christopher, an authority on Houdini's life, says Ernst told him before he died that he never found any such box.

As Christopher put it: "A hundred years after his birth the great magician is still delighting and deceiving the public."

In fact, there was no box and no great secret.

Houdini was a great showman, a resourceful and talented magician, an expert on locks and a performer who never took chances, though he may have appeared to do so.

Many of his illusions were not simple principles. His feat of walking through a wall could be done by a six-year-old, given the knowledge. He was a master at the art of misdirection, making an audience think one thing was happening when actually something else was happening.

As an example, Houdini usually could get out of a locked safe on a stage within a minute or so. But that would make it look too easy.

To heighten drama, he would sit behind his screen for 10, 15 or 20 minutes calmly reading a book while the audience fidgeted with mounting anxiety that the magician might suffocate when the air is the safe gave out. Just at the right moment, gulping lungfuls of air, Houdini would stagger from behind his curtain.

One of his favorite stunts was to challenge the local carpenters' union to build a packing case from which he could not escape. The case usually was exhibited in the lobby for 24 hours before the performance.

During the night, Houdini's mechanics would pull out the big (enquiry nails holding one of the boards and substitute short, cut-off nails. Houdini then could easily shove out the key board and escape— behind a screen or curtain, of course. The original nails were replaced before the case was returned.

Once, in Russia, the magician was locked in a steel van used to transport prisoners to Siberia. The lock was located three feet below the only window and the key was at the van's destination—in Siberia.

Houdini, stripped, searched thoroughly and locked in the van, was in a tight spot. He had been so closely guarded his assistant had been unable to slip him the gimmicks he needed to free himself.

His wife Bess rushed to the barred window and kissed Houdini before she was led away by guards. Between their lips passed a tiny can-opener and a coil of clock-spring steel, notched like a saw. Houdini then cut his way out through the sheet zinc flooring of the van.

Houdini died as a result of a mishap in Montreal in late October, 1926, while performing at the Princess Theatre, on St. Catherine Street just east of Phillips Square.

Three students visited his dressing room. One, an amateur boxer, mentioned Houdini's ability to tense his abdominal muscles and withstand a blow. He asked if he could try a punch and Houdini, reading mail on a couch and only half-listening, agreed. The student struck Houdini's midsection, catching him unawares.

In great pain, Houdini completed his Montreal performances and went on to Detroit. Critically ill and with a temperature of 104, he insisted on performing but collapsed on stage.

Surgeons found a ruptured appendix and peritonitis was far advanced.

Houdini lingered six more days, then, on Halloween, whispered to his brother, Hardeen the magician: "I'm tired of fighting." He closed his eyes, and the legend of Houdini took hold.

He was buried at Cypress Hills, N.Y., in the big bronze coffin he had used for his burial escape.

Houdini Climbs from Coffin

World-famed magician Harry Houdini emerges from a galvanized coffin in which he lay submerged for an hour and a half in the Hotel Shelton swimming pool in New York during the 1920's. Right to Sunshine Concerns Japanese

TOKYO (AP) — Every morning for three years, Mrs. Yoshi Uchida has had to turn on the lights in her home.

It is daylight and the sun may even be shining but it makes no difference.

"I don't see the daylight any more," said Mrs. Uchida.

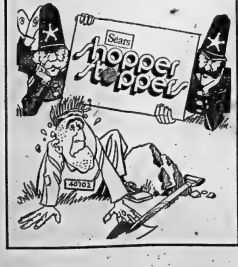
A 10-storey apartment house was built three feet from her front door. The shadow never leaves the three-room home where Mrs. Uchida has lived for 23 of her 61 years.

Mrs. Uchida is one of thousands of residents of Tokyo who have been affected by construction projects. The situation has brought about an issue that is known here as the "right of sunshine."

The problem began when Japan's economic surge, combined with a scarcity of land, resulted in a change in traditional Japanese residential construction style. Apartment buildings began to go up. The Japanese call them "mansions," referring to any apartment house taller than six storeys.

The Tokyo city government now has a sunshine counselling section. Looking back to the start of the boom in 1963, Shinosuke Nakazawa, deputy chief of the department, said:

"At that time the whole nation regarded such tall apartment houses as one of the protects of money-making 'endeavors. Now the picture is different."



Government statistics show it costs at least 10 million yen—about $36,000—to buy and live in a mansion apartment consisting of a kitchen, dining room, Western-style bathroom, bedroom and living room. Part of the right of the sunshine problem, Nakazawa said, is because some people who cannot afford such apartments rent those who can.

Complaints reaching his office from those who live in the shadow of tall buildings increased from 179 in 1969 to more than 3,000 during the last 12 months, he said.

Some lawsuits have been brought and in 1967 the Tokyo district court ruled that compensation could be ordered for persons affected by "life in the shadow." Amounts paid in such cases have ranged from about $79 to $385,000.

Ulster Crisis Deepens

Strike Upsets Moderates' Rule

BELFAST (CP) — Northern Ireland's fledgling executive of moderate Protestants and Roman Catholics announced its resignation today. It was a clear victory for Protestant militants leading a general strike that began two weeks ago.

The militants had demanded the end of power-sharing with Roman Catholics and the scrapping of an agreement for closer relations with the largely-Roman Catholic Irish republic to the south, fearing it would lead to reunification.

Sources told the Associated Press Brian Faulkner and his Unionist followers united to initiate talks with the strikers.

Merlyn Rees, the British secretary of state for Northern Ireland, stood on the position of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's government that there must be no such talks.

Faulkner then proposed there be talks through intermediary. No sources said. Again Rees objected.

Faulkner and the other Protestants then quit.

A statement issued from Rees's office said he "today received and accepted the resignation of Mr. Brian Faulkner, the chief executive member, together with those of the Unionist members of the Northern Ireland administration."

The statement said arrangements will be made for continued administration and that Rees "remains responsible the preservation of law and order."

Northern Ireland's civil turmoil, in which more than 1,000 have died, erupted five years ago. In March, 1972, London began direct rule in a bid to find a solution.

That period of direct rule ended just six months ago when the executive led by Brian Faulkner was set up. It gave Northern Ireland its first Protestant Roman Catholic power-sharing administration in 50 years.

But Protestant and Roman Catholic militants never accepted the administration.

Angry strike leaders ordered all Protestant workers except those in hospitals to walk off their jobs at midnight, and it appeared most were obeying their stop-work call.

"Let the army bury the dead," said Glen Barr of the Ulster Workers' Council, which is co-ordinating the strike. "We'll eat grass before we're beaten."

Manual workers abandoned their jobs as the only remaining power station in operation at midnight. The electricity supply, already at 25 per cent of normal, was being tapered off and a total blackout was expected within 24 hours unless British soldiers can keep the plants operating.

Armed forces technicians, including turbine operators from Britain's nuclear submarines, were expected to take over control of the power stations. But the army would not confirm that they had done so this morning.

The council ordered the shutdown of essential services Monday after 500 troops took control of two Ulster oil depots and 21 gasoline stations.

The new walkouts left the British government with the prospect of directing its more than 18,500 troops in Northern Ireland to maintain electricity, gas, water and sewage services and provide Ulster's 1.5 million inhabitants with milk, bread and food.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson interrupted a Scilly Isles holiday to fly back to London today amid speculation he will recall Parliament from recess to discuss the Ulster crisis.

Wilson has called the strike the gravest crisis in Northern Ireland since sectarian war erupted almost five years ago. More than 1,000 persons have died in the fighting.

At the heart of the dispute is the demand by Protestant extremists for new elections and the scrapping of British plans to link Northern Ireland closer to the Roman Catholic-dominated Irish republic to the south.

Strike leaders fear the British plan will lead to a united Ireland dominated by Catholics. They believe new elections would dump Ulster's coalition government of moderate Protestants and Catholics and return Northern Ireland to total Protestant control.

In the streets of Belfast, hundreds of men, women and children from Protestant strongholds formed human barricades to block roads in defiance of troops. The army smashed through barricades of commandeered automobiles and dragged away a dozen schoolboys in knickers trying to block a convoy.

Many feared that using troops to break the strike would lead to violence between strikers and soldiers, but no fighting was reported Monday and the workers council pledged that its resistance will remain passive.

Harsh effects of the escalation already are being felt by residents.

A walkout by natural-gas workers Monday left 100,000 Belfast-area consumers without heat and electricity.

Montreal-based virtually no chance of finding gasoline. 25 troops were pumping gas only for authorized users.

Israel Delays Truce Decision

JERUSALEM (CP) — The Israeli cabinet met for five hours today but postponed a final decision on a separation-of-forces agreement with Syria.

It wants clarifications from Damascus and U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger, Information Minister Shimon Peres told reporters.

But he said: "Today is the day of decision."

Peres said that the cabinet today did not discuss a single item or a single issue, but rather summed up the whole agreement—"its political bearing, its geographic arrangements and all the different military details."

"Some matters should be clarified during the day and I believe tonight the cabinet will meet again to conclude a final yes or no," Peres said.

"But really now we are dealing with the over-all picture as a package deal," he said.

"More clarifications are necessary to sum up the agreement correctly."

Earlier today, Kissinger held a two-hour conference with the Israeli negotiating team. He reported on Monday's marathon talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

"We had a very detailed meeting, the result of which is that the cabinet will meet to make a decision," Foreign Minister Abba Eban said after the earlier meeting.

Reports from sources close to the negotiations indicated it will be a difficult decision for the Israelis, and that Kissinger stands a strong chance of ending his peace marathon without a disengagement pact.

U.S. officials said draft agreements are already drawn up, but there are blank spaces where issues remain to be resolved.

The major remaining problems are reported to be the size of a buffer zone between the separated armies and the Israeli-sought assurances against Palestinian terrorist raids from Syria.

Suspense mounted as Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko flew into the Syrian capital for a planned two-day visit shortly before Kissinger's departure Monday. They did not meet.

A-blast Defended By Gandhi

NEW YORK (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi says in her first interview since India's atomic blast that "we are not a nuclear-weapons country" and complained that India is "a favorite and convenient whipping boy."

In the interview, published in the current issue of Newsweek magazine, Mrs. Gandhi insisted "our neighbors need have no fear.

"We view the explosion as an extension of our work of research and keeping abreast of developments in science and technology.

"There is a difference between the nuclear country and a nuclear-weapons country; we are not a nuclear-weapons country; we don't have any bombs. We don't intend to use this knowledge or this power for any other than peaceful purposes."

Mrs. Gandhi said the nuclear blast required "no new budgetary provision . . . and there was no dependence on any other country."

The prime minister complained that her country often is viewed in the wrong light.

"At one moment, we are described as a soft state and a blabby democracy. But simultaneously we are accused of being ruthless and tough, cynical and power-hungry. Both images can't be true.

"Our real achievements usually go unnoticed.

"Hardly anybody drew attention to the effort we had to make last year in order to feed 20 million people. In spite of a very critical situation, we were able to avoid starvation deaths."

The government admits that there are tens of thousands of deaths every year from malnutrition but says these cannot be attributed to starvation.

Kissinger Plans One More Trip

JERUSALEM (CP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger announced he will make one more trip to Damascus today in a final effort to get a Syrian-Israeli troop disengagement agreement.

Kissinger told correspondents of his decision after spending more than two hours with Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, Foreign Minister Abba Eban and Defence Minister Moshe Dayan on the results of a five-hour Israeli cabinet meeting on the issue.

"I just thought that, having carried every previous Israeli clarification and view to Damascus, I should do the final lap myself," he said. "I owe it to everything that both sides have put into it to make the effort personally."

He said he intends to be back in Jerusalem tonight. He refused all speculation on the changes on pulling off the agreement.

Bomb Kills Nine Foes Of Fascism

BRESCIA, Italy (CP) — A bomb exploded at an anti-Fascist rally today, killing nine persons and wounding 50, officials said.

The device, apparently a time bomb, went off among several thousand persons packing a central city square.

The rally, organized by an anti-Fascist movement, coincided with a four-hour strike called by local trade unions.

Mayor Piero Boni, who was standing on the speakers' platform at the time, said: "I heard a terrible roar at the bottom of the square but I was not see clearly what was happening."

Interior Minister Emilio Taviani sent Police Chief Zanda Loy to Brescia to head the investigation.

President Giovanni Leone called the incident a "massacre" and said it was "clear evidence of an attempt by tiny and squalid terrorist minorities to throw the state and the nation into chaos." He urged the government of Premier Mariano Rumor to pursue those responsible "with the utmost energy."

Supreme Court Requests Response

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court said today it has invited President Nixon's lawyer to respond to special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski's request for prompt review of a district court order that Nixon surrender 64 subpoenaed tapes relating to the Watergate political espionage case.

The court said presidential lawyer James St. Clair promised to file a response by Thursday.

Jaworski asked the Supreme Court Monday to take jurisdiction in the case after St. Clair asked the U.S. Court of Appeals here to overturn an order of U.S. District Judge John Sirica that Nixon surrender the tapes to the special prosecutor.

If the Supreme Court accepts the case, it will bypass the appeals court.

Sidney Building Setting Records

Construction starts in Sidney township are up from this time last year.

Figures released by township inspector George Caves reveal 307 building permits have been issued as of the end of April — 47 per cent of the 1973 total of 660.

Of these, 91 were given okay in March. Estimated value of March permits is $2,629,000 — up from last year's high in May of 56 permits estimated at $1,066,925.

In April, 60 permits were issued again topping last year's mark. Estimated value was $1,858,000 for which the township collected $2,116 in fees.

Last month's high total can be attributed in part to the issuance of permits for three new commercial developments in the township.

Western Realty Developments has taken out a $380,000 permit for construction of a shopping mall at the outskirts of the town at Trenton. The $2.5 million proposed mall, held up by lack of several governmental approvals, is to be built on both Sidney and Trenton land.

At Loyalist-Wallbridge Rd. and Highway 401, a Belleville Trucking Centre and Loyalist Leasing garage, formerly Truck and Farm Supply Ltd., is already nearing completion. Estimated value of the new building is $150,000.

Mor-Co Carriers Ltd. is putting up a $110,000 garage in approximately the same location.

In April, 41 permits were issued for single family dwellings. As well, Bata Industries has been granted "demolition permits for five houses in the company's Bata Shoe area lands.

March proved to be a bumper month for home construction. The majority of permits were issued for homes in the Montrose Rd. area (Lot 25, concession one and broken front).

Of 77 residences okayed, 51 are in the vicinity of Montrose Rd.

Most are being built by Peterborough Lumber — 16 homes ranging in price from $21,700 to $25,000. Contractor George Sinason follows with 11 houses and constructeles in a $27-42,000 price range. R. M. Swan Construction is building 10 homes in a $36-40,000 range.

So far this year, construction in Sidney township has topped a $5,770,000 dollar line as opposed to $7,912,300 in 1973.

Eastern Ontario supervisor of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Tony Ward came in from Toronto for the occasion.

CAS Boarding Rates Reflect Local Situation

Boarding home rates now paid foster parents of children in the care of the Children's Aid Society will not rise to the level of those paid in some metropolitan areas.

Paul Siemans, child welfare supervisor with the children's service branch of the Ontario government, told society directors their rates should be related to the needs and costs of their area. One society might pay more than another because of the shortage of homes for children in a specific age group.

Mr. Siemans was questioned by directors at their monthly meeting, May 22, in Belleville.

The rates paid since November asked for a 25 per cent increase in foster boarding rates and were granted a 50-cent-a-day increase. Rates are now $2.50 to $3.25 a child a day, depending upon age plus up to $1.25 extra for children with special needs. They are comparable with rates paid by other eastern Ontario societies. Group home operators currently receive from $4.50 to $6 a day. The ministry of community and social services approved payment of high boarding rates by societies in Hamilton-Wentworth on the understanding they would be reviewed in a three-year study.

The study will determine whether or not increased foster home payments will improve the quality of foster parenting and will recruit more families who wish to make foster parenting a career.

Directors were concerned by the increasing number of teenagers coming into the society's care. They were told by Mr. Siemans that many are referred by parents as an alternative to placement in 'a training school.

Commitments to Ontario training schools decreased by 50 per cent last year. But the number committed to the society's Child-in-Need facilities increased by 23 per cent.

In the year ending April, 1973, nine such children were referred to the Hastings county CAS by the courts. By the end of April 1974, 13 had been referred as unmanageable.

The care of these children, many behavior -disordered, has added a new dimension to the society's work, directors learned. In 1973, the CAS paid foster parents a total of more than $2,000 on claims for damage to real and personal property. The society has no policy on liability to it. A committee headed by Alderman Joe Cox is reviewing the society's liability insurance program.

The report of Alderman Roger Porter, treasurer, showed that the society was operating just under its budget estimates to the end of April.

Directors decided that the executive general group will, in the future, operate under the by-laws governing the "foster parents' relations committee of the board, set up for liaison between the Foster Parents' Association and the board, will expand its activities to include natural parents.

The committee, headed by board member Nan Morgan, will meet with parents in June to decide the nature, extent and scope of activities they prefer. Margaret Baile, senior case worker with the adoption department, will act as a resource person for the committee.

George Thompson, chairman of the by-law committee, reported on the public meeting held to consider oral and written submissions on bylaw revisions. He said only one submission was received.

It was presented, on behalf of a newly-formed committee, by Lyle Sutherland, principal of Sir Mackenzie Bowell School in Belleville. Gail Cryer, a member of the CAS staff and Richard Sarette, formerly a group home operator for the society, Mr. Thompson said a draft of the amended by-laws is now in the hands of the society's solicitor.

The Board appointed Larry MacDonald to fill the vacant post of supervisor of child care services. He was formerly employed at Children's Aid Society in Vancouver, a treatment centre for emotionally disturbed children.

A graduate of St. Patrick's College, Ottawa, with a degree in psychology, Mr. MacDonald received his master of social work degree from the University of British Columbia. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamel MacDonald of Belleville and received his education in Belleville.

The board will be host May 28 for a buffet supper for the staff at Tabernacle United Church, Belleville. Staff members, headed by Alan Upton, will present a skit about a working day in the society and director Mavis Weaver of Trenton will give an outline of board members' responsibilities.

Foxboro Public School Still on Drawing Board

The school, designed to relieve overcrowding at Harmony School in Thurlow, is still on the drawing board and trustees with Hastings county board of education have accused the ministry of education of stalling on the project in an attempt to stop construction.

The board a month ago decided to opt for a masonry exterior instead of the fabricated steel suggested by architects as a cost saving. But no firm tendered on the masonry contract, the board learned at its meeting Monday night at S. H. Connor School in Tweed.

Tenders for the electrical and concrete work on the school came in over the estimated price, trustees learned. If tenders for the mechanical work, masonry and site work come in over estimates, the board will have to go back to the ministry for further approvals. So far, the ministry has not indicated whether or not it will make allowances for the inflationary spiral in construction costs that has upped prices by at least 10 per cent since estimates were submitted.

Trustees will meet with ministry officials Friday to "ask how to proceed".

Trustee Donald Williams, former board chairman, said all trustees are agreed on the need for the school, but he is "sick" of the ministry's attitude.

The ministry approved a cost of $864,000 for the school.

Sidney Sells 45-acre Tract

Sidney council has sold a 45-acre parcel of township land, northeast of Trenton, to an investment company that plans an unknown industrial development on the site. Money, councillors are told, is the $50,000 purchase fee okay by bylaw.

Details of the development are sketchy.

Reeve Gordon Wilman said today the township-owned land was sold as an industrial site.

Reeve Wilman said, "Nothing was said about what was going to be built on it."

The entire 45-acre tract was bought by the township in 1970 for industrial use.

The property is roughly bounded by the Canadian National railway line to the south, Trenton's Sidney St. on the west, the 401 cloverleaf boundary and the highway itself on the northwest and north.

At present, pasture land borders on the eastern portion of the township-owned land.

In December 1973, a Toronto developer, Stanley Gremiuk took out a $63,000 offer of purchase on the property. At the time, Mr. Gremiuk said the land would be slated for commercial use, but would reveal no details.

Mr. Gremiuk appeared before council on behalf of the investment company last night. Councillors said today the Toronto developer did not reveal what city the investment company considers home base. The name of the company was unavailable.

Both Reeve Wilman and deputy-reeve Glenn Meyers do not know what will be built on the site.

Reeve Wilman said, "I understand Mr. Gremiuk was talking to the treasurer (Robert Vandervoort) and he said he might be bringing a plan to council in a couple of months."

The reeve is still unclear over the details, but said he expects some contact with Mr. Gremiuk this week.

Resident Protests Stanley Park Use

Leo N. Fortin, 28 Edgehill Road, has voiced concern to city council about the motorcycles and mini-bikes that are being allowed to use Stanley Park in the city's east end.

Also, Mr. Fortin has fears as to the results that may arise from broken bottles on pathways and grass near wooded areas of the park. They broken bottles were said to be the aftermath of parties held in the woods.

A third concern of Mr. Fortin is the potential tragic results from the use of Stanley Park as a shooting and hunting ground by youths with pellet guns and .22 rifles, previously to council about.

Mr. Fortin had objected the use of motor bikes in the park and the matter was referred to City Police Chief Douglas Crowder.

Chief Crosbie reported that the parks board had two choices in dealing with motorized vehicles or to fence specific areas for their use.

Mayor Garnet Jeffrey noted that prohibition of all motorized vehicles from the park would include snowmobiles which are allowed use of the park.

Bell Blvd. Extended

Bell Blvd. in the city's north end has gained some additional yardage.

City council Monay approved a Subordinate Planning Advisory Committee recommendation for Hanna Street west of Sidney to be named Bell Blvd. and for a proposed new street running north from Hanna Street to be named Hanna Road.

Renamed Hanna Street and the proposed new street, all west of Sidney Street, serve the city's northwest industrial area.

$30,000 Still Needed

Start Soon On New Wellington Arena

By MARGARET BAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Construction of the Wellington and District Community Centre will begin next week, to replace the village arena destroyed by fire last December.

A press dinner Monday — at which construction details were outlined — was told the arena management board still must raise approximately $30,000 before the project.

Dudley Boyle of Wellington, board chairman, said that the tender of $294,175 submitted by Weiger De Jong, Stirling, has been accepted.

Prince Edward County council has granted $154,000 toward the arena through the participating municipalities of Bloomfield, Hillier, Hallowell and Wellington. This, in turn, qualifies the project for a further estimated $73,000 in provincial grants if the applications of all municipalities are approved.

Mr. Boyle said that the fire insurance covering the old arena totalled $43,000.

Wellington reeve Robert Boyce said that application has been made to the Ontario government for arena and community centres grants. These would pay 25 per cent of a capital expenditure, or a maximum of $20,000 for the two grants combined for any one project in a single municipality.

Board members noted that the cost of the arena, after subtracting county council's grant, and the amount received for fire insurance, is $77,373. Donations to date total $21,894. This leaves a balance of $15,979.

Mr. Boyle said that approximately $30,000 must be raised in additional donations to cover costs of engineering, fixtures and furnishings.

Mr. Boyle expressed the board's appreciation to the municipal councils involved. He was "especially pleased" by county council's decision to grant $154,000 to the project.

"It's gratifying to know that they realize the importance of two areas in the county," he commented Mr. Boyle.

"I'd like the residents of the area served by the Wellington District Community Centre to realize we still have a long way to go," he added, referring to the $30,000 still to be raised.

Mr. Boyle said he is confident there will be public response to this need in the near future.

Work Take 3

Prince Edward County warden Keith MacDonald said he would like to see senior governments agree to make it simpler for small communities to obtain grants.

He said government is stressing physical fitness and mentioned hockey as Canada's national sport.

Wellington reeve Robert Boyce said wilmot De district, the arena would not have been feasible. County council support also was an important factor in the project.

With them we have made a reality of this arena," he said.

Reeve Lewis Wight of Hillier said that a large number of youngsters from his township participate in arena activities.

"The community has been well-served by the arena for a number of years," he concluded.

4 Injured In Crash

SOPHIASBURGH — Four Prince Edward county youths were injured Monday afternoon in a one-car collision on Sophiasburgh Road near Happy Hours School.

Treated for cuts and bruises at Picton Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital were driver of the car James Norton, RR4, Picton and passengers Douglas DeMille, 18, Barbara Bryden, 17, and Mary Lou Trumble, 14, all of Picton.

The accident occurred when the car struck a culvert. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $1,000.

Party Time

TRENTON — Town council Monday night authorized temporary closing of two municipal roadways to be used for neighborhood parties.

The two streets are McGill and Prospect Hill.

Building Permit Awarded Trenton Condominium Plan

TRENTON — A Belleville home builder Monday night succeeded in convincing Trenton Town Council to award a building permit for a condominium complex on Barber Street.

But construction cannot begin until town councilors have had ample time to "go over the nuts and bolts of the town's newly - created condominium bylaw.

Belleville Lawyer George Murray, representing Rollins Construction told council that unless a building permit was issued extremely soon, financial arrangements for the 23 units would fall through.

The Canadian Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation's Assisted Ownership Assistance Program is making money available at 8.5 per cent to a maximum of 95 per cent of the $29,000 purchase price. The CMHC program is being scrapped and said Mr. Murray, in 10 days all chances will be lost to take advantage of now available funds.

"We're under the gun," said Mr. Murray.

He said the situation "was urgent to the point of mortgaging being cancelled within the week."

Mayor Robert Patrick said he was not aware the builder was in such a hurry, explaining council's lengthy handling of the project.

Mr. Murray said a letter explaining the situation was sent to the town's commissioner of works about three weeks ago.

Councillor John Bonn said he had never seen such a letter. He suggested the permit be issued immediately, allowing the contractor to qualify for CMHC assistance and that construction be stalled until council was happy with a bylaw that eventually will govern construction standards.

Councillor Bob Wannamaker, resident of the Barber Street area, spoke against the suggestion. He said he had 50 complaints from area home owners.

"They might be in favor of the complex if it met their high standards." he said.

All other councillors present agreed with the suggestion and formal passage is expected next Monday.

Meanwhile, the Quinte Planning Board has reviewed the bylaw governing the building of condominium development in the town, and according to the mayor, the board made only "minor technical word changes".

Mr. Murray said he and builder Maurice Rollins would be willing to provide some input into the bylaw, drawing on their collective experience in condominium dealings.

Council took advantage of the offer and asked to see copies of condominium agreements the contractor in other municipalities.

Centre To Open Late '74

PICTON — Target date for the opening of the new Wellington and District Community Centre will be late 1974, says the arena's board of management.

A meeting Monday night to outline budget and plans will told the new building will be concrete blocks. There will be a precast concrete roof and floor. The arena will be reconstructed on the site of the former centre and the existing ice surface will be used along with ice-making equipment from the original arena.

Ice surface of the new arena will measure 80 feet by 180 feet and the building will feature five rows of seats on one side. It will seat approximately 600.

The arena will feature an upstairs hall 30 feet by 120 feet with a current capacity of up to 500 persons.

Mill Rate Almost Same

TWEED — Mill rate for this village remains virtually the same despite increases in costs of running the municipality this year.

Police and public work costs moved up in the budget recently approved by village council and the amount of money needed for village operations has increased by $25,000. The increase needed to meet the higher operating costs was nearly 13 mills.

But the overall mill rates with last year's figures in brackets — were: Residential, 151.8 (151.8); commercial, 166.4 (165.8).

Provincial government tax assistance grants were among major factors permitting an almost unchanged mill rate. Cost of debentures also dropped to five mills from 10 mills.

No Change Yet

TORONTO (CP) — Any changes in the law affecting those eligible to vote in Ontario municipal elections will not come into effect for at least two years, Donald Irvine, minister without portfolio, said Monday.

Last week he introduced an amendment to the Municipal Elections Act proposing to restrict voting to Canadian citizens.

He said in an interview that the province would wait to phase in any changes affecting voter eligibility and would favor notice of at least two years.

The federal government announced in 1972 that only Canadian citizens will be allowed to vote in federal elections after 1975.

Debate on the amendments to the Municipal Elections Act probably will resume later this week in the legislature.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

A Memorial in Words

Picton's former mayor and community benefactor, the late Harvey J. McFarland, is remembered in a memorial tribute presented the town's library. It's a seven-volume history of the Salvation Army. It was bought by local Army members and presented Monday by Capt. George Prior to Mrs. Bessie Ward, town council appointee to the Picton library board.

Highway 33 Relocation Project Ready for Work Tenders in June

TRENTON — Tenders will be issued in mid June for work on the Highway 33 relocation project it was announced at Monday night's committee-of-the whole session of town council.

Arie Hoornweg, Commissioner of Works, told council that paper work was proceeding on the scheme that eventually will bring Highway 401 traffic more directly into Trenton's downtown core.

Front Street residents — affected by the project — will be contacted within the n ext week for permission to switch home services to underground installations. At present the handful of homes are serviced by overhead wiring, considered an eyesore that detracts from the view of the Trent River.

Mr. Hoornweg said Water Street property acquisition was continuing. Once completed it will be the basis for the new route.

Apparently, one Front Street home owner is entering into an agreement with the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority after snags appeared in his settlement.

Mr. Hoornweg said once the necessary six feet of property was acquired, it was determined the plot line would run through the family's home.

The conservation authority will re-locate the family.

Pensioner Is Staging A New Kind of Ripoff

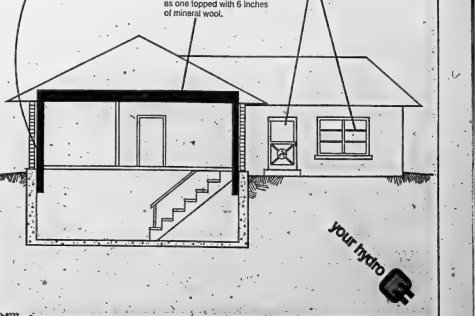
TORONTO (CP) — A 69-year-old pensioner who has devoted his retirement years to a one-man campaign against election posters has reported some success.

Stanley Carter, who began his anti-poster drive 3½ years ago, said he tore down 570 election signs during the 1971 provincial election—300 belonging to the New Democratic Party, 250 to the Liberals and 20 to the Progressive Conservatives.

Margaret Scrivener, the Tory candidate, won the election in Toronto St. David, proving that election signs are useless, Mr. Carter said.

"Those signs are futile," he said. "She had the least and she won."

He said he removed the signs because they violated a city bylaw.



On the July 8 federal election, Mr. Carter said he is changing his tactics—perhaps because it is illegal under the federal Election Act to remove signs.

He said he intends to have about 1,000 small signs printed to place on top of the election poster. The signs will say: "This candidate is irresponsible; don't vote for him."

How to save energy and cut your fuel costs.

Regardless of the heating system or type of fuel involved, good insulation is the key to improved home comfort with lower fuel consumption. In any building, heat escapes through ceilings and walls. Insulation reduces that loss considerably.

If you're planning to build a new home—or modernize an existing one—make proper insulation a must. The Ontario Electrical League requirements provide your best guide, and your Hydro will be pleased to give you any information you need on the subject.

Brave New World

The difference between right and wrong, between sun things as good and bad grooming, between acceptable behavior and boorishness, between what once was considered normal and what simply has come to be accepted, is pretty blurred.

You can be a well-dressed executive or a hippie these days and have something in common, say as a smoker of pot — so much has the revolution of what is viewed as the sub-culture of the young spilled over into society. It's been a revolution of manners and of customs and it is still evolving.

But if this blurring of cultures has brought some surprises, in this merging of habits and class boundaries, the word is that those who would rather be caught dead than with a joint in their hand, or slobbying their MPs for legalization, still keep up the old appearances. That is, those whom you would expect to be in any way drug-oriented keep up the old square front.

Not so the young men and their girl friends who showed up in Ottawa the other day to call for legalization of marijuana. They had walked from Toronto and the young blobds looked splendidly, or revoltingly (according to how you view the hippie phenomenon) hirsute. There were the pre-Raphaelites, one of whom was pictured lighting a hand-rolled cigaret from the centennial flame, and the two girls in white sweatshirts and jeans; but the latter could have been — either one of them — the girl next door.

However, all seemed to be of that new breed which has nothing to hide; and to come to the seat of Parliament and say "look man — what's wrong with a little grass"? was as natural to them as it would be for them to go and cool their weary feet in the nearest fountain.

It is this kind of world today — and it is here to stay — for a while at least.

The Fashion Scene

Some people wear clothes these days. A great many others, especially among the young set, wear jeans . . . denim and all that.

Says Stasia Evasuk in a Toronto Star fashion supplement: "Only yesterday denim jeans were sold for work . . . and the craze shows no sign of letting up in popularity."

She quotes a chain store man as saying, "they will be around a long time as people get more leisure hours."

But on another page of the same supplement we read this: "Today's teenage girls are crazy about clothes but never exactly what they want when they go shopping.

"They dislike wearing the same looks as their peers so seek individuality in their clothes . . ."

How then do we account for all those jeans which place the younger set here in much the same depressing groove fashion-wise as the Chinese in their uniform jackets and pants.

Again, we are told the girls are wearing the bright make-up of the 40s and 50s.

But then they are speaking of Toronto. Elsewhere the faces are pretty much the norm, striding along in those faded, creased and woebegone jeans.

Where is the individuality? Or the derring-do where makeup is concerned?

On The Line

An interesting observation by singer Mary Travers (formerly of Peter, Paul and Mary), on the subject of young people (she has four children of her own) and drugs. She said: "There is only one thing to do. I say no. Simply no. There is no maybe. There cannot be a maybe in an adolescent's life."

Familiar Faces

Notice how Hollywood and other international stars, who have done well for themselves in the past, are taking to the advertising game on television. There is Fred McMurray for one extolling the joys of bus travel. And George Montgomery rubbing a nice shine into the furniture. Not a few, others too, including David Niven and Henry Fonda, are less a luminary than Laurence Olivier who drums up business for a camera manufacturer. We prefer to see them on stage and screen, but at least these advertising episodes remind us that a lot of old favorites are still going strong.

Purchase Of Business Franchise Requires Preparation

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Your voting franchise, and the exercise of it on July 8, is commanding much attention currently.

But the other kind of franchise—the type that you buy in order to launch a small business with an established name—deserves much more attention than it is often given.

If you buy a commercial franchise, you are buying the right to operate a business. At the same time, you are sacrificing some of the independence that a small business operator usually enjoys, because you must undertake to market a product or service in accordance with the system set by the franchising company.

Like much companies, franchising is an ideal way of extending the sales area with no outlay of capital. In many cases, of course, each sale of a franchise brings more capital into the franchising company.

As the prospective supplier of that capital—and of the managerial time and trouble required to operate the business—the person who buys a franchise should carry out a thorough investigation before making a commitment.

If you are considering the purchase of a franchise in the hope of making a good income, your first step should be to obtain professional legal advice. That step should ensure that you are not rushed into a financial commitment that you do not fully understand.

Make inquiries about the franchising company through such bodies as the local Better Business Bureau of Chamber of Commerce, or the provincial consumer affairs department.

If the franchise company objects to your seeking such advice and making such inquiries, it probably is not entitled to your trust.

Determine whether the company has a record of successful operation, and how long its present management has been with the company.

Obviously, you will want to see at least one outlet that is already in operation, so that you can judge its viability, especially in terms of competition.

If none is already established, the product or service is said to be still under development, the risk to your investment would be much greater.

You can expect a reliable franchising company to offer you a number of services—a training program for yourself and your employees, if necessary, and reasonably priced advice on management, accounting and adsvertising.

It should ensure that you have a good location, protected from competition from other franchise holders.

Since dispute about territorial rights or lease questions are almost inevitable, check into the means provided for resolving such differences (some firms resolve them by cancelling the franchise).

Be especially careful to learn exactly how much money you must put up (including the hidden costs) and what you will get for your money. Compare the interest rate charged by the franchising company with that quoted by your bank.

There can be plenty of satisfaction in running your own business if you are of an independent nature—but keep your eyes open and don't commit every dollar you own to the business.

Oil Rights in Aegean Threaten Greek – Turkish Confrontation

By ROD CURRIE
The Canadian Press

The simmering dispute between Greece and Turkey over oil rights in the Aegean Sea, with threats that it may develop into an armed conflict, is causing deep concern within the Atlantic alliance.

An open clash between the two countries controlling the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's south-eastern flank would be a disaster, a catastrophe, in the view of many observers.

Diplomatic sources say that NATO authorities and United States officials have been involved, urging both sides to avoid a clash that would threaten the West's defence structure in that area.

The current heated about four months ago when Athens protested against a Turkish government decision to grant oil drilling rights near seven Greek islands, several located closer to the Turkish coast than to Greece.

Our hopeful sign in the conflict between the two countries already divided over the Cyprus issue is that they have agreed to a meeting between their foreign ministers in Ottawa June 20, following the NATO foreign ministers' conference there.

Some observers suggested that if the two countries agree to a proposal to resume negotiations in Cyprus on the future of that divided island, then the atmosphere might improve for fresh attempts to work out a compromise on the Aegean oil dispute.

Joseph Luns of the Netherlands, who as NATO secretary-general has a voice in Greek-Turkish relations dating back to the 1967 Cyprus crisis, has used his office to appeal to both countries to exercise restraint. Sources say that NATO ambassadors from the two countries sought to assure them the situation is not as critical as many commentators suggest.

Nevertheless, NATO experts are watching developments as the Turkish government goes ahead with plans to send an exploration vessel into disputed waters in the next few weeks to take soundings preliminary to oil exploration. Some Greek sources have warned that this challenge to Greece's preponderance in the Aegean, particularly between the two neighboring countries, might provoke a dangerous crisis.

Several incidents between fishing boats and naval patrol craft have created tension in the situation.

Meanwhile, Greece is moving swiftly toward rearming and modernizing its forces. This has led to Turkish assertions of alleged Greek war preparations and to Turkish demonstrations against the Greek consulate in Istanbul.

Recently, which first discovered the presence of extensive oil deposits in the Aegean, is negotiating with both Greece and the U.S. for arms.

What obstacles in the U.S. Congress may delay further American military aid for Greece, a deal with France worth the equivalent of about $175 million or more in planes, tanks and gunboats is reported to have been agreed in principle, delayed only by the recent French presidential elections.

French Right And Left Evens Out

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The scholars who maintain the hard dividing lines of the French political right and left have not been resolved since the French Revolution, will find little solace for their views from the French run-off presidential elections.

Never in French history have the political forces of right and left (broadly defined), been as evenly matched against each race.

Conservative candidate Valery Giscard d'Estaing won with a razor-thin margin of 50.8 per cent of the vote. The remaining 49.2 per cent went to Francois Mitterrand, candidate of the grabbag of the French left parties which includes everyone from his socialists to the new palace for their views from the French run-off presidential elections.

President-elect Giscard succeeds a five-year period of lackluster era of the so-called UDR (Union of Democrats for the Fifth Republic) (which maintained an un-French coalition of the right and left.

This has gone, not only because Giscard is not a Gaullist, but because he French left unifying presidential power no longer enabled to maintain the union set up by the late president Charles de Gaulle.

Yet it is all too easy to oversimplify the French political system. The underlying fact of French political life since 1789, the inability of right and left to cooperate, has shifted with the shifting events in French history since Napoleon.

The arrival of the Industrial Revolution, the military upheavals of the Franco-Prussian and two world wars, the emergence of Marxism and the loss of the African empire, have all changed the roles of the right and the left in France.

Historically the right spoke for the more conservative and historic values of France as a large European nation state. The modern socialist and Communist parties cut their teeth fighting the nineteenth-century exploitation of the French working class in the large cities of France and in the coal and industrial provinces also ravaged by the invading German armies in 1914 and 1940.

However Gaullist Giscard is no stick-in-the-mud conservative. He is a modern and progressive who is also a technocrat, who has already promised to set a good deal of French air penetrate the truly reactionary structures of the French political system.

In contemporary contexts, Giscard is probably the most resilient man to have in the next president relative to the pressing crises of the European Common Market, as well as the mounting domestic ones. A socialist president owing election debts to the Communists, might be compelled to raise unnecessary bail in he councils of Europe, and thereby undermine European and British multinational corporations and not by national governments.

Nevertheless Giscard must cope with domestic social problems, principally a socialist-communist opposition will complicate chronically bad housing, low industrial workers' salaries, the incipient rash of racism of French colonial youth.

And then there are the Gaullists who will control the Chamber of Deputies, all pow rful through the Fifth Republic and will be used during part of the previous Fourth.

They will want to maintain some of the very costly trappings of Gaullism, the most expensive being the force de frappe. France's independent nuclear strike force which is not only totally outside of NATO but which the French can no longer afford.

Price Of Oil Brings Furore

By DON O'BEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The government is more disturbed about the price situation than it would be let known.

The opposition parties have been hammering away at it, demanding that in view of the big boom in prices it should either reduce tapes or order prices rolled back.

They have a potent argument in that Ontario is the only province that hasn't taken some action along these lines.

And though the government tries to dismiss the issue; it knows just how bad it looks.

It will average out at about $200 a family.

And the argument is put forward by its spokesmen that this will cover the increased cost of heating oil and probably a good share of the boost in gasoline also.

But the government knows that this really doesn't have much impact, for the only thing which will convince the public it is concerned and doing something about the oil prices is action which will lower the cost at the pumps.

Then the government case, of course, isn't helped by the mission in the premier's conference in Ottawa which set the wholesale price of oil at $6.50 a barrel.

Even if they had realized the difference it is doubtful if they would have been able to persuade the western premiers to agree to a well-head price.

But this doesn't stop opposition party spokesmen here from claiming this is costing Ontario $50 million a year and having it pointed that Premier Davis made a big boob.

Looking Backward

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

May 23, 1944

Prime Minister Churchill in a speech in the House of Commons a few days ago pointed out that the Atlantic Charter did not offer any guarantee against Germany suffering territorial changes at the close of the war, if they were deemed necessary for the peace of the world. He advocated a post-war peace organization armed with overwhelming military power. Japan and Germany were placed beyond hope of negotiation short of utter capitulation and unconditional surrender.

40 YEARS AGO

The significance of the 100th birthday of the Young Men's Christian Association will be recognized by church leaders throughout the world. At Saint Paul's Cathedral in London, the Archbishop of Canterbury will preach on a Sunday service commemorating the founding of the movement by George Williams at the age of his young friends in St. Paul's Churchyard a century ago. The service will be broadcast in Canada.

50 YEARS AGO

The Bay of Quinte Country Club was thronged all day yesterday with players, and the first sweepstake of the year found many entrants. Dr. Stobie and Major Harry Wallbridge tied at the end of the 18 holes and twice tied on the replay of the 9th hole to decide the winner. Dr. Stobie finally won.

Canada Has a Drinking Problem

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A working paper on health issues public by the federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde points up grim statistics on drinking habits of Canadians. Every drinking Canadian, the report says, consumes each year on an average 33 dozen pints of beer, 14 bottles of table wine and 13 quart-size bottles of spirits.

It represents an average of 2.6 gallons of absolute alcohol consumed each year by every member of the drinking population which is 80 percent of the total adult population age 15 or over. However, about 10 percent of the total drinking population purchases 40 per cent of all alcohol sold. That means each member of this group drinks 15 gallons a year.

But too many in both categories continue to combine driving with drinking. Despite the penalties that face those convicted of driving while under the influence of alcohol drinking is still one of the major causes of accidents and death on Ontario highways.

This point is stressed in the report, although it is a matter that comes under provincial jurisdiction. And yet is that while the penalties in Ontario give the appearance of a threat to the crime, they have obviously not served as a deterrent.

Convicted for the total breathalizer test or of impaired driving bring a fine usually $50 on first conviction, and suspension of driving privileges for a period of three months.

However, since these penalties do not sufficiently deter it is up to the province to provide penalties that will. There is something that could be done away with because while it hurts the driver, it too often also hurts his family. And for the man who can easily afford the fine it is no penalty at all.

What really hurts and embarrasses a lot of people is the suspension of driving privilege. Police are generally agreed that such is the case and if that's what it takes to make drinking drivers think twice the government should consider a longer period of suspension as punishment that really fits the crime.

United Church

Canada's youth is drowning in a flood of booze.

The Addiction Research Foundation — "the endless regurgitation of beer commercials featuring girls in bikinis in boat and balloon indicates how much a market the young have become".

Warns Gerald Le Dain, head of the commission on non-medical use of drugs — "alcohol is the worst curse affecting society today".

* * *

A nation-wide survey shows dramatic escalation in alcohol problems among youth since the legal drinking age was lowered from 21 to 18 — in April 1971.

Manitoba teenagers have become more hard and soft drugs to alcohol, and Nova Scotia reported only two persons under 20 treated for alcohol problems in provincial hospitals during 1970. Now 40 patients were admitted in 1971.

In Quebec juvenile crime is up into pubs and taverns and in Toronto drinking among high school students doubled since 1970 — while marijuana and hashish usage climbed 10 per cent and LSD dropped.

The public must find out the inter-relationships between drug use and crime and a full scale commission should be set up to determine if raising the drinking age back to 21, will cause kids to just sink deeper into drugs. Meanwhile, more seductive, youth-oriented beer and liquor ads should be banned from the media.

Prime Minister's Views On Ethics

Toronto Sun

Why on earth would the Prime Minister of Canada go to President Nixon's alma mater, Duke University in Durham, North Caroline, to deliver an unctious, somewhat pedantic sermon on ethical standards of leaders

Regardless of content, there is no other explanation than to presume he was referring to President Nixon: "Ethics are the fibres of civilized conduct. Interwoven with enlightened self-interest they are the fabric we call society. A rent in that fabric weakens the whole structure, no matter who does the tearing. The act is the more heinous, however, when done by one to whom society has granted special privileges and from whom society has the right to demand enlightened conduct."

Of course he is right. But holy cow, what an affront! Can you imagine the reaction in Canada if an American President, or any other world leader, came here to lecture in nonary degree and proceeded to lecture our PM on ethics and morality.

Look at the case of the fabled ge Gaulle's "vive Quebec libre" quip. Mr. Trudeau doesn't do that in other countries. In fact he is aided and abetted shouldn't be rude when one is a guest.

When he went to the USSR he managed to refrain from sermonizing about the Soviet suppression of political dissenters in prison camps; he merely deplores the "inhuman act" of preventing citizens from emigrating or ideas from entering.

In China he praised Mao and Chou disarmingly thanked. He was careful not to mention unmentionable subject such as Lyn Piao or Chou En Lai.

But okay to take a cheap shot at America.

'Oliver' Presentation Is Praised

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The remarkable achievement of the Belleville Theatre Guild, in its recent presentation of the musical "Oliver!" under the direction of Elizabeth Marshall deserves special commendation.

Speaking from a modest background in amateur dramatics and musical variety, I am well aware of the tremendous effort required to overcome the artistic and technical difficulties associated with a musical production requiriar, from a wide age spectrum, a cast of 45. The versatile simplicity of the stage set, designed by Harry Smith and pupils of Moira Secondary School, and the excellence of the musical accompaniment by Mrs. Ann Stevenson and Mr. Frank Martin, serves to further illustrate the fine cooperative effort of the local amateur talents.

Congratulations to all involved in this fine presentation, those behind the scenes as well as those who were in front. May this dedicated theatrical group continue to prosper and to richly deserve, the encouragement and financial assistance of this culturally fortunate community.

Prisoners To Be Paid For Work

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal cabinet has approved a plan to pay all working penitentiary inmates amounts up to the federal minimum wage of $2.20 an hour.

The newspaper quotes Solicitor-General Warren Allmand as saying the proposal went before a cabinet committee for discussion two days and then went to the full cabinet where it was approved except for "some details."

It quotes Mr. Allmand in an interview from Montreal as stressing that the plan will not cost the taxpayer any more than it now does to maintain a prisoner.

To ensure that prisoners have enough work to do, Mr. Allmand and Secretary of State Jean-Pierre Goyer have arranged to give an increasing amount of government business—up to $25 million annually within 10 years—to the prisons, which now house 9,200 convicts, the newspaper says.

It further quotes Mr. Allmand as saying the program is meant to provide "meaningful work" and is designed to be financially self-supporting. Prison products will be priced to reflect basic manufacturing costs to help defray capital expenditures on equipment and the wages paid to prisoners.

It now costs about $13,400 to house a federal prisoner for one year, the newspaper says.

Unfortunate

HALIFAX (CP) — David Lewis, federal New Democratic Party leader, conceded Monday the he had made a "very unfortunate comparison" when he attacked Falconbridge Mines for making a "measly 60-per-cent" profit last year.

"To be very frank, that was probably a very unfortunate comparison, because it compared with a year when they had very large losses," Mr. Lewis said in reply to a question by a CBC public affairs reporter on a taped television program.

"When I saw 700 per cent after I'd used it in that time, the research people looked back, because it seemed to be impossible.

"And it is a fact that the year before was not a very good year."

Wage Rises

WINNIPEG (CP) — Increases in Manitoba's minimum wage in two stages over the next seven months were announced Monday by Labor Minister Russell Paulley.

Mr. Paulley told the legislature the minimum wage for adults will rise to $2.15 an hour from $1.90 an hour July 1, and a further increase to $2.30 an hour will be instituted Jan. 1, 1975.

For persons under the age of 18, the rate will rise to $1.90 an hour from $1.65 July 1 and to $2.05 an hour Jan. 1.

Current minimum wage levels in Manitoba have been in effect since last Oct. 1.

3 Convicted

TORONTO (CP) — Three Toronto clerics who picketed a Dominion supermarket, superstore, which they said was selling lettuce not picked by members of the United Farm Workers union, were found guilty of trespassing Monday in provincial court.

Rev. Vincent T. McGrath, Father Van Samuel Mather and Rev. Howard Mills, charged after they refused to leave the store when asked to do so by the manager and police, were remanded to Thursday for sentencing.

Planting Late

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The planting of most vegetable crops in Middlesex County is about one week behind schedule, but it is expected to be completed this week, Frank Ingratis, Middlesex County agriculture department horticulturist, said Monday.

Vegetable crops have been set back by the slow germination of seeds because of the cold, wet weather but nowhere near what might be considered a crisis stage he said.

Lead from Kettles Likely Old Problem

OTTAWA (CP) — High lead levels in water boiled in electric kettles have probably existed since the kettles became a popular household item 25 or 30 years ago, a consumer affairs department official said Monday.

J. W. Black, chief of the products safety branch, said in an interview lead solder used in the construction of some kettles has been common since the product first came on the market.

It was not until 1967 that some manufacturers began to switch to non-lead solder for kettles, and then for reasons other than health because the health hazard was not known, he said.

A complete report on his branch's testing of the kettles would be available today or Thursday and will probably include a list of the brand names of kettles that release high levels of lead into water, he said.

The testing program followed findings in Toronto that eight out of nine kettles failed leach-presence tests conducted after a five-month-old baby was found to be suffering from lead poisoning.

Officials believe infants and children are most likely to be affected by the high lead content. Last week's warning to stop using the kettles until tests are completed stressed that water for baby formula and foods said, including drinks and biscuits used to treat and purify tap water are not a factor.

Mr. Black, who said almost all electric kettles in Canada are manufactured here, said manufacturers were issuing a list of all kettles that have not used lead solder in construction.

He also said findings to date support the evidence in the Toronto tests that almost 200 times the acceptable level of suspended lead particles was being detected.

List Safe Kettles

TORONTO (CP) — While the federal consumer affairs department continues testing electric kettles to determine whether some models release dangerous amounts of lead, the Portable Appliance Manufacturers Association has released a list of kettles which it says do not use lead-alloy solder.

The release says five firms, Canadian General Electric, M G a w e Edison, Procter Lewyt, Sunbeam and Westinghouse Canada no longer use lead alloy solder in kettle bases.

The association listed the following kettles as lead-free:

—General Electric kettles manufactured after January, 1971, and bearing model numbers X43, K48, K49, K50, K60 KE10 KE11, KE12 E61, E62, and E64.

—Westinghouse kettles made after mid-1971, bearing model numbers H12A HK12, H K12A, HK13G, HK13T, HK32W, HK32AG.

—Proctor Silex, Silex, Sta-Rite, Proctor Lifelong, Starlite, Proctor Lewyt, bearing model numbers 89001 or Citation number 89057, made after October, 1970.

—Sunbeam K67-A and K67-G made after July, 1967.

—Filter-Kettle KE25D-A and KE25D-G, made after July, 1967.

Food Said Poor At Highway Service Spots

TORONTO (CP) — A Progressive Conservative backbencher says the greasy-spoon fare at highway service centres is an affront to the travelling public.

Frank Drea (PC—Scarborough Centre) asked the government Monday to review its policy of granting exclusive licences to service centres on controlled-access highways.

"I think the time has come when the government should get out of the food business," Mr. Drea said in a private member's resolution.

He also said that the service centres charge premium prices for their gasoline because they are open on a 24-hour basis.

"The travelling public . . . is being held to ransom to add up to ransom," Mr. Drea said.

In the United States, he said, such centres are usually located at cloverleafs where area businessmen can compete for the tourist dollar.

Jack Spence (L—Kent) said the government gains $2.5 million a year from leases on service centres on major highways.

He agreed that leases should be reviewed and said he was concerned with the quality of food and drink offered to travellers.

40,000 Homes Ontario Target

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario plans a five-pronged attack on the province's housing shortage with the immediate goal of an additional 40,000 dwelling units in the next two years.

A statement of housing policies and programs tabled by Housing Minister Sidney Handleman in the legislature Monday also calls for close co-operation among the province, municipalities, private builders and the federal government.

The 13-page report contains little in the way of new information and is more of a consolidation of present government policy.

It estimates that the $20-million Ontario Housing Action Program (OHAP) should add 12,000 dwelling units this year and upwards of 28,000 units in 1975.

Current forecasts indicate there will be 100,000 to 110,000 housing starts in Ontario in 1974.

Of the 12,000 units, 10 per cent would come under the Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) program for those earning less than $14,500 a year; another 30 per cent would be for those earning $14,500 to $20,000 a year and upwards of 60 per cent for those earning more than $20,000.

Under the HOME program, mortgage charges about 25 per cent of income. The remainder under some type of agreement will allow developers to ensure that prices will rise realistically.

Once f the main five aims of the housing ministry, the statement says, is to increase the supply of new housing by bringing quickly into production serviced land that might otherwise be left undeveloped for two or three more years.

The statement also aimed to "improve existing housing stock by directly encouraging the rehabilitation of older housing and deteriorating neighborhoods."

Another goal is to discourage land speculation by engaging directly in extensive public land assembly and by empowering regional governments to do the same.

Ontario also wants to "broaden the mix of new housing by encouraging developers and municipal or community-owned non-profit housing groups to provide more well-designed, lower-cost accommodation."

The fifth major objective is to reduce financial and regulatory obstacles to housing by providing substantial sums of money through grants, loans and mortgages and by refining land use.

"No matter which statistical measure is used, housing costs in Ontario have risen rapidly to unacceptably high levels," the report states.

It says one household in every five—a total of 437,000 households—are paying more than one-quarter of their total income to provide shelter.

"Based solely on demographic data, it is apparent that Ontario will need in the next two years about 60,000 new dwelling units per year to accommodate the growth in population and households."

Land costs have risen because of a shortage of serviced land brought about in part by speculators holding blocks of undeveloped land off the market, by rapid urban growth and by individual investors switching from stocks and bonds to land and housing as a hedge against inflation, the report says.

Money costs have risen "because the housing industry is heavily dependent on capital markets at a time when general inflation and total demand for capital have pushed interest rates to abnormally high levels."

And the low-and moderate-income families have been suffering because the builders have been concentrating mostly on luxury-size family houses and expensive, high-rise apartments.

Ford Hopes Hearings Won't Be Expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice-president Gerald Ford says he hopes the House of Representatives Judiciary committee won't expand its hearings on the impeachment inquiry of the Congress, Ford said.

Ford was asked in an interview about reports that committee members feel additional time is needed to clarify ambiguities in Watergate tapes he has released.

"I certainly hope not," he replied. "I think they could—I would hope they would get it whatever they do, to the floor of the House by late June or early July."

Ford was interviewed in the wake of his strong public disapproval of President Nixon's refusal to provide any additional Watergate information to the judiciary committee. However, at the vice-president's request, that subject was not touched in the interview.

Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler Sunda put down reports of differences between Ford and Nixon.

Ziegler said relations between the president and Ford are "very good."

"The vice-president has no difficulties with the president at all," he said.

Meanwhile, three Republicans on the judiciary committee said Nixon's "hush-money" conversation of March 21, 1973, is the only evidence they have heard that might tend to implicate the chief executive in the Watergate cover-up.

Representatives Charles Wiggins of California, David Dennis of Indiana and Henry Smith of New York all left it insisted on after listening to the tape last week that the inquiry had yet to hear any evidence implicating Nixon.

However, the three said in interviews Monday that the March 21 talk might be a turning-point if it is clarified with further investigation.

Mandatory Retraining Trend in Professions

TORONTO (CP) — Some medical professions in Ontario are moving toward compulsory retraining for licensed members, a legislative committee was told Monday.

The move, while slow and fraught with problems is being considered by the governing bodies of dentists, pharmacists, physicians and surgeons, spokesmen for the groups said.

Pharmacists, for example, now pay a $20 mandatory fee in their dues for computerized lessons on new aspects of their discipline, a spokesman said. The voluntary course has attracted more than 70 per cent of all pharmacists in the province.

The Ontario College of Pharmacists also has a growing list of its regulations for compulsory re-examination, if such requirements are enacted in the legislature.

The committee, reviewing the Health Disciplines Act, also has suggest that the bill make further education compulsory.

Dr. Ian Bush, council councilor of Indiana and Henry Smith of New York all left it insisted on after listening to the tape last week that the inquiry had yet to hear any evidence implicating Nixon.

More Aid Promised

OSHAWA (CP) — Greater financial assistance towards the cost of day-care will be made possible provincial day-care program will be announced shortly, Rene Brunelle, provincial minister of community and social services, said Monday.

Speaking during the first day of a three-day Ontario Municipal Social Services Association convention, Mr. Brunelle said the ministry announcement will involve financial assistance to "possibly both parent co-operatives and private child-care organizations."

He said the ministry is interested in making day-care programs "not only daytime operations but Saturday or weekend ongoing programs."

Streaking Indecent

OTTAWA (CP) — Streaking is an indecent act, Judge Thomas Swabey of provincial court ruled Monday.

The judge ruled that Wayne James Niman, 24, of Ottawa, was guilty of committing an indecent act when he ran to v beer store March 29 wearing only a scarf around his neck.

The judgment could set a legal precedent in Ontario.

Niman's counsel, Gary Barnes, a second-year University of Ottawa law student, argued that his client should have been charged under a section of the Criminal Code which makes it an offence to appear nude in a public place.

But Judge Swabey said he was satisfied that Niman's act constituted "something more active, with greater moral turpitude, than the mere state of being nude in a public place."

Niman will not suffer for his crime, provided he behaves.

Judge Swabey gave him a conditional discharge. That means he received no sentence and has no criminal record.

Terry — Rock

Christ Church was the setting for the May 11 wedding of Margaret Evelyn Terry and John Ernest Rock performed by Rev. R. B. Wright.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Terry and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Rock of Brighton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of tapada with a high collar, long bubble sleeves, and a bodice covered with Swiss lace, and accented by an insert covered with Swiss appliqué and seed pearls. The skirt and chapel-length train had flounces of matching lace.

The bride's headpiece held a waist-length tulle veil and she carried a cascade of yellow roses, ivy and stephanotis.

Matron of honor Karen Clements, the bride's sister, wore a gown of floral crepe in shades of yellow, green and orange, with a white inset bodice and self-buttons on the front, and a lace edging on the white crepe collar. She carried yellow mums and sonia roses, and wore yellow mums in her hair.

Peggy Fedderson and Sharon Rock were bridesmaids in gowns similar to the matron of honor's, with the same bouquets and floral headpieces.

The flower girl, Shari Dykman, the groom's niece, wore a gown in the same style as the other attendants but in white, with a floral sash matching their gowns. The ring bearer was the groom's nephew Steven Kohut.

The groom's best man was his brother Gary Rock.

The ushers were Alan Gardiner, and Roy Clements.

After a dinner held at the Belleville Shrine Club, the couple left on a trip to Quebec. They now live in Belleville.

First Waterford, Now Galway

GALWAY, Ireland (CP) — Every housewife has heard of Waterford crystal. The original crystal is priceless, for there was a hiatus of 100 years or so between the death and rebirth of the factory in southern Ireland.

Not as well known yet is Galway crystal. The company began about five years ago just outside this west coast city with a master cutter and two apprentices. The young men learned in Bavaria for 18 months to learn glass blowing and cutting.

Today the factory has 200 workers, most of them young including 85 cutters. They start at 15 or 16 years of age.

They blow molten glass into the required shapes and cut the designs on the finished product by hand. Workers are paid by the hour, plus their skill. It takes six or seven years to become a master. Currently the factory has 10 master cutters and eight master blowers.

Galway Crystal now has its own apprentice school of five to seven weeks and gives its workers an annual refresher course. It expects five-per-cent rewards in the first two weeks but after that an apprentice must cut his discard rate to one per cent or lose his job.

Recently the firm bought an electro-melting furnace which helps monitor the level of the ingredients more closely. The furnaces are heated to 1,400 degrees.

The molten glass is blown into shapes through extra long pipes and the item is placed on a conveyor belt that moves it cycle 70 feet at 2½ minutes a foot from the 800-degrees temperature at the start to zero on removal. Then the edges are smoothed.

The firm currently turns out about 250,000 pieces a year and expects the figure to go substantially higher.

On the other side of Ireland, near Kilkenny, is a crystal-making studio started by 27-year-old Simon Pearce. He had worked in his father's pottery and became fascinated with glass-blowing while homeward bound through Asia from a trip to New Zealand.

After studying a year at the Royal College of Art in London, he bought a farm at Bennettsbridge in 1972 and built a small factory with local help.

He mixes his own ingredients, melting 1½ tons every two weekends. With only another master and two helpers using old glass-blowing techniques, his output is limited. About half of it is exported.

China has always been important in Ireland. Delftware was produced in Dublin early in the 18th century. Henry Delmain, who died in the 1750s, introduced coal for firing delftware and used transfer printing on pottery.

The manufacture of Belleek porcelain began in the 1880s. It still is made and still is popular, especially with Irish motifs such as the shamrock design.

One of the largest exporters of Irish pottery and porcelain is Arklow Pottery, near Dublin. Its products are marketed in Canada under the name of Erin-Stone.

The factory sprawls through several buildings on 11 acres and employs 550 workers. Visitors can follow the process of making pottery and china from the clay beginning through the moulds and first firing in huge kilns to the glazing and decorating.

It has an outlet for selling the china. Especially popular are the seconds at discount prices.

Those 'Good Old Days' Inspire Designer Bill Blass

NEW YORK (AP) — The good old days were the inspiration for designer Bill Blass's fall collection.

He said he took his theme from the 1910s, 1920s and 1930s.

He liked the small hat, the clutch purse and the minaudiere.

He worked in his father's pottery and became fascinated with glass-blowing while homeward bound through Asia from a trip to New Zealand.

Native Tongue Brought to Life

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — An Indian mother and son are bringing their native language back to life for their people and white students of Indian culture and legend.

Selina Timoyakin, in her 60s, and Larry Pierre, 48, work as a team, their bond the Okanagan language. As they lecture they attempt to bring alive their legends.

They recently visited an anthropology class at Cariboo Community College, bringing the bodyof Coyote to stalk the corridors.

During the lecture, the two delivered the legend of Coyote, a crafty creature of the Okanagan, talked on the religious significance of the winter dances and went over the spiritual and physical rebirth inherent in the traditional Indian sweatbath.

Mrs. Timoyakin and Mr. Pierre made the form of their lecture central to the content. Mrs. Timoyakin delivers her talk in Okanagan; Mr. Pierre translates.

Both lecture for the British Columbia Indian Language Project, a non-profit society working to preserve and revitalize British Columbia's disappearing Indian languages.

When not travelling, Mr. Pierre conducts oral and written language classes on his native Penticton reserve south of here.

He uses a written Okanagan based on the English alphabet, but at the same time adapted to express all the complex Indian sounds.

Mr. Pierre said in an interview that even five or six years ago many Indians were ridiculing attempts to give the Okanagan language a new form.

"We're getting along well enough," they said. "So why bring back the Indian stuff."

How many people are interested and want to become involved? Mr. Pierre said this sudden interest is not necessarily progress.

"All of a sudden these modern Indians figure 'We're going to get on this,' and now everybody wants to get in on the language."

Randy Bouchard, a project linguist, said the money issue is sensitive because it leads to accusation that certain Indian are selling their language.

Turning Down Drinks Tough

Dear Ann Landers: I read someplace that you don't drink and never have. I don't care much for liquor, but I always find myself having one or two because people keep insisting. Some hosts won't take no for an answer.

What do you say when people pressure you to "be sociable" or "have just one?" Sign me—A Reluctant Drinker Who'd Rather Not

Dear D. D.: I have a very simple answer for people who keep trying to shove a drink in my hand. I say, "If I don't know mind your drinking, you shouldn't mind my not drinking."

Please don't ask me again. (P.S. After that little speech I have very little trouble.)

Dear Ann Landers: I have plenty many letters in your column from women who say they are always fighting off men. It seems these poor dears are forever getting propositioned by the butcher, the druggist, the doctor, bus driver, lawyer, plumber, and meter reader. I know two women like that.

Why don't the simpletons realize what they are telling about themselves? Don't they know that when a man sees a sign in the window that says "welcome," it's an even bet that he will accept the invitation? Women who get all those propositions are handing out little signs, whether they know it or not. Usually it's in their eyes. Wiem up, Ann.—Hip in Harrisburg

Dear Hip: Generally speaking, you are right. But some men don't look for invitations. They issue 'em.

Dear Ann Landers: I agree with your advice to the 55-year-old man who is stuck in a marriage that has lost its meaning. It was astute of you to state that his wife may be as unhappy as he and would probably be glad to end it.

Our marriage is stone-cold dead. We speak only to argue. My husband thinks he'd be happier elsewhere, and I'd be glad to let him go—on fair terms.

But I've given 25 years of my life to this man. I've raised his children, entertained his friends and scrimped so he could have good clothes because he had to "meet the public." I was the "generous" husband wants to split everything 50-50. This means I end up with $40,000. I'm 52, with no business experience. He has a good job, medical insurance and a fantastic pension.

I'm not arguing. The marriage is a fraud. But why give advice to middle-aged men, please tell them to be fair.—Willed Rose

Dear Rose: If your husband has a shred of decency, he will provide for you as he is able. A competent lawyer (yours) will help him decide what is honorable and financially feasible and see that he does it. In the meantime, you can't get blood out of a turnip, lady. But please remember, while you are doing your arithmetic, that freedom from a business marriage can be worth plenty—and I am not talking about money.

Confidential to Where Will It End?: Our forefathers did without sugar until the 13th century, without coal fires until the 16th century, without tea or soap until the 17th century, and matches or electricity until the 19th century, canned or frozen foods until the 20th century. I think we'll make it.

Old Sayings Change With Metric System

By DORIS CLARK

Here's how our corny old sayings will sound when we go on the metric system:

— A miss is as good as 1.6 kilometers.

— Give him 2.5 centimeters and he'll take 1.6 kilometers.

— I wouldn't touch him with a 3 meter pole.

— Don't hide your light under a 38 liter basket.

— 28.4 grams of prevention are worth 453.6 grams of cure.

— There was a crooked man and he went a crooked 1.6 kilometers.

— Or at least, so says the C.C.S. Quotebook. Could it possibly be that a rose by any other name will still smell as sweet?

Dear Doris: I am a nursing aide. The letter from a 102-year-old patient was chilling. It was the elderly of today that opened up this country.

Where I work, we would never refuse a healthy pet entrance. I, myself, take my cat over occasionally. To some, it's the only animal they ever see. The happiness and strange animal gives them keeps them around for days. Happiness is the best cure for loneliness - not medicine!

I'm really sorry that there are places that don't respect th elderly's feeds and wants. Is smiling, and lending a helping hand - all that hard?

Why doesn't the lady's family get her in a place where she may have access to her pet, and where her bell will be answered when she rings?

Most Concerned.

Dear Most: Now you sound like the kind of a person I'd want looking after me. And I know there are many seventy-hearted workers in warm-hearted homes.

The elderly gentleman (not lady) now reports he feels better about things, because he did get to see his beloved dog on his birthday; and the nurses helped him to celebrate. He has no family.

If all workers would become a little thoughtful of what must be going on in their elderly patients' hearts, I'm thinking that some natural sympathy and a little more diligence might show itself.

(Doris keeps in contact with knowledgeable consultants in many fields - medicine, law, fashion, home economics, to name a few. Write to her, care of this newspaper, for the kind of help you need, enclosing an eight-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply).

Stanfield Warns Recession Price Of Keeping Grits

MONTREAL (CP) — Conservative leader Robert Stanfield dropped into a Liberal cabinet stronghold Monday night, called Prime Minister Trudeau an "artful dodger" and said that if the Liberals remain in office there will be a recession.

Making another of his swinging attacks on the Liberals, he said the party's inflation position appears to be one of calculated deception.

As he has since the start of his July 8 election campaign tour last week, Mr. Stanfield was launching another attack on what the Conservatives consider the main issue of the election—inflation.

But as he rose to speak at the rally in Westmount constituency here, an elderly man tried to make him commit a Conservative government to disallowing the Quebec language bill.

And as he left the meeting the Conservative leader heard that despite clear signals from the Conservatives in Moncton, N.B., had nominated Mayor Leonard Jones, an opponent of the Official Languages Act, as its executive candidate.

In the latter case Mr. Stanfield issued a statement saying he cannot accept Mr. Jones as a Conservative candidate.

The statement was issued as Mr. Stanfield flew to Toronto and he and party officials were expected to have more to say on the matter today.

Mr. Stanfield, after a morning news conference and an open-line radio show, was to visit Toronto area constituencies, including the riding of York South, held by New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

He was to speak at Kitchener, Ont. tonight and fly to Halifax Wednesday for his own nomination.

The Conservative was in Montreal for the nomination of Michael Meighen, president of the National Conservative Association, as candidate in Westmount, a constituency that borders on the ridings of Mr. Trudeau, Health Minister Marc Lalonde and Solicitor General Warren Allmand.

Mr. Meighen is seeking for the second time to unseat C. M. Drury president of the Treasury Board who won a large majority in the 1972 election.

Before Mr. Stanfield could deliver his address, an elderly man rose from the audience of about 500 that filled the hall to ask about the Quebec Language Act which seeks to make French the official language of the province.

Mr. Stanfield would say only that Quebec should not proceed with the measure in its present form.

Stanfield Vetoes Moncton PC Choice

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Controversial Mayor Leonard C. Jones won a federal Progressive Conservative nomination Monday night, and national PC leader Robert Stanfield promptly announced he will veto it.

Mr. Jones, 49, a lawyer who has been mayor of Moncton since 1963 and who has fought the provision of French-language services, defeated Charles Thurnbull in the Conservative member of Parliament for the riding. The vote was 449-445 in his favor.

Two hours after the the nominating convention, the local association executive reiterated its stand that the mayor was an unacceptable candidate. The statement said there would be no other comment until talks have been held with federal officials.

Mr. Stanfield, asked in an interview as he travelled by plane from Montreal to Toronto about the choice of Mr. Jones, said he would veto the nomination because Mr. Jones holds views contrary to those of his party.

"I cannot accept Mayor Jones as a candidate for my party," Mr. Stanfield said.

A further statement was expected later today.

During the weekend, the Tory leader said his rejection of any candidate would mean the party would refuse to field a candidate to the chief electoral officer. Without designation the candidate could not run under the party name.

Premier Richard Hatfield on a surprise visit to the convention urged delegates to consider the country's unity ahead of other factors when casting their ballots. He left before the results were announced.

During his term, the mayor has opposed bilingual municipal services in Moncton, about 30 per cent Acadian, unsuccessfully fought federal and New Brunswick acts which make English and French official languages.

Lewis Gets Millionaire Builder To Run for NDP in Stanfield Country

HALIFAX (CP)—For David Lewis, Monday was a day of happy twists.

Not only did the NDP leader receive his most enthusiastic campaign reception to date from voters in Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's home riding, but he added a million-aire builder to the list of New Democratic Party hopefuls in the July 8 federal election.

It was a pleasing end to a 10-day cross-country tour for the 64-year old socialist, who today begins an intensive swing through Ontario, starting in Ottawa.

Mr. Lewis' one-day stop here was patterned on visits to eight other cities during the last nine days: A news conference, a television taping, a nominating meeting in the evening.

But the rousing tone of the meeting, complete with rock band and cow-bell ringing, added a flavor missing in his earlier stops.

Local millionaire businessman Lloyd R. Shaw was nominated to contest the Halifax East Hants riding held in the last Parliament by deputy Speaker Robert McCleave. Mr. Shaw, 60, known in the region for his enlightened labor practices—there's never been a strike at his 113-year-old brick factory—appealed to businessmen to support the party in the election.

The NDP, he said, has no interest in harming fair-minded business people, and wants only to change the economic system that allowed them to profit unduly at the expense of consumers.

Mr. Lewis warmed up the crowd of 350 with verbal jabs at Prime Minister Trudeau and his party's economic policies, and Mr. Stanfield, then outlined his party housing policy with a promise, if elected, to implement six-per-cent mortgages for people earning less than $5,000 a year.

To accomplish such a program, he said, an NDP government would offer potential home buyers the same type of preferred interest rates now offered by banks to their big corporate customers.

Banks and other financial institutions would be required to set aside "a relatively small portion of their funds" for investment in six per cent mortgages.

"Banks would still have a substantial margin of earning at this civilized rate for mortgages."

An NDP government would fight land speculation through publicly-owned land banks and Housing Corp. "designed to serve people rather than developers."

Trudeau Promises To Halt Inflation

TORONTO (CP) — After more than a week of blasting opposition parties for forcing an election, Prime Minister Trudeau switched to inflation Monday night, attacking Progressive Conservative economic policies and promising that the Liberals will bring rising prices under control.

"That I pledge to you," he told a cheering audience of about 1,000 jammed into a high school auditorium at nearby Etobicoke.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie was nominated at the meeting to contest Etobicoke riding, which he has held since 1968.

"I am confident we have a grip on the problem," Mr. Trudeau said.

He said the Liberal solution would be no 90 days of wonder and amazement as proposed by the Conservatives." Nor would it be the "circus of slogans" proposed by the New Democratic Party.

Instead, the Liberals would be able, with the understanding they have of the problem, to wrestle it to the ground.

It was the first time in his campaign that Mr. Trudeau changed his basic message to voters. Previously, he concentrated on the wisdom of holding an election so soon after the last one in October, 1972.

Today his campaign takes another twist when he flies to Sydney, N.S., to begin a four-day whistle-stop at a string of communities along the way and is expected to make at least three major campaign speeches.

In his Toronto speech, Mr. Trudeau struck hard at the main Conservative anti-inflation proposal—a temporary price and wage freeze. Anyone aware of experience elsewhere would know how indiscriminate controls can be, he said.

He quoted a series of Conservative critics, including James Gillies, running in Thornhill-Don Valley, has said that controls would create more problems than they would solve. Mr. Trudeau said.

And John Thomson, seeking the Conservative nomination in Etobicoke, had said that controls have proven "a disaster in country after country."

The prime minister also criticized the Conservatives for running so-called parachuted or outside candidates in some ridings, including Etobicoke. Mr. Thomson is a Calgary oilman.

"It's the biggest airlift since World War Two."

"If Robert Stanfield keeps it up, parachuting will replace hockey as the national sport."

Budget Defended

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner took to the hustings Monday, lashing Progressive Conservative economic policies and praising his own budgetary proposals.

Mr. Turner told a nomination meeting that the Conservative policy of wage-and-price controls would be ineffective as a means of halting inflation in Canada.

The minister defended increased government spending laid out in the budget—spending which Mr. Stanfield has promised to curb.

Mr. Turner said more than half of the 23-per-cent increase in spending was to have gone to help cushion consumers against inflation, by providing the price shelter for food from Canada and subsidies for bread, milk and beef. Some of it also would have gone to aid Canadians on fixed incomes with increased pensions and family allowances.

Engineers Recommend Cannifton Road Subway

The engineering consulting firm that earlier recommended an overpass grade separation over the CN. double tracks to eliminate the present Cannifton Road level crossing, has now opted for a subway.

Monday at city council, D. Babbs, of the firm Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd., outlined the reasoning behind the subway plan and estimated it could be constructed at an additional cost of between $55,000 to $65,000 above the figure quoted earlier for the overpass.

The lower cost figure of the proposed grade separation had been the reasoning behind the earlier recommendation.

But Mr. Babbs said a review of the 1971 technical plan study showed that a subway would have several advantages over an overpass.

Mr. Babbs said an overpass soaring 45 feet above ground level, would have undesirable esthetics and would present a solid physical and mental barrier. Its steep grades would have a critical safety factor, vehicle operational costs would be higher and there would be extra maintenance costs on the structure.

In the other hand, a depressed subway would be more pleasing in appearance, there would be a reduction in accidents and parts of the CNRA park could be saved.

"The only thing against a subway would be its additional cost," said Mr. Babbs.

He felt the additional money for a subway would be "well spent."

Relocation of the double track railway to allow construction would be one of major additional costs of a subway. Other costs for an overpass were estimated at $400,000 as compared with $636,000 for a subway.

Overall, the other hand, roadway costs for a subway would be lower and there would be less property acquisition necessary.

Plans for the Cannifton Road grade separation would see the present level crossing site closed, and a new road-way provided across the CNRA athletic park.

South of the tracks, the new roadway would connect with Station Street at Emily Street.

Mr. Babbs said construction would not get under way until 1977.

Council referred Mr. Babbs' report to City Engineer Wilbur Purcell for comment before any final decision is made on the new subway recommendation.

Growing Belleville

There may not be too much at the site now, but sometime in November, a castings plant will take up from 25,000 to 30,000 square feet in the city's northwest industrial park. The plant, to be built off Hanna Street, is called Castings Division of S. A. Armstrong Ltd., part of a Toronto-based firm. Shown examining the blueprints are from left, industrial commissioner, Fred Bemis; Armstrong secretary and director, J. D. L. Ross; Armstrong vice-president and engineering and manufacturing, Walter Stethem; Cornerstone Builders managing director, Brian Holmes and Cornerstone construction manager, Dave Griffiths.

Firm Building in Northwest Park

The city's rapidly growing northwest industrial park continues to grow. Newest addition to Belleville's family of industries in that area is the Castings Division of S. A. Armstrong Ltd. a Toronto firm.

The Belleville plant, whose initial stage will consist of about 25,000 to 30,000 square feet, will make castings for centrifugal pumps and heat exchangers.

The plant, based in Toronto, is Canada's largest manufacturer of centrifugal pumps, said Armstrong vice-president o fengineering and manufacturing Walter Stethem. Stethem.

Preparation of the 6¼-acre site off Hanna Stree. south of Highway 401, will start in early June and actual construction work will begin about July 1, A completion date of about mid-November is anticipated. The design and construction will be handled by Belleville based Cornerstone Builders.

Between 30 to 40 workers are expected to be employed at the plant, even Co... ... started, said Mr. Stethem.

"Most of the staff will be local people with the exception of two or three people in a supervisory position."

David Hamilton will come from Toronto to become plant superintendent, once operations start rolling, said Mr. Stethem.

Every attempt has been made to make the castings plant as pollution free as possible. Mr. Stethem said:

"We'll have the most modern casting facilities and pollution control engineer will be installed. Electrical furnaces will operate in this automated castings plant."

The Toronto-based company is strictly Canadian-owned, emphasized Mr. Stethem. There are two subsidiary plants, one near Buffalo, N.Y. and one in England.

"What we'll be doing here is primarily producing iron and bronze castings for use in our product," added Mr. Stethem.

Mr. Stethem lauded the efforts of industrial commissioner, Fred Bemis, in bringing this newest industry to Belleville.

Said Mr. Bemis: "We are happy to have added another line to our industrial base in Belleville." The industry, located in the northwest corner of the northwest industrial park, is adjacent to the 401 and is situated near a cul-de-sac currently being constructed off Hanna Street. Neighbors of the castings plant will be Olivetti, Monarch Foods and Red Beech Industries, the latter two currently under construction.

The building will have col-umn masonry, metal walls and a 40-foot tower, said Cornerstone managing director, Brian Holmes.

Mr. Stethem said that there is some provision for expansion of the business as facilities continue to grow.

Mailroom Staff Calls In Sick

Five employees at the mailroom at the regional office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission called in sick at the start of their morning shift yesterday.

UIC comptroller, Austin Bastian, said today, there was no disruption of service as stenos and other clerks filled in doing the job. The five that called in sick are the entire department of the mailroom.

Mr. Bastian is not discounting the fact that the five being off sick could be a "coincidence."

Last Wednesday, 65 key punch operators at the regional office of the UIC called in sick at the start of each of their three daily shifts to protest the current state of contract negotiations.

Hillcrest Centre Robbed

Belleville police are investigating a break-in that netted thieves a variety of goods from the Hillcrest Community Centre late yesterday afternoon.

Police Chief Douglas Cronkite said that thieves forced their way into the community centre by removing a screen and some boards from the cloakroom window.

The break-in was discovered around 5.40 p.m. yesterday and an investigation revealed that some silverware, a coffee percolator, and a record player were taken by the thieves.

At present police do not have an estimate of the value of the stolen goods.

Belleville Proposal Shelved

Chatham — City council took no action Monday on a Belleville proposal which would have the provincial government subsidize the cost of borrowing money.

In its resolution, Belleville council referred to the high cost of borrowing money, and asked that the provincial government subsidize municipalities for the cost of borrowing money until grants are received.

Ald. Curtis Carter said that if this course were followed, "grants would probably be cut."

City Sells Yardmen 20 Acres

The city of Belleville will sell 20 acres of industrial land in the Cannifton Road to Adam Street area to the Belleville Yardmen as a site for its proposed recreational complex.

The price for the tract of city-owned industrial land which has been reserved for the Yardmen will be $1 an acre.

The decision to sell the land to the Yardmen was made at Monday's meeting after organization president Ted Hold council that ownership of the land was required in order that a formal application be made to senior governments for financial assistance to build the multi-million dollar complex originally planned.

If no government assistance is available, Mr. Branton said the Yardmen were prepared to go ahead this year with a first phase double rink and swimming pool complex.

Church Plans Open House

The public is invited to an open house at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at 135 Palmer Road between 1 at 1.30 p.m.

Featured will be a film showing the activities of the church, designed to help individuals of all ages achieve development in social, physical and spiritual areas.

Information on the church can be obtained by telephoning Elder T.R. Wilding at 968-3596 before 9.30 a.m. or at noon.

Temperance Worker

Gordon A. Shewfelt, of Montgomery Lodge (left), was honored at the 3rd biennial convention of Alcohol and Drug Concerns with an honorary directorship. With him are David E. Reeve, executive director of the organization, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lorne Shewfelt, wife of the principal of Albert College. Mr. Shewfelt formerly was principal of R. H. McGregor School in Toronto and is a past president of the Ontario Temperance Federation.

Foxboro Man Gets Two Years

County Court Judge W. S. Lane sentenced Ronald Franklin Woodcock, 25, of 45 Curtis Street, Belleville, to four years in penitentiary Monday, after Woodcock pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

Woodcock was charged with assaulting a nine-year-old Oshawa girl last Feb. 17 in the washroom of the Gulf Restaurant and Service Centre on Highway 401 near the Belleville city limits.

The young girl, who was travelling with her parents from Montreal to Oshawa, suffered a broken nose and facial cuts when she was punched in the face by Woodcock as he fled from the washroom in the early morning hours.

Crown Attorney Glenn Deline told the court yesterday that Woodcock had entered the washroom and followed by before the Oshawa girl, her mother and a cousin entered the room.

Woodcock had concealed himself inside one of the washroom's cubicles and had been peeking beneath the partitions when the young girl's mother noticed that he was there.

The mother warned her daughter to stay where she was, but when the girl ignored her mother's warning and left her cubicle, she met Woodcock's way as he ran from the room.

On his way out of the washroom, Woodcock rushed at the young girl, punched her in the face with a closed fist and then twisted her broken nose.

After he hit the girl, Woodcock struck out at her mother, hitting her behind the left ear, knocking her glasses off.

The girl's father saw Woodcock run from the washroom after he heard his daughter's screams and chased him to the back of the service centre where Woodcock had his car parked close to the rear door.

The father was able to give police a description of Woodcock and also supplied them with the licence number of his car.

PC Alan Armstrong, of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, the officer in charge of investigating the assault, was assisted by the Belleville police department and traced Woodcock's car to his home on Centre Street where police set up a stakeout.

Shortly after midnight, on Feb. 19, PC. Armstrong and Belleville Police Constables Les Hall arrested Woodcock in the basement of a Pine Street home when they found him hiding behind a furnace.

At the time of his arrest, Woodcock had shaved off the mustache he had had on the night of the assault on the girl.

In speaking to sentence, Crown Attorney Deline asked Judge Lane to impose a substantial prison term on Woodcock saying that he was a "dangerous man" who will never be deterred and would never be reformed.

"The longer this man is incarcerated, the safer people are on the street", Mr. Deline said.

Woodcock has an extensive criminal record with a string of convictions for indecent assault, robbery with violence, break-enter and theft and prowling by night.

Judge Lane said that he "could not conceive of a more serious assault than that of a 35-year-old man on a nine-year-old girl" and added that he felt Woodcock should be taken away from society as long as possible.

"This man has come very close to being a habitual criminal", Judge Lane said ... "I don't think it will deter this individual if I give him two years or five months. "His record has a pattern that doesn't indicate he will change."

In sentencing Woodcock, Judge Lane added that he was also going to make a special recommendation for psychiatric care.

A conviction for assault causing bodily harm carries a maximum prison term of five years.

Expensive Bike Stolen

A thief with an urge to drive a high speed bicycle is the object of a police search today, after someone stole a 10-speed bicycle, valued at $200 from a garage on Bridge Street.

Police Chief Douglas Cronkite reports that someone entered a garage at 32 Walmsley Place yesterday and stole a 16-speed Winthrop bicycle that belonged to Blair Slotenberg.

Anyone who may have found the cream-colored bicycle abandoned somewhere is asked to call the police.

City Council Requested To Ban Strikebreakers

Belleville city council is being asked to endorse a resolution of the Ontario Federation of Labor resolution calling for government legislation to outlaw the use of professional strikebreakers to break up legal strikes.

The city of Kitchener, where violence erupted on the picket line at a plant after professional strikebreakers were called in, is the first municipality to adopt the resolution.

In support of its request for endorsation of the resolution, Ian Reilly of the Quinte Labor Council, and Percy Meagher, secretary treasurer of the Ontario Federation of Labor, Monday presented a film of the Kitchener picket line violence to council.

To a question from Alderman Joe Cox, who asked if labor unions were prepared to eliminate violence such as was shown in the film, Mr. Meagher said his organization did not advocate violence, but when industry attempts to replace its labor force with professional strikebreakers, this unfortunately does occur when workers see jobs being taken away from them.

Unfortunately it was smaller industries that use professional strikebreakers, Mr. Meagher said.

"We never have trouble with the large factories."

Alderman Ben Corke wondered if such an "unusual" law outlawing strikebreakers had not been passed before.

Mr. Meagher replied that some management personnel were in the practice of strikebreakers or at least the threat of their use against striking employees.

Professional strikebreakers were offering as people hired by organizations that make a business of contracting strike-bound plants, offering their services.

Resolution Defeated

Belleville city council Monday took no action on a resolution from the Regional Municipality of Peel calling for a special inquiry into acts of violence that occurred in a junior B final game between the Brampton Bluesand the Hamilton Red Wings.

The resolution called for an inquiry by the province into the violence that occurred at the above game and violence in hockey in general.

Council defeated a recommendation to refer the Peel resolution to the city recreation committee. Alderman Joe Cox opposed the resolution saying to the recreation committee, stating that the minor hockey association, not the recreation committee ran minor hockey in Belleville.

When the original recommendation failed council came up for decision it was lost on a tie vote.

Two to Face Assault Charge

Two Belleville men have been charged by provincial police with assault causing bodily harm following an incident outside a cottage on the Trenton-Bowmanville road six Sunday.

Charged are Larry Barnard, 28, of RR2, Belleville, and Gerald Vankey, 26, of 36 Geddes St., Belleville, both will appear in provincial court Monday June 24, a Belleville OPP spokesman said.

The spokesman said the two men are charged with assaulting Edward MacDonald, 27, of 277 West Moira St., Belleville.

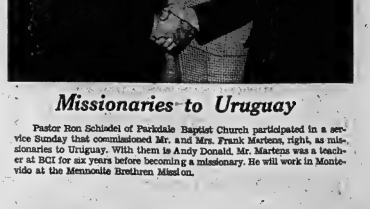
MacDonald was treated for lacerations to the eyebrows and bruises to the face at Belleville General Hospital and released.

Cruise Price Going Up

The energy crisis in Europe is forcing many companies out of the educational travel business.

British - India, the firm that carries Hastings county students on their annual Mediterranean cruise, is the only one still operating.

Lloyd Jones, the teacher who has conducted the cruises since their inception, said the price will be up considerably next year. Fall fares are now about $600 to $650.



When the cruises began, fares, paid entirely by the students, were about $450 to $475. Mr. Jones had earlier estimated that students couldn't afford more than $500 for the cruise.

The trustees Monday that almost 200 students have expressed interest in the cruise next year, despite the high fares. About 350 Hastings county students have annually gone on the trip.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Tuesday:

Monday, May 27, 12:52 p.m., service call to wash down gasoline that had been spilled at the intersection of Bridge Street West and Coleman Street after a car had lost one of its wheels, no damage.

Royals' Pitcher Follows Orders, Stops Orioles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bruce Dal Canton has two "out" pitches in his repertoire—the knuckleball and the double-play ball. He learned about the double-play ball from his manager Monday night.

Faced with a tough ninth-inning situation, Jack McKeon advised his pitcher to "throw the double-play ball to Brooks Robinson." He did and Kansas City Royals won 9-1 over Baltimore Orioles.

The Orioles looked as if they would knock Dal Canton out of the game in the ninth with two singles and a hit batsman that loaded the bases with one out.

Then McKeon bounced out of the dugout to suggest the double play.

In other American League games, Boston Red Sox nipped Minnesota Twins 3-2 in 10 innings, Chicago White Sox defeated New York Yankees 4-3, Oakland A's routed Detroit Tigers 12-2, Texas Rangers blanked Cleveland Indians 6-0, and Milwaukee Brewers shut out California Angels 2-0.

Relying heavily on his knuckleball, Dal Canton, 3-2, finished with a five-hitter.

Fran Healy staked the Royals to a 2-0 lead in the second inning with his sixth homer of the season following a two-out single by George Brett off Jim Palmer, 2-6.

Bernie Carbo, who had homered for two runs in the fourth inning, hit a two-out single in the 10th to give Boston its victory over Minnesota in a game which featured a brilliant pitching duel between Boston's Luis Tiant and Minnesota's Ray Corbin.

Joan Beniquez extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 10 by opening the 10th with a single off Corbin. It was the fifth hit off Corbin, who later left the game in favor of Tom Burgmeier.

The Minnesota reliever induced Cecil Cooper to ground into a double play and the Twins scored sat. But Burgmeier, 4-3, struck out Dwight Evans and Carl Yastrzemski, setting the stage for Carbo's single to right for his third RBI of the game.

Tiant scattered 10 hits and evened his record at 5-5.

Skip Pitlock scattered five hits in 8 2-3 innings in his first AL start and Chicago, helped by Pat Kelly's two-run single, beat New York.

Pitlock, 26, a left-hander, walked three, struck out eight and blanked the Yankees until the fifth inning when Thurman Munson hit a two-run homer. Terry Foster relieved in the seventh. Doc Medich, 6-4, was the winning pitcher.

Reggie Jackson had three hits to raise his batting average to .404, knocked in two runs and scored two in just four innings, leading Oakland over Detroit.

The As scored 10 runs in three innings off Detroit pitcher Joe Coleman, 6-4.

Jackson's RBI single and a run-scoring double by Joe Rudi highlighted a six-run first that was more than enough support for Vida Blue, 3-5, who left after seven innings.

Jim Bibby broke a five-game losing streak with a three-hitter and Jeff Burroughs continued his RBI rampage with two to lead Texas over Cleveland.

Bibby, 6-7, allowed only two singles and worked out of a jam in the fifth inning, when the Indians put men on second and third with one out, to post his first victory since April 30. Burroughs hit a two-run double in the fifth inning to push his RBI total to 48.

Rookie Kevin Kobel outpitched strikeout king Nolan Ryan with a six-hitter and Don Money hit a two-run homer, leading Milwaukee to victory over California.

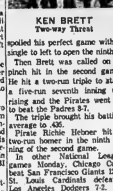
Then Brett was called on to pinch hit in the second game. He hit a two-run triple to start a five-run seventh inning uprising and the Pirates went on to beat the Padres 8-7.

The triple brought his batting average to .435.



Pirate Richie Hebner hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning of the second game.

In other National League games Monday, Chicago Cubs beat San Francisco Giants 12-4, St. Louis Cardinals defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2, Atlanta Braves whipped Philadelphia Phillies 8-1, Cincinnati Reds beat New York Mets 4-2, cracked his fourth career home run in the first game Astros at Montreal Expos game was rained out.

Cincinnati jumped on Tom Seaver for six hits and four runs in the first two innings and Fred Norman checked the Mets on four hits.

Seaver, 2-3, the National League's Cy Young Award winner in 1973, absorbed his 13th career loss to the Reds against eight victories, his poorest record against any National League club.

Norman, 4-3, who struck out seven and walked three, held New York hitless until John Milner singled with two down in the fourth and Ken Singleton in the fifth when Bud Harrelson

Italia Shades Croatia

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

National Soccer League action Monday saw Toronto A. S. Italia edge Toronto Croatia 6-5, while St. Catharines Nationals red Toronto White Eagles played to a scoreless tie.

In Toronto, S. Italia and Croatia fought to a 1-1 tie in regulation time and remained scoreless after two 15-minute overtime periods.

As each team then took five penalty kicks, Italia scored on all five but Croatia missed one.

Franco Gallina scored two goals for Italia, one on a penalty kick. Lorel Modesti, Ivan Rakic, Antonio Caffarali, Ivan Kosanale Pietrantonio added the others.

For Croatia, Alija Solak scored twice, once on a penalty kick. Single goals were added by Goran Peric, Alberto Alarcon and Miralem Fasilic.

In St. Catherines, the stars of the scoreless tie were goaltenders—Vince Cerra of St. Catharines and Blagoje Tamindic of Toronto.

Blues Get Hab

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced Monday night that defenceman Rick Wilson has been traded to the Louis Blues for future considerations.

Wilson divided his time during the 1973-74 season between the Canadiens and Nova Scotia Voyageurs, Montreal's American Hockey League farm team.

Wilson, a native of Prince Albert, Sask., joined the Canadiens' organization two years ago after a college hockey career at North Dakota University. He had two assists in 17 games with Montreal this year and scored three goals and 19 assists in 67 games with the Voyageurs.

Hamilton Takes Two From Woodstock Team

WOODSTOCK (CP) — A pair of unearned runs in the first game and Wally Dick's four-hit pitching in the second gave Hamilton Scrappers 2-0 and 4-0 wins over Woodstock Warriors in an Ontario Fastball League doubleheader Monday night.

Woodstock errors allowed Ollie Anibole and Dick Booher to score in the first game before Reg Martin pitched a three-hitter to shut out the Warriors. Don Reeder was the losing pitcher.

In the second game, Dick struck 11 batters for the win while Booher was tagged the loser.

Ron Forth's triple scored Booher for Hamilton's first run in the first inning and Jim Thompson scored in the second on a bases-loaded walk.

Thompson then hit a two-run homer in the fifth.

Bep Resigns

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins' trip into today's National Hockey League amateur draft without a coach in the wake of Bep Guidolin's decision to quit his job rather than settle for a short-term contract.

Because the Bruins won the Prince of Wales trophy with a first-place finish in the Eastern Division, they have last pick in every round of the junior draft.

Sinden said he regretted Guidolin's decision, but added the Bruins could not meet his demand for a long-term pact.

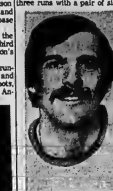
Guidolin's decision came eight days after the Bruins lost the Stanley Cup championships to Philadelphia Flyers.

"Bep did a good job for us," Sinden said, "and I wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors."

Before leaving Boston last week to make up his mind in the quiet of his Barrie, Ont., home, Guidolin said: "I have to think about some security. It's got to be a long-time deal, and if it isn't you can say that I won't be back."

Sinden said the Bruins usually offer contracts for one or two years.

The Bruins management said Monday that no decision had been made on Guidolin's replacement, but two names keep coming up as strong possibilities: John Ferguson, a former hard-nosed hockey player for Montreal Canadiens, and Don Cherry, coach of Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.



In Montreal, Ferguson said he would be interested if the Boston job.

"A team like the Bruins appeals to me very much," he said, adding he would insist on a multi-year contract and that he had received some feelers from Sinden earlier last winter.

"Harry asked me what I was doing next winter—that was all," Ferguson said.

Guidolin is reported to be a leading contender for coaching spot with the new Washington Capitals. Milt Schmidt, general manager of the Capitals, hired Guidolin as coach of the AHL Boston Braves in their first season two years ago. Schmidt said he hadn't spoken with Guidolin yet, but would have to get permission from the Bruins before he could.

Guidolin moved up to coach the Bruins when Tom Johnson was fired in February 1973.

Devolin Nips Juniors

Bardon Tamed By Scott Reid

A one-hitter by Howard and Robert's Scott Reid was the highlight of the night Monday as the Quinte Fastball League swung into its second week of play in the new season. The near-perfect game was part of an 8-0 shellacking the Printers hung on Bardon Supplies in the second game of be doubleheader at the Alemite. In the first game, Devolin Motors edged the Ellis Juniors, 5-3.

Reid fanned 12 in shaping his one-hitter, walking three, while receiving excellent backup in the form of 11 hits by his teammates.

Wayne McConnell took the loss on the Bardon rubber, allowing the 11 hits, striking out eight, but issuing six free passes.

The Printers jumped on McConnell for single runs in the second and fourth innings, coming home with three in the top of the sixth and seventh frames.

Winning hurler Reid scored his own eventual winning run, drawing a walk and scoring after fielder's choices by Ken Greenrose and Jack Hughes.

Greenrose blasted a solo home run to deep left field in the fourth to make it 2-0.

Dave Skelton led the winners with three hits, a triple, double, and single, with Greenrose contributing his circuit blast and a triple.

Larry Potter had a triple to add to one base hit, with Pug Kellar bagging a double. Other base hits went to Wayne Woods, Bob Parsons, and Rusty Garvin.

Bardon batsman Ted Wallwork was the Bardon batsman to post Reid's no-hit bid, with a fifth inning single to right field.

Devolin Motors got into high gear right from the start in their game with the Juniors, piling up three runs in the top of the first inning to set them well on their way to their second win of the year.

Five consecutive hits, including a pair of doubles spelled trouble for Ellis hurler John Sprackett.

After Terry Meagher popped out to Sprackett to start the game, singles by Bruce Stickle and Jim Horwood, doubles by Lyle Thompson and Ray Lumsden, and another base hit, this one by Rick Rosebush, added up to the three tallies.

The Juniors came back with a pair of their own in the bottom of the innings but were never really in contention, with the Motormen adding the eventual winning run in the top of the second.

Steve Campbell started the two run rally with a base hit, followed by Grant McKenna who was hit by a Don Hoke pitch. Peter Sailkovich doubled, with Jim Richardson adding the first of his three hits to drive in a run.

Stickle scored the winning run for Devolin, singling, advancing to second on a walk to Horwood, and scoring on a base hit by Thompson.

Stickle also enjoyed the insurance run in the fourth, walking, and scoring on Thompson's second double of the night.

The Juniors' other run came in the bottom of the sixth and was scored by McKenna. He got his first bit of the season to lead off the inning, with Sailkovich and Richardson adding singles to drive him in.

Holloway finished the game with an eight hitter, striking out nine and walking two, with Sprackett took the loss on the Printer's mound, giving up 10 hits, walked four and issued two bases on balls.

Holloway added a pair of singles to help his own cause.

There was no need for Howard and Robert's Dave Skelton to slide on this play, as the ball is by shortstop Bill Harrison's glove in last night's Quinte Fastball League game at the Alemite. Skelton banged out a triple, double, and single to lead the Printers to an 8-0 win.

Foster and Reid Top Point Men

By CECIL S. PAUL

Wayne Foster of Newcastle and Danny Reid of Campbellford are the only point men at Brighton Speedway after the second week of stock car racing.

Wayne took over the lead from Sonny Kimmerly by picking up a pair of big wins Saturday. He came from the back of the pack in his qualifier to earn his first win of the season. He did a repeat performance in the six feature as he again showed the way to pick up a total of 75 points for the night. Wayne had to settle for a second place finish in the super, losing out on Ron Herriston of Brighton.

More stock class sizes were on hand but Bob Matthew is still the big man in this new class. A rookie, he has won both features and a qualifier out of four events. It was Bob all the way in both races on Saturday night as he made a clean sweep for a grand total of 125 points, well in front of second place driver Bill MacPherson. Kim Nicholls massed the bottom turn and left the track but no harm was done as he came back in but failed to finish in the points.

Ron Herrington also had a successful night as he took the six qualifier, leading from the start and outran the field of sixes and eights to win the big one to give him a solid hold on second place, only five points in back of Foster. Ron has three checkered flags so far — the leader in this field.

The six feature produced a few minor incidents over and above the exciting finish. Ron Hicks had a bit of trouble understanding the meaning of a black flag. He was blackflagged early in the 15 lap contest but failed to get off the track until the race had been run. He has been suspended for one week for running on a disqualification.

Bill Davis had a slight mechanical problem, his steering wheel fell off, which made it very difficult to manoeuvre the car around those four turns. He ended up in the infield and as the car came to a halt, Bill threw the wheel out of the window along with the steering column, before exiting the car under his own power.

Ron Herrington just failed to earn a big triple win by getting beaten out in the Feature by Wayne Foster.

Bob Prudhomme of Belleville managed to keep all four wheels on his car this week to come in for a win in his qualifier by leading all the way. He ran a close second behind Bill Card in the eight feature.

George Pettingill of Picton was plagued with bad luck in all events as he had to drop out of two races due to overheating. In both of these events, George was in front when his problem caused him to go away pointless, dropping him down into ninth place in the Red Cap Point Race.

Bill Card, who failed to pick up a point on opening night, made up for it Saturday. He took a second in his qualifier and came in for a big win in the eight feature to give him 70 points and place him in third place in the point race in the eights.

Ron Herrington outran the field of 14 cars to pick up a win in the main event of the night, outrunning all of the eights. Prudhomme, the pole sitter over the line, had to be content with a third place finish in this one.

This Saturday night, a special event will be held in the form of a sponsor's race where the men who supply the money for the cars get a chance to try their skill at the wheel and hopefully not do too much damage to the machines.

Peewees Rained Out, Bantams Play Seven

BOWMANVILLE (Special) — While a 30-minute rain forced peewee tennis matches sentinel Thurlow Township and Bowmanville to abandon their game after one inning here, Monday evening, the downpour merely delayed the start of a bantam division game between Trenton State Farm and the home team.

Thurlow owned a 1-0 lead after one inning in the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association peewee contest. Then the rains came and the diamond was soon under water.

Not far away, at Soper Park, the two bantam teams took to the shelter of the dugouts while they waited out the rain. A 7.15, 45 minutes past the scheduled starting time, the game was underway.

The teams managed to complete seven innings with the visiting State Farm squad coming out a come from behind 5-3 win.

Cooper Girls In Top Form

The Cooper Purinaettes rolled to their third consecutive win against no losses in Belleville and District Ladies Softball League play Monday night, dumping Robert Gambert Construction, 21-2.

Sandra Fleming took the win, striking out six and walking four. Sherri Forbes and Janice Lucas shared the loss.

Sue Wright led the winners at the plate with a home run, two doubles and two singles, with Shirley Fleming bagging a double and four singles. Jane Bailey added a home run and triple.

CTC Team Lone Winner

In the Belleville Industrial Softball League, two of the three games Monday ended in 6-6 ties. The Independents tied UIC, while The Intelligencer battled Stewart Warner to a draw. In the other game, Canadian Tire downed Public Utilities 9-5.

Earl Colton worked the mound for the Independents who came up with one run in the top of the seventh to tie the game. He allowed 11 hits, striking out five and walking three.

Rick Sullivan was the UIC hurler, giving up six runs on eight hits. He framed four and walked the same total.

Ken Bertrand led the Independents' 11-hit attack with a double and single, with Brian Cassleman and Doug Boomhower each bagging a double. Hunter Fournier had a pair of base hits, with George Foote, Paul Trumpour, Ron Fuller, Dave Skelly, and Colton each having one hit.

Clint Halliday paced the UIC attack with a homer and single, with Paul Embury blasting a four bagger as well. Pete Lloyd had three singles, with Bill Healy checking in with a double and single.

The Intelligencer pounded out 13 hits to Stewart Warner's eight. Glynn Reynolds hit for a home run and single, with Mike Bradshaw pounding a pair of triples. Moe Switzer had three singles, Fred Stickle and Terry Biddlecomb two each, and Tony Goncalves, and Dave Feeney one apiece.

Steve Beare had a home run and single to pace the Warnermen, with Eric Powell doubling, Dave Marvin, D-Fly McKay, Rod Bennett, Randy Charmichael, and Craig Adams all had a base hit.

Reg Pearson started for The Intell, going five innings, allowing four runs on five hits. He struck out one and walked one. Dave Feeney came on in relief, giving up two runs on three hits, fanning three and walking one.

Marvin pitched six innings of base hits, with George Foote, Paul Trumpour, Ron Fuller, Dave Skelly, and Colton each having one hit.

Rod Bennett completed the game, allowing two hits, striking out one.

The Utilities and Canadian Tire pounded out 28 hits, accounting for the 14 runs in their game.

John French picked up the win, giving up 14 hits, striking out two and walking four.

Ron Waite started for the Utilities, giving up all nine runs, on 12 hits. He fanned three and issued four free passes. Wilson Bulpit hurled the last two and one-third innings, giving up only two hits. He whiffed two and walked zero.

Bruce Clark, Larry Outindyke, and Wayne Trice each had a double and single to pace the winners.

Al Cole had a double and three singles for PUC, with Larry Mason and Jay Miller both singling twice.

BCI Moves To Final

Belleville Collegiate Institute won a berth in the Bay of Quinte High School Lacrosse League final game last night, defeating Centennial Chargers 11-4 in a game played at BCI field.

The undefeated BCI squad was held to two goals in the opening quarter by the close checking of the Chargers, but exploded for six in the second period, answered with only by CSS.

The teams traded two goals in the third quarter and one each in the fourth final period to round out the 11-4 count.

Brent Wainsley and Ted McBride each fired four goals for the winners, with singles going to John Gees, Steve Cowan and Andy Ricketts.

Wally Inwood had a pair for Centennial, with singletons going to Doug Nash and Bob Thompson.

In the other semi-final match, Quinte Secondary School meets Nicholson Catholic College at Quinte, today to decide the opponents of BCI.

The final match of the season will be Thursday, with the field yet to be determined, depending on the outcome of today's contest.

Top Pick Already Signed?

MONTREAL (CP) — Most professional hockey people say the 1974 crop of graduating junior hockey players offers slim pickings.

Aside from about 20 top prospects, there is little available from the amateur ranks.

Perhaps the best of the lot, defenceman Greg Joly of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League, is reported signed with Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League.

The NHL is scheduled to hold its secret amateur draft today and the Capitals have scheduled a news conference at which they plan to unveil their prize catch.

Kansas City Scouts, who begin play along with the Capitals next season, are reported to have been negotiating with Wilf Paiement, 18, a winger who had 50 goals for St. Catharines of the Ontario Hockey Association this season.

Paiement is available under an agreement between the NHL and Canadian Amateur Hockey Association which allows the NHL teams to take exceptional 18-year-old juniors in the first two rounds of the draft.

It will cost $40,000 to draft an exceptional junior provided he signs with the drafting team. Selection 1-50 will cost $20,000, picks 51-90 will be $10,000 each, and remaining picks will be $2,000. Last season, 168 players were selected in a six-hour session.

The money collected will go to either the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association or the United States Amateur Hockey Association for redistribution to the developing club.

This year the draft will be conducted by telephone. The NHL board of governors decided to make the proceedings such a secret that the order of selection may not be known until the annual meetings in June.

By keeping the selections quiet, the NHL hopes to be able to gain an edge over the rival World Hockey Association in signing the talent. The WHA draft is scheduled for Toronto Friday.

Aside from Joly and Paiement, other top picks appear to be defencemen Bruce Affleck, Rick Chartraw and Ron Greschner, left wingers Bill Lochead and Clark Gillies and centre Ron Chipperfield.

Chipperfield scored 90 goals for Brandon Wheat Kings of the WCHL this year.

Gillies was Joly's team-mate on the Pats as they swept to the Memorial Cup title and Lochead had 57 goals and 64 assists for Oshawa Generals of the OHA.

Chartraw was with Kitchener Rangers of the OHA and Greschner played for the WCHL's New Westminster Bruins.

Affleck played in the United States last season with University of Denver and California Golden Seals are reported to favor the youngster.

For the first time since they joined the league in 1967, the Seals will use their own choice in the amateur draft. Previously, they traded them away.

The Seals will draft third, just ahead of New York Islanders.

Montreal Canadiens will have five choices in the first round—the fifth, seventh, 10th, 12th and 19th. Montreal acquired the fifth in a trade with Vancouver Canucks last year, the seventh in a trade with St. Louis Blues for centre Dave Gardner this year, the 10th from Atlanta Flames last summer, the 12th from Los Angeles Kings a few years ago and the 19th is their own.

Minnesota North Stars will pick sixth, Pittsburgh Penguins eighth, Detroit Red Wings ninth, Buffalo Sabres 11th, Toronto Maple Leafs 13th followed by New York Rangers. Montreal, Chicago Black Hawks, Philadelphia Flyers and Boston Bruins.

Quiet Draft Opens Today

By AL COLLETTI
The Canadian Press

President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League went to a lot of trouble to keep the poachers away from today's amateur draft in Montreal.

The poachers, of course, being the rival World Hockey Association which allows the NHL teams to take exceptional 18-year-old juniors in the first two rounds of the draft.

Although the WHA didn't sign a single NHL first-round draft choice last season, NHL owners are not willing to keep their top choices.

This time, Campbell opted for a secret draft by telephone from the various NHL cities to his Montreal headquarters.

Whether it will work remains to be seen.

"We'll just assume very kid drafted is a first-round choice and we'll talk salary on that basis," said a WHA agent.

There also are computerized reports on virtually every worthy junior player in hockey which some NHL clubs subscribe to. Those kind of secrets are hard to keep from spreading.

Forty-eight hours before the draft started, Washington Capitals were issued a press release saying they would be looking for players who can take the beating of an 80-game season.

"Of course, we want them to be able to dish it out, too," said Milt Schmidt, general manager of the NHL expansion franchise.

Schmidt got the first pick on a coin toss with Sid Abel, general manager of the other expansion franchise, Kansas City Scouts.

Then a Washington newspaper reported that the Capitals planned to pick defensive star Greg Joly of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League as their first choice. Joly, chosen as the most valuable player in the Memorial Cup playoffs at Calgary, would be classed as an exceptional player since he is 18 under the eligibility rules. His 20th birthday is this week.

The Washington Star-News said Joly had accepted a five-year pact calling for an estimated $400,000.

With the NHL ruling that exceptional 18-and 19-year-olds are eligible for the draft, scouts have hundreds of additional players to rate.

Exceptional players are designated class 55 or class 56, those juniors 20 and over are all class 54.

"Each member club of the league will be permitted to exercise one claim in either its first or second round for an exceptional player, which means class 55 or 56," Campbell said. "Should one each in one club has five first-round draft choices (as in the case of Montreal Canadiens), it won't make a bit of difference. They are going to get only one exceptional player, if they want him."

Campbell said the newsmedia would be barred from the draft and, when it pleases the NHL, the names of the players will be made public.

Johnston Traded

Ed Johnston, traded by Toronto Maple Leafs to St. Louis Blues, is reported to be disappointed by the move but terms the deal "a good one" for his former Toronto team. An experienced goaltender, Johnston goes to Blues for right-winger Gary Sabourin.

Coaches Are Rapped At Toronto Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — It is a myth that hockey players have to fight to survive, a provincial inquiry into violence in amateur hockey was told Monday.

William McMurtry, a Toronto lawyer who is heading the inquiry called for by Rene Brunelle, minister of community and social services, said harsher penalties would eliminate most of "cheap shots," intimidation and fighting" from the game.

"We should start to reconsider our approach to the game," he said. "Every problem lies more with the coaches than the referees. Some coaches seem to think it (physical intimidation) is part of the game."

The inquiry was sparked by a violence-filled Ontario Hockey Association Junior B playoff game last April 16 involving Bramalea Blues and Hamilton Red Wings in which 189 minutes in penalties were called and several players injured. Bramalea won the contest 3-2.

"This is not whichunt," McMurtry said. "We're using one game as a good example of the problems facing hockey."

Earlier testimony by Richard Hay, former coach of the Brampton club, indicated that objectionable conduct has been increasing.

"Over the last 10 years, it's unbelievable what players are getting away with on the ice," he testified.

Hay resigned the morning following the April 16 game and after consultations with club president Gerry Henderson, the team also was pulled out of its best-of-seven all-Ontario final.

Hay, Henderson, Gerry Official, the team manager, and the referee himself subsequently were suspended by the OHA for not continuing with the series.

The referee said it received both threats and other warnings of violence if it showed up in Hamilton for the second game of the series.

Hay blamed the officiating for letting the game get out of control.

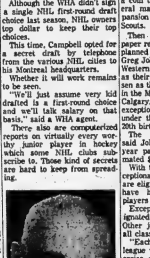
He said he was upset by "the amount of brawling" and added that the game was full of "cheap shots" with players highsticking and elbowing in the corners after the whistle had been blown.

Dean Poapst of the Bramalea club, who had the cornea of his left eye scratched during a second-period brawl, told the inquiry he had been taught since the age of five or six to come front anyone who came after him.

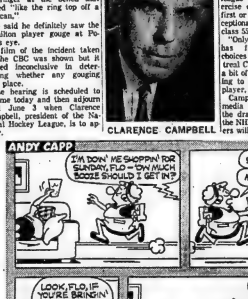
Mike Forbes, a Bramalea defenceman, said he heard a Hamilton player go over to his bench following the altercation with Poapst and say: "I got him."

Dean Hartwell, a Bramalea right winger, also said he heard the remark.

Bramalea netminder Barrie Oakes said he saw the Hamilton player with his fist clenched throughout the brawl and that "something black" was protruding from each end of it.



He said he could not be sure whether the object was "tape or a bar" but that it was missing when play eventually resumed.



John Gignac, a spectator at the game, said he saw the Red Wing player drop an object off his finger at the bench. He also looked "like the ring top off a pen."

He said he definitely saw the Hamilton player gouge Poapst's eye.

A film of the incident taken by the CBC was shown but it proved inconclusive in determining whether any gouging took place.

The hearing is scheduled to resume today and then adjourn until June 3 when Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, is to appear.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

Duncan Has Selling Job

EDMONTON (CP) — Jim Duncan has a job in football that can best be described as tenuous. But he hopes it will become secure this week.

Duncan is general manager of a football club that doesn't have any equipment, players or a league to play in.

He is trying to sell the London, Ont., club to the Canadian Football League.

If CFL owners decide against admitting London, Duncan will return to the United States and look for a job and Bob Harris, who would be London's coach and general manager, will go back to making money in real estate, construction and various other businesses.

The decision on the London application is expected Thursday when the CFL owners meet.

The league's general managers meet today, and the Eastern and Western Conferences will hold separate meetings Wednesday. The owners get together Thursday and Friday for the finishing touches and, the London applicants hope, make decisions.

Neither Duncan nor Harris can wait until next year: Harris because of the need to start construction on a stadium that would be ready in 1975 when the club would like to start playing; Duncan because he knows his bosses won't pay him for hanging around while CFL owners are making up their minds about expansion.

Harris figures it will cost him $6 million to build a stadium at today's prices. A year from now they probably will be considerably higher.

Duncan, who lives in Calgary, said in an interview:

"I took this job on a gamble. If we get the franchise, and I think we should, I'll have a job and a challenge—to build a team from the ground up. If we don't, I'll have to move back to the States and start looking for a job."

He said he miss coaching in the CFL as he did with Calgary Stampeders of the WFC from 1960 to 1973.

"Hell, I'm 49 years old. I'd miss being at field level, but I've got to start thinking of getting into the administrative end of football.

Harvey – Now a Flame

Four Player Trade

The straight two-for-two trade was announced Monday by North Stars general manager Jack Gordon and Atlanta general manager Cliff Fletcher.

Both Flesch and Martineau played last season for Atlanta's Omaha farm team in the Central League.

Harvey performed for Minnesota last year, except for a brief period when he was suspended after a dispute with former coach Parker MacDonald.

Byers spent most of last season with the North Stars' New Haven farm club in the American League.

Latta Tops Shannonville

In a game postponed from the first week of the schedule, Latta took a 4-2 win from Shannonville in a South Hastings Baseball League game played in Latta Monday night.

Dave Bamber fired the win on the Latta mound, giving up only three hits in the six inning contest. He had five strikeouts and issued two bases on balls.

Bill Barberstock started on the Shannonville rubber, giving three innings before being lifted in place of Bob Reid. Barberstock gave up all four Latta runs, on six hits. He fanned three and did not walk a batter.

Reid came on to pitch four innings of hitless, shutout ball for the Shannonville crew, striking out two and walking one.

Bob Smith led the winners with a home run and single, with John Mortenson banging two singles. Wayne Harrison and Bamber each had a base hit to add to the winners' total.

Barberstock had two singles for Shannonville, with Mike Morris the only other hitter.

Duke Ellington 'Rare Genius'

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington was eulogized Monday as "a genius of the rarest kind" in a funeral service filled with musical tributes to the United States jazz composer from his fellow artists.

Ellington "made good musicians sound great, and great musicians sound even greater," Jazz historian Stanley Dance told an overflow crowd of 10,000 that filled the huge Episcopal Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine to bid farewell to the Duke, who died Friday at age 75.

" Dance, author of The World of Duke Ellington and a longtime friend of the musician, said:

"In the truest sense of the phrase, he was a citizen of the world.

"That is a cliche, perhaps, but how few deserve it. He was loved throughout the whole world, by all levels of society. He conquered more cities than Napoleon and by much better methods.

"He was a master of all he turned his hand to. . . . He was a natural aristocrat who never lost the common touch and the greatest innovator in his field. He knew what some called genius was the exercise of gifts which stemmed from God."

Dentists to Keep Low-cost Service

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario dentists will not abandon their low-cost denture service despite proposed government legislation allowing denturists to operate outside dentists' supervision, a spokesman for the Royal College of Dental Surgeons said Monday.

Lawyer Richard Shibley told a legislative committee that dentists intend to continue the low-cost service for needy patients.

Changes in the proposed denture therapists act would allow licensed denturists to work without supervision in cases where there are no teeth in the upper or lower jaw or both.

Dentists have opposed giving denturists the right to work unsupervised and contend that their low-cost plan meets the needs of those on fixed or low incomes.

Mr. Shibley said problems with the dentists' plan have arisen because those who might qualify often do not know the plan exists. The plan provides for a full set of dentures for a maximum of $180.

"What is really required is better lines of communication between welfare agencies and dentistry."

A spokesman for the Ontario Dental Association, supplier of dentures to dentists, said the association would encourage its members to continue voluntarily serving dentists under the plan.

Mr. Shibley also told the committee that the college accepts a provision in the proposed health disciplines act requiring dentists to itemize costs when billing for dentures.

That proposal would allow patients to withhold payment until detailed billing is produced.

Dr. Harry Parrott (PC—Oxford), a dentist, said misunderstanding on the part of the public over costs of preparing dentures contributed to the denturist controversy.

But he argued that the provision would be "pushing too far" by removing patients' liability to pay bills not itemized.

Health Minister Frank Miller said the provision removing the patients' liability was necessary because dentists had not always complied with a measure introduced two years ago calling for itemized bills.

Scores Stripped In Drug Search

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General George Kerr has asked for a report on a police raid during which hotel patrons of both sexes apparently were ordered to remove their clothes.

Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) said a combined force of about 50 RCMP and Ontario regional policemen raided the Landmark Hotel located on the Queen Elizabeth Way earlier this month.

"Wherein apparently an undetermined number of both male and female patrons were taken to the washrooms and ordered to strip off their clothes in order that a physical search of their persons could be carried out."

Mr. Singer said when the police acted legally and properly.

He said the Narcotic Control Act requires that police have only "reasonable belief" that drugs are on the premises to be permitted to search any persons and any person found there.

He denied that all of the 115 hotel patrons were stripped but said most people were stripped only Chief James Gayder, chief of operations for the Niagara force, said he did not know any details of the raid.

A Toronto nursing student, who was searched during the raid said Monday in an interview it was a terrifying experience.

Carrie Berhaller, 19, a first-year nursing student at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, said police came through the doors and shouted, "put your hands up on the table, and don't move."

She said undercover police men lined the men up against a wall and frisked them while people were found to be "clean" they were ordered out of the hotel.

Mr. Kerr said he did not think the police raid was quite as "notorious" as described by Mr. Singer, but promised a report to the legislature.

Following the May 11 raid on the hotel near Fort Erie, four persons were charged with possession of marijuana, two with drinking under age and one with intoxication.

Police found less than six ounces of marijuana during the raid.

Inspector Frank Parkhouse, chief of the Niagara regional police department's intelligence squad, which directed the raid, said police acted legally and properly.

He said the Narcotic Control Act requires that police have only "reasonable belief" that drugs are on the premises to be permitted to search any persons and any person found there.

He denied that all of the 115 hotel patrons were stripped but said most people were stripped only Chief James Gayder, chief of operations for the Niagara force, said he did not know any details of the raid.

A Toronto nursing student, who was searched during the raid said Monday in an interview it was a terrifying experience.

Carrie Berhaller, 19, a first-year nursing student at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, said police came through the doors and shouted, "put your hands up on the table, and don't move."

She said undercover police men lined the men up against a wall and frisked them while others searched the women's purses.

After asking a policeman for consent to go to the washroom, Miss Berhaller said she encountered two policewomen in the washroom who ordered her to strip.

The policewomen refused to let her call her parents before consenting to the search, she said, and told her she would be forcibly stripped if she refused to consent.

She said she consented to the search after the two women tried to force her on to the floor and then threatened to bring two male officers to complete the search if she continued to resist.

The Dutch scholar Erasmus, who died in 1536, maintained that the truly well-mannered visitor should kiss his host, his servants, all the children and the dog and cat.

Doctors Want Assistants' Roles Widened

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario medical professionals want the legal right to hand over some medical procedures to trained nurses and assistants.

A legislative committee reviewing proposed health legislation heard Monday from representatives of hospitals, dentists, and physicians who said they support an amendment that would give them that right.

Roger Shute, representing the Ontario Hospitals Association, said that, for example, a nurse in an emergency ward is acting outside her legal functions by ordering an x-ray for a patient with a broken arm.

He said hospitals are concerned that emergency care be expanded so in situations where no doctor is immediately available.

Food Prices Review Board Under Fire for Full Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Exactly one year after its birth, the controversial Food Prices Review Board is still being thrashed from pillar to post by opposition critics for failing to come to grips with increased food prices.

The position is a familiar one for board chairman Beryl Plumptre and her 50-member staff, whose function it is to review prices and costs and to report to the public on inside details of the food industry.

Now, with a federal election campaign, the board is being criticized for political interference by Progressive Conservative consumer critic James McGrath, member of Parliament for St. John's East, because Mrs. Plumptre says studies now being prepared will continue to be released before the July 8 election date.

The board is expected to release reports on hamburger prices, turkeys, feed grains, beef, pork and sugar, a board spokesman said. A regular quarterly report is due in late June.

The flood of material is likely to further enrage board critics, the Conservatives in particular. Since last May, the board has put out three quarterly reports analyzing food price movements and has issued special studies and recommendations o eggs, dairy products and bread.

There was also a special investigation of retailing in food stores by 80 investigators who found 1,800 cases of possibly unethical practices. And Mrs. Plumptre has made many public appearances explaining her mandate from Parliament.

None of this has satisfied critics. One possible reason is that Mrs. Plumptre has refused to put the finger on any one sector of the food industry as the villain behind food price increases.

While consumers blame supermarkets, producers, processors, labor, and others, who make inputs in the food industry chain, Mrs. Plumptre says no one sector is gouging the public.

"It's none of them really. It's all of them. It's all of us. We're all caught up in this one way or the other," she said in one interview.

First Bath Almost Fatal

Woman, 83, Trapped 3 Days In Bathtub in Unheated Home

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — "I was so scared I thought I was going to die," 83-year-old Lena Robbins said Monday, recalling the three days she spent stuck in her bathtub.

From 8 p.m. last Wednesday until a neighbor rescued her Saturday night she lay wedged in the tub, with night temperatures in her unheated apartment dipping to 40 degrees.

"I was scared but there was nothing I could do," Mrs. Robbins said in an interview from her hospital bed. "I couldn't get out."

"I polended that wall until I was blue in the face but nobody heard me," she said shewing her bruised hands. "I nearly froze to death, I was so cold."

To make matters worse, it was the first tub bath of her 83 years, having been a sponge bather all along.

Mrs. Robbins, who moved into the apartment about a month ago, said she had reservations at first about the size of the tub. But her mind was made up.

"I'm going to take the plunge," she recalled having decided. "But I guess I took the plunge too long."

The telephone rang constantly during her 72-hour confinement, Mrs. Robbins said, and she knew it would be friends checking on her.

Help finally came from Vern Holroyd, who, along with his wife, had been phoning her Friday and Saturday. Visiting the premises, he heard her cry for help.

Mr. Holroyd, 75 years old and weighing about 100 pounds, ripped off a storm window and squeezed into the building.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, May 29

Aries (March 21-April 19) You will start off like a ball of fire today where work is concerned, but other interests will siphon off much of your steam.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) It is still in your best interest to continue to be cautious with your money, particularly if doing business with strangers.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) An outsider will try to poke his nose into your family affairs today. The trouble is, you may be misguided by the advice.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You have in mind a well-thought-out way to handle a problem. Unfortunately, it's not likely you'll follow through on your plans.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Funds you've earmarked to meet specific obligations are going to be used for more frivolous things instead.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you'll be doing with friends today will be tarnished by one in the group who doesn't quite fit in.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're not likely to get as much co-operation from authority figures today as you'll need, unless you do a real sales joke.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll be putting yourself out for others far more than they'll be extending themselves for you. To top it off, your efforts won't be appreciated.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try your best today without expecting others to praise you. They won't. Do it for personal satisfaction.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you're trying very hard to please is still indifferent to your efforts. Don't lose heart.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In a situation where you show an interest you have no right to expect the other guy to be more generous than you would be with him.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Something you're very enthusiastic about isn't everything you'd like to believe it is. Stand back and take another look.

To Your Good Health

Progeny's Blood Types Can Vary

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My marriage seems to have fallen apart. My husband accuses me of having relations with another man, which is not true. I've never done anything like that but his imagination has him beside himself.

He says the children aren't his because his blood is type O. That's good news. Our baby girl is A and son is B. He says this is not possible because his is O type.

I know they are his but he says he has have proof and then will beg forgiveness. Please answer with definite statements, no buts or ands, please. — D.S.

.....

If you don't want any buts or ands, then why don't you have your blood typed?

A child's blood type is not determined by that of one parent; it depends on the types of both parents.

Your husband is entirely wrong when he says type A or B to the children is "impossible" because he is type O.

A type O parent can have children of either type A or type B if the other parent is type AB.

So don't you think you'd better have your own blood typed? If it proves out type AB, then it will be time for your husband to start begging forgiveness. He just doesn't understand how ABO blood types behave.

.....

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 51 years old and had a menstrual period for a year. Would hormone pills make my menstrual period again? Basically, what are they for? What are the chances of getting pregnant after that length of time? Would I be safe in using foam and is it effective? — M.R.S. . . .

After a year without periods, you can forget about pregnancy.

Hormone medication may cause some breakthrough bleeding but they will not be true menstrual periods. Such medication is given to combat such menopausal symptoms as hot flashes—your ovaries have ceased producing female hormones and that leads to the hot flashes in some (not all) women. So you are given hormones to make up for the hormones no longer being secreted by the ovaries.

I see no need whatever for you to use foam contraceptive.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there anything you can do to prevent swelling of the eyelids after a bout of crying? After watching TV very sad show last night, I cried quite a bit.

I was shocked to see what my eyes looked like. Why does this happen?—Mrs. G.M.K. . . . .

The tissues around the eyes are thin. Put your finger to the area and you can feel the difference. This is the reason for the concession associated with crying. The resultant fluid accumulation causes a puffiness and a discoloration.

It is variable with different people and there is really little that can be done. Often, though, cold compresses will help.

The only other thing I can suggest is that you watch hay fever shows.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You have mentioned an organization called Overeaters Anonymous for compulsive eaters. Can you give me an address to write to? — J.P.

Yes, and it's a new address for that organization: Overeaters Anonymous, Box 2615, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I'm 17 and was told that there wasn't a chance of getting pregnant if I had sexual intercourse during my period or two weeks after. The person who told me this said that they learned it in a biology class.—T.S.Y.

With "advice" like that going around, no wonder so many girls are getting pregnant. Pregnancy is unlikely during the period but it is possible but is dangerous. The closer you move from your period the greater is the possibility of pregnancy.

Penalties Stiff

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Legislation has been passed by parliament making death or life imprisonment the maximum penalty for harboring or failing to report the presence of terrorist infiltrators. The previous maximum sentence was 20 years.

Extend Bounty

PRETORIA (AP) — Postmaster-General Louis Rive of South Africa announced that about 1,200 black messengers, runners and other laborers will qualify for the Christmas savings bonus for the first time this year. Only skilled Negroes such as postmasters, clerks and other administrative workers previously eligible.

Opening lead—5♥

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Reise and Dormer point out that the normal carefree declarer will go down one trick on notrump. He will win the opening heart lead; note that clubs are the suit to be established and lead a club. East will take the ace and lead a second heart to clear the suit for West.

South will still be able to make the hand if he has take the second heart and worked out an end play against West. But the chances are that he will take the diamond finesse and complain about his luck.

The careful declarer will try to count to nine sure tricks. He will see that he needs two diamonds. So, at trick two he will lead a jack to dummy's ace and lose the diamond finesse to his hand. West won't be able to hurt declarer with a heart lead. South will have time to clear the clubs and make his nine tricks.

What if West leads a second spade when he gets in with the king of diamonds? South will be sure of his contract, since nothing bad can happen to him in the spade suit.

CARD Sense

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Double	Pass	1N.T.
Pass	2♠	Pass	?

You, South, hold:

♠Q 9 8 3 ♥K 3 ♦7 4 3 2 ♣4 6 5.

What do you do now?

A—Bid three hearts. Your unbalanced and very close choice is to pass. Do not bid two notrump.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding two hearts your partner has bid two spades after your notrump. What do you do now?

IN MEMORIAM

HOLLEY — In loving memory of our dear son Barry William who passed away May 28, 1970.
No one knows our heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell,
They miss the help we gave them,
But the love we loved them well.
—Never forgotten by Mom and Dad.

FOOTE — In loving memory of a dear mother, Florence, who passed away May 28, 1972.
We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, you, and more.
For you were the kindest mother dear,
Come smiling thro' our door.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Marion, Bill, Bonnie and family.

FOOTE — In loving memory of our dear mom, Florence, who passed away May 28, 1972.
Time heals the pain we were suffering,
That time hides not a single tear,
No flower nor weary emblem,
And whispered, "Rest in peace."
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
By the valley of rest we know,
We know she sleeps, we know but soon,
We will meet her.
Always remembered by the family.

FOOTE — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother who died one year May 28, 1972.
There's a face that haunts my memory,
There's a voice I long to hear,
There's a smile I can't forget,
Memories linger.
And I thank God for those wonderful years.
I see you suffer, I saw you sick,
But all I could do was pray and plead God
That knew you were suffering.
That's the best I could do for you,
He has closed your weary eyelids,
And whispered, "Rest in peace."
You have left a loving memory,
That will always remain with me.
—Ever remembered by husband Don.

Coroner Full-time Job

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Coroner Doug Jack is perhaps the only man in British Columbia who has been embarrassed because of a funeral.

The man's next of kin were notified, his death certificate signed and his body duly buried by bereaved relatives.

"Two weeks later, as a result of routine fingerprint checks, I received word that the deceased had been arrested in Ontario," Mr. Jack said.

"Boy, was my face red—although his relatives took it pretty well because they were glad to have him back."

As coroner for New Westminster, Coquitlam, Port Moody and Delta on the British Columbia mainland, Mr. Jack's duties are a constant reminder of death. But he is relaxed and affable and has developed a detached attitude reflecting a cool professionalism devoid of callousness.

"Whenever I view a body, I look upon it as just an object. That may sound callous, but there's no other way."

Mr. Jack, 53, served in the RAF in the Second World War. After the war he joined the B.C. Provincial Police, serving in Westminster County until he joined the New Westminster city police in 1947.

He became a records clerk in 1950 and coroner's deputy in 1959 when he left the force. In 1967 he was appointed coroner and last fall he took charge of the five municipalities.

He and Vancouver's Glen McDonald, who is also B.C.'s supervising coroner, are the only full-time coroners in the province. The other 170 coroners receive $50 a day during an inquest and $25 a day during an inquiry.

He tries to avoid unnecessary inquests.

"We sometimes get as many as eight to 10 deaths over a holiday weekend and I'm not about to tie up my court in an endless string of inquests," he said.

Mr. Jack said his job is essentially investigative. He gets the verbal story of a death, then examines police and police reports and finally decides whether to initiate an inquest.

Next he will interview witnesses, prepare a detailed outline and hold the inquest.

One aspect of his job is sometimes an ordeal—he is responsible for taking a relative into the morgue to identify the body.

"You never know how they are going to react and I sometimes have people faint on me."

Mr. Jack said men will sometimes go to pieces on viewing the body of someone they loved while women tend to be more stoical.

He tries to ensure that no mother is asked to identify the body of her child.

"But some mothers insist on identifying the body, perhaps because that is the only way they can believe the child is dead."

Another of his duties is to visit the scene of all suspected homicides because the body cannot be removed until he gives the order.

"Police officers are trained never to touch anything at the scene, but in my official capacity I can sometimes suggest moving the body so as to reveal an unseen wound."

When a homicide charge is laid, an inquest waiver is issued and the matter is out of the coroner's jurisdiction.

"This is to ensure that an inquest, often a very open affair, doesn't impinge on the accused's right to a fair trial."

Motor vehicle accidents are the main cause of violent death in his area with industrial accidents a close second.

"The industrials are the most challenging and satisfying inquiries because they usually lead to a revision of safety regulations that prevent a recurrence.

"Motor vehicle accidents are worse because we know some maniac is going to run a stop sign the very next night and there's little we can do to correct the human element."

Regan Warns Against Wage-price Controls

HALIFAX (CP) — Premier Gerald Regan urged the federal Progressive Conservative party Monday to abandon its plan for wage and price controls or risk severely damaging the economies of the Atlantic provinces particularly that of Nova Scotia.

While the Nova Scotia economy was beginning to surge ahead in some sectors, close statistical gaps with the rest of Canada, Mr. Regan warned that Tory policies would, at best, freeze the economy of the province "in its tracks . . . and, instead of helping Nova Scotia and the other Atlantic provinces in their fight to overcome regional disparities, they would embalm the disparity that already exists."

"It may be that Conservatives' price and wage control policy was devised as an attempt to win votes in Ontario, without giving a moment's thought to the policy in Atlantic and Western Canada," Mr. Regan said.

Ulster Protestants End 15-day Strike

BELFAST (AP) — The Protestant Ulster Workers' Council today suspended the 15-day-old strike that paralyzed Northern Ireland's economy and brought down the Ulster government.

Jim Smyth, spokesman for the council, said strikers were being told to return to work because "we don't feel there is any point in prolonging the hardship."

But he left open the possibility that unless their demands are met the strike will begin again. It has been suspended, not called off completely, he said.

Smyth said there will be a phased return to work, and that heavy industry could not resume until Monday because sufficient power would not be available until then. However, the council sent some utility workers back to work today.

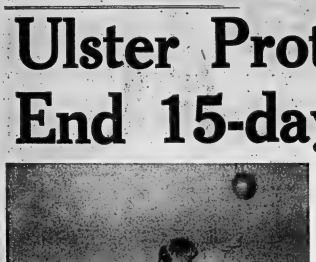
In London, Britain's administration for Northern Ireland, Merlyn Rees, said Britain will negotiate only with elected representatives and not with the strike leaders.

"I shall give no concessions or negotiations to people attempting to change the political situation in this way. My job is firm, and I have the full support of my colleagues on this," he said.

Rees said a "short-term solution" to the constitutional crisis would be for civil servants to run the provincial government, but eventually power sharing by Protestants and Catholics would be "the only way out of the Northern Ireland problem."

He spoke as Prime Minister Harold Wilson prepared to meet with his cabinet to discuss ways to solve the crisis in Northern Ireland, prompted by the resignation Tuesday of Protestant members of Chief Minister Brian Faulkner's Executive, the provincial government.

Leaders of the walkout gave no immediate reason for calling it off. The move reversed early extremist pledges not to return to work until Wilson made his announcement on the provincial administration.



Strike leaders, who want an end to Northern Ireland's first attempt at sharing power between its Protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority, are demanding the release or trial of 31 persons arrested during the strike, and said their aim still is fresh elections to the assembly.

End of the strike eased fears of Roman Catholics, cut off from supplies by Protestant road barricades, that their families faced starvation.

Roman Catholic spokesmen in Belfast said Tuesday they had only two days' food supplies with the only hope of replenishment the blockade-running trucks travelling at night to the Irish republic.

They said there was increasing danger of shootings between the Protestant extremists and the Irish Republican army, which was helping the truck drivers evade the blockades.

The IRA has been quite during the first 15 days of the strike. Tuesday night a bomb in Londonderry critically injured a British soldier, and military authorities feared it might herald a renewal of the violence which already has claimed 1,030 lives in Northern Ireland.

Whitlam Claims Victory

CANBERRA (AP) — Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam claimed victory today for his Labor party in national elections held 11 days ago.

Whitlam said in a broadcast his government would have a majority in both houses of Parliament.

He said Labor will hold 66 or 67 seats in the 121-seat House of Representatives. The tally in the Senate will not be final for two more weeks, but Labor is expected to take 31 of 60 seats, a gain of five.

Before the broadcast, Liberal opposition leader Bill Snedden said Labor should not take the close vote as a clear mandate for continuing government policies.

But Whitlam told Australians, "The thrust and clear meaning of your decision is beyond doubt. You have strongly reaffirmed our program of 1972."

Canadian Captured

CALGARY (CP) — A Canadian company's helicopter carrying a pilot and two passengers has been reported captured by guerrillas in Northern Ethiopia where five men are still being held following a similar incident in March.

Radio stations CFCN said the helicopter was captured while on its way to obtain the release of the five men.

Jonathan Pride, vice-president of Canwest Aviation Ltd. of Calgary, said Tuesday the external affairs department in Ottawa notified him the company's helicopter and pilot, Orgon Wyatt, 30, of Calgary, were captured Monday.

He said he was unable to confirm that the two passengers were employees of Tenneco Oil Co. of Houston, Tex., as had been reported earlier Tuesday by Calgary radio station CFCN.

Mr. Pride said the helicopter was leased by Canwest to Tenneco for an oil survey mission

Court to Be Picketed

TORONTO (CP) — Encouraged by a black leader from the United States, about 160 persons met Tuesday to plan to picket a Mississauga court where a black youth is to be tried for the slaughter next week. Paul Smithers, 18, was convicted April 22 in the death of 17-year-old Barrie Ross Cobby, a white player on a midget hockey team that was playing Smithers' team in a game. Evidence at the trial showed that the game was loaded with racial insults and that a fight developed outside the arena after the game last Feb. 18.

Storm Toll 14

SYDNEY (AP) — Fourteen persons from four yachts were confirmed dead or feared drowned during five days of high winds and giant seas in the Tasman Sea off Sydney. Latest feared casualty is the 23-foot yacht Brumby, which left Broken Bay near Sydney with six persons aboard May 18 for New Zealand. It has failed to send promised radio messages and the body of a man believed to be its skipper has been washed ashore.

Kissinger Coming

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger likely will go to Ottawa next month but mainly to attend a NATO ministerial conference rather than discuss relations with Canada, Officials said Tuesday some last-minute snag might force Kissinger to call off the trip but so far the "firm presumption" is that the month-travelled diplomat will be in Ottawa June 18-19.

Fulbright Defeated

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arkansas Gov. Dale Bumpers and the state giant-killer reputation Tuesday by winning Democratic nomination to the Senate seat ending the 30-year career of Senator J. W. Fulbright, one of the most powerful in United States foreign policy.

The three-time former senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, like Fulbright a leading critic of U.S. policy in the Vietnam war, won the Democratic nomination for a comeback race in the fall.

Bumpers, an obscure school board member and city attorney in Charleston, Ark., four years ago, ran up a stunning 2-to-1 victory margin over Fulbright, who has been chairman of the powerful foreign relations committee since 1959.

Stanfield Selects Candidate

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — The Conservative party will back Charles Thomas as its candidate in Moncton, party Leader Robert Stanfield said today.

He told reporters that if Moncton Mayor Leonard Jones, nominated by local Conservatives last night, wins election, he will not be accepted into the party caucus.

"I am fully prepared, if necessary, to risk my leadership and prospects of electoral success on this issue," said Mr. Stanfield.

He said he rejects all compromise in his responsibility not to give leadership that sought harmony and unity.

He made the statements after meeting with Mayor Jones and the Moncton Conservative association.

The mayor is a bitter foe of the Official Languages Act and Mr. Stanfield has said Mr. Jones has identified himself with efforts to prevent the French-speaking minority from achieving language quality in Moncton.

Israel, Syria Reported In Accord on Pullback

BULLETIN

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli and Syrian forces agreement today after 33 days of truce efforts by United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

They said a formal accord was awaiting ratification from Premier Golda Meir's cabinet. No official confirmation was available.

The sources said the agreement called for the two governments to withdraw their armies behind a United Nations' buffer zone.

Unofficial Israeli informants said 1,250 UN troops would set up the buffer and that it would be one to four miles wide. They said it would stretch from Mount Hermon along the Golan Heights, including the abandoned Golan Capital of Quneitra and a strip 200 yards west of the wrecked town.

They said on each side of the buffer the armies would be reduced in two corridors, each six miles wide. In the front-line corridor, troops would be limited to 6,000, with 75 tanks and 36 short-range cannon. In the deeper zone, each side would be restricted to 450 tanks, with no long-range artillery or antiaircraft missiles.

Despite the lack of official confirmation, reporters were invited to Mrs Meir's office to drink a toast with Kissinger.

"It's all wrapped up," said one source close to Kissinger's negotiations. "It only needs the cabinet to ratify it and that is a formality."

The cabinet was to meet today in a special session.

A special session of the Knesset—parliament—was called for Thursday to hear a statement by Mrs. Meir, another indication that the separation of forces agreement had been successfully concluded. The sources said Mrs. Meir would outline details of the accord.

"It is expected that an announcement of the agreement will be made tonight," said Israel's state radio.

The radio said the disengagement pact would be signed by' Israeli and Syrian delegates in Geneva at the end of this week.

Mrs. Meir's cabinet met in the morning to discuss the pact, then scheduled an afternoon session during which it would decide "yes or no," according to an Israeli government communique. It said the decision would be final.

Rubber Snakes Will Be Tested Against Pigeons

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — City fishers, fed up with pigeons that pinch worms making on downtown properties, are resorting to rubber warfare.

Their secret weapon is a couple of toy snakes, which they hope will be a gentle nudge to the pigeons to move on.

The plan goes into operation today on one city building.

Nixon's Lawyer Wants Court to Stand Clear

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's Watergate lawyer says the Supreme Court should not intervene in the legal battle over White House tapes.

James St. Clair said Tuesday that the dispute over tapes subpoenaed by special prosecutor Leon Jaworski should be decided by the United States Court of Appeals before any involvement of the Supreme Court. Jaworski has asked the high court to step into the case.

Meanwhile, Jaworski said there is evidence that Nixon probably discussed with aides use of the Internal Revenue Service to audit and harass political enemies, and he asked a federal court to turn over to him a White House tape which he believes contains that conversation.

A U.S. District Court had ruled that Nixon must surrender the tapes, and St. Clair asked the appeals court last Friday to overturn the ruling.

On the same day, Jaworski asked the Supreme Court to assume jurisdiction, which would mean bypassing the appeals court.

Italian Leftists Stage Strike After Bomb Kills Anti-Fascists

ROME (Reuter) — Italy came to a temporary halt today as a four-hour general strike was mounted in protest against Tuesday's bomb blast in Brescia which killed six persons and injured 94.

Factories, shops, schools and public transport closed through out the country as thousands of people took to the streets in organized rallies and marches.

There was violence in Milan, where left-wing demonstrators threw a Molotov cocktail at the offices of the Spanish airline Iberia, causing some damage.

A bar owned by a rightist sympathizer was destroyed by another Molotov cocktail, while two policemen were wounded when attacked with iron bars by a band of youths demanding access to the office of a right-wing magazine.

In Turin, a bomb wrecked a nightclub after it had closed Tuesday night. No one was injured. In another incident, extremists set fire to the car of a local trade union leader.

In a statement in a weekly general audience, Pope Paul again deplored Tuesday's massacre: "We wish to express our deepest sorrow and our profound regret at the vile and criminal mischief carried out yesterday in Brescia, our place of birth and of spiritual and social formation," he said.

The Brescia bombing, during an anti-Fascist demonstration, is assumed to have been the work of neo-Fascists.

Police said a 20-year-old Brescia doctor belonging to a local neo-Nazi organization was arrested during the night, but they would not confirm this was connected with the explosion.

About 40,000 people carrying red banners marched through Rome but no incidents were reported.

The strike was scheduled, in every city from 8 a.m. to noon but was continuing to midnight in Brescia.

Radio and television broadcast only news and classical music, but the Italian Journalists Union revoked an earlier decision to join the strike in order to keep people informed of developments.

Police are searching for two young men seen in the vicinity of the square where the time-bomb went off.

The bomb—planted in a garbage bin—injured 94 persons, more than 20 seriously.

Pope Paul, who was born in Brescia, described the bombing as "the barbaric use of blind violence."

Police are examining a letter sent to Brescia newspapers, the chief of police and the public prosecutor.

Signed by a group calling itself The Black Order, the letter made no reference to the bombing but accused the government of allowing "the worst Communist scum to penetrate everywhere, infiltrating its swine also into the police, the magistrature and all places of responsibility."

Black Order is thought to be the strongest of extreme right-wing organizations which have carried out terrorist attacks throughout Italy. Neo-Fascists are particularly strong around Brescia, where 30 members of a so-called Mussolini Action Squad recently were arrested for possessing arms and explosives.

The bombing brought immediate condemnation from Italian President Giovanni Leone and from Giorgio Almirante, secretary of the neo-Fascist, M.S.I. party.

Obituaries and Funerals

MRS. WILLIAM J. JOHNS

In failing health for the past three years, Mrs. Dorothy May Johns, 94 West Moira Street, died May 28 in Belleville General Hospital.

Born in Belleville 68 years ago, Mrs. Johns was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Addison Vandervoort and had lived all her life in the city where she was a member of Bridge Street United Church. She was a life member of the Women's Missionary Society.

Aside from her husband, William J. Johns, she is survived by daughters Mrs. Jay (Betty Louise) Joslyn of Comox, B.C., Mrs. Sarah Ruth Balyx of Belleville, and Mrs. James (Dorothy Connor) Airth of Beaconsfield, Quebec, 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Frost, the deceased was born at Actinolite and for many years was a tourist cabin operator and storekeeper at Actinolite. In recent years he was noted for his workmanship in restoring antique furniture.

He is survived by his second wife, the former Aleatha Vincent, sons Robert of Niagara Falls, and Clifford of Cobourg, a daughter Mrs. Edward (Norma) LeClair of Belleville and a step-son Raymond Vaunecer of Jackson, Michigan.

His first wife, the former Madeline Burns, and a daughter, Sharon predeceased him. A brother and sister also survive, they are Leslie Frost of St. Catharines, Ont. and Mrs. Charles of Actinolite. Two Hoffman, and Mrs. Carl (Laura) Quinby predeceased him.

WILLIAM CONLEY

The funeral for William Conley held May 28 at 1 p.m. in the chapel of John R. Bush Funeral Home, Belleville. Rev. Frank Bell officiated and interment was in Belleville Cemetery, Shannonville.

Bearers were Jack, Roy and Walter Armstrong, Brian and Wayne Sager and Arnold Conley.

MRS. ROSS FAIRMAN
Belleville

The funeral of Mrs. Ross (Irene) Fairman of Belleville was held Saturday May 25 from the Grant Funeral Home, Belleville, with interment in Gilmsford Cemetery. Picton. Severice was conducted by Rev. Clare Kellogg.

Bearers were Ridley Woolridge, William Nightingale, Wilfred Mosley, Russel Kreisler, Kenneth Parks, Don Hall.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following alarm of assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Wednesday:

Tuesday, May 28, 4:47 p.m. grass fire in swampy area east of Herchimer Ave., no damage.

Today, May 28, 6:01 p.m. old tree stump on fire near the intersection of Planer Rd. and O'Hare St., no damage.

Youth Guilty Of Obstruction

A Bayside youth, Maurice Critch, 17, was sentenced to 10 days in jail and placed on one year's probation yesterday in provincial court, after he was convicted of obstructing a police officer in the performance of his duty.

Critch was arrested by police last Dec. 28, after he assaulted two Ontario Provincial Police officers who had been called to evict Critch and two companions from a Bayside home.

The three men had been asked to leave by Verne Ross, the owner and, when they refused to leave the owner called the police and laid a complaint.

When the officers arrived at the home, Critch, who, according to investigating officers, appeared to be under the influence of drugs or alcohol, attacked two of the constables.

Terms included in the probation order handed down by Judge J. L. Clendenning include stipulations that Critch abstain from the consumption of alcohol for one year, that he not be found in or near the home of the woman who had laid the trespassing complaint, and that he not be found in possession of restricted or prohibited drugs.

Father, Son Impaired

A Deseronto man and his 23-year-old son were fined a total of $350 in provincial court yesterday after they were convicted on two separate charges of impaired driving.

James Samuel Caron, Sr., 46, of Deseronto, was charged with impaired driving March 19 after a Deseronto police officer had stopped the car he was driving for a rolling license plate check.

At the time he was stopped, Caron Sr. had a smell of alcohol on his breath and was taken to the police station for a breathalyzer test.

He had a breathalyzer reading of 220 milligrams of alcohol per 100 millilitres of his blood.

On March 26, Caron's son, James Samuel Caron Jr., 23, led police on a chase, at speeds approaching 70 miles an hour, through Deseronto streets and along Highway 2 before his car stalled and he was arrested for impaired driving.

Caron Jr. had a breathalyzer reading of 220 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres of his blood.

In addition to being fined $200 for impaired driving, Caron Jr. was fined $50 for having a bottle of beer in a place other than his residence.

Caron Sr. was fined $150 for impaired driving.

Measuring Up

A part of Kiwanis Club meetings involves measuring the height of a member and having other members guess his weight from that. Sometimes the results can be more humorous than realistic. During a meeting this week of Kiwanis Club of Belleville, newly elected president, Fred Nelles was measured by past president, Armin Quickert. Newly chosen first vice-president, Albert Van Reewyk, second from right and second vice-president Jim Stanfield watch the fun.

Pigeons Recovered

Belleville police have solved the Great Pigeon Robbery that left them baffled over the weekend.

Yesterday, two young boys returned the two fantail pigeons that had been reported stolen Saturday from Fred Watke's garage at 46 Ponton Street.

Mr. Watke, a well known pigeon breeder, had reported the birds missing after his found the screen missing from the back of his garage.

Police say the two youngsters say they found the pigeons in Mr. Watke's back yard.

No charges will be laid.

Judge Anderson (right), Rotary President Don Clark

'Fresh Look' Needed
Ombudsman May Help In Strikes — Anderson

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The strike, today considered an inalienable right, must become the subject of change if we are to keep pace with present day requirements, says Judge J. C. Anderson, chairman of the Public Service Arbitration Board.

Judge Anderson, of Belleville, Tuesday told Picton Rotarians that even individuals closely identified with unions and company heads are beginning to look for better ways to settle their disputes.

He suggested a labor management ombudsman might contribute to settling differences. If a garbage strike were called in a city, the ombudsman could sit in on negotiations and later issue a report showing how a strike would inconvenience the public.

In Judge Anderson's view, this would focus the problem, permitting the public to consider the difficulties. If the plan were successful, the report might be accompanied by a referendum.

Judge Anderson said when a strike does occur there should be a study of the actual economic loss. This would indicate that a strike never benefits economics.

He pointed out that strikes in hospitals affect health and in postal strikes there is the feeling that those directly concerned have suffered as well as the general public.

The individual's rights are only rights if they are rights within the law," remarked the Judge.

He criticized use of individual rights with "undue pressure" or "raw power."

Judge Anderson said that he knows of no other field where individuals are allowed to join and employ raw bargaining powers to achieve their goals. He referred to an instance when 36 firemen did this.

"We have to have a fresh look at this as individuals and speak to our representatives," he urged.

Judge Anderson mentioned a rash of legal and illegal strikes recently that have brought services to a standstill in Canada in some cases.

He stressed the importance of considering the results of such action.

"We must think a little more about the consequences than in the past," he noted.

The judge said that the right to strike is regarded as the "ultimate way" to settle disputes today. But, 100 years ago, the withdrawal of services was a criminal offence. In 1872 approximately 10,000 convictions on this offence were recorded.

"Now the strike is considered an inalienable right," said Judge Anderson.

He said that in the field of labor relations nothing is constant except change.

"That which is considered a sacred right is also the subject of change if we are to keep up with present day requirements," he commented.

Judge Anderson stressed the position of communities when a government service is withdrawn by a strike.

Government makes laws in a democratic way and a parallel power develops if people begin striking against the government. Bargaining power is used to usurp the rest of the country, he said.

"Every time a law is broken and the government gives in, it weakens our laws; and when laws are weakened, our whole society is weakened," said the judge.

He said if at any time five per cent of the people disobey laws, law will break down. Good faith of the public and its sense of responsibility must be relied on to prevent this.

The judge said there is a difference between strikes in essential services and strikes in the private sector.

Judge Anderson was County Judge in Hastings from 1946 to 1972 when he was appointed to his present provincial government post.

Fair Prices Increased

PICTON — Prince Edward County Agricultural Society has increased admission fees from $1 to $1.50 for the annual county fair September 6-8.

The increase, dictated by rising costs, will include free grandstand shows and free parking. Students will be admitted for $1; children under 12 will be admitted free.

The Bay of Quinte Agricultural Mutual Fire Insurance Company, now in its centennial year, will underwrite grandstand show costs. The show will feature George Hamilton IV of Perth.

Ground improvements have been planned this summer under chairmanship of past president Charles Culmer.

OPP Dog In Search

MADOC — The provincial police tracking dog, Sabre, was combing bush northeast of here this morning for two teenagers who abandoned a stolen car at Mother's Restaurant north of Highway 7 near Actinolite.

The pair was seen by Margaret Travares of Flinton driving off in her car, left outside a Northbrook telephone booth while the owner was making a call. The theft occurred at 12:45 p.m. Tuesday. The owner notified police. OPP Constable Don Bjerndahl later spotted the car at the PSI Centre on Highway 7 near Actinolite. He gave chase and the vehicle turned north on the Mother's Restaurant Road. When they reached the end of the road, two young people abandoned the car and fled into the bush. The car was undamaged.

Trent Budget Approved by Province
$200,000 For Conservation Costs

FRANKFORD — The province has approved a $200,000 budget for the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority in 1974.

Of this, $150,000 is slated for capital projects and another $48,000 for administration costs.

Capital expenses cover $75,000 in green belt acquisitions, $8,000 in development planning, $20,000 in actual development and $46,000 in possible acquisitions. The budget, given an executive meeting Tuesday, showed.

A breakdown of Administration costs was not available. But, in the year's first quarter, more than $10,400 has been spent. The majority of this was for salary and authority members "allowance and per diem" rate.

In this category, members were paid 13 cents a mile for use of a car and $10 a day for meetings. This was increased Tuesday to 15 cents a mile and $15 a day.

Road-around-mountain Project Has Council Treading Cautiously

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Trenton town council is treading slowly as it decides how to handle a proposal for a roadway through the area of Mount Pelion.

The hill, a town landmark, has gained even more prominence lately with the parks board's growing interests and plans for the area. In letters to town council, the board is suggesting the hill and surrounding land be used for recreation. This includes walking paths and ski runs.

But council sees the hill and vicinity as a prime solution in giving Trenton drivers more north-south access routes from housing developments to downtown.

Arden Royce, deputy clerk, said councils have been talking about the prospect of a road through or around the hill for years.

It is the parks board's contention the area will be environmentally damaged by a roadway. Council will look into this, following recent discussions.

Council Monday was reminded of a long-standing offer.

Contractor Lyle Carr says he will haul and spread gravel removed from the hill cut at 94 cents a yard — nearly 14 cents more a yard than another company contracted annually by the town for this sort of service.

Gravel from the hill cut (necessary to allow the road through the land) would be used as fill for a quarry and another undisclosed project.

In return for the contract, Mr. Carr says he will give council the quarry and the eight acres of land it is situated on just behind the hill.

Deputy clerk Royce says Mr. Carr's property must be considered "prime real estate if a road is to go through."

Bottle Ban Requested

FRANKFORD — The Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority Tuesday night resolved to send a resolution to a provincial conservation conference calling for returnable whiskey and wine bottles.

Glass refuse in parklands and clearing costs are on the increase says the resolution.

It asks that non-returnable bottles be banned and for deposits to encourage consumers to return glass containers.

Pilot Recycling for Frankford

FRANKFORD — This community ten miles north of Trenton will be the test site for a newspaper recycling project to be taken on by the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority.

Cy MacDonald, authority executive member, said Tuesday night, if all goes well here "there's no reason why the project couldn't stretch across the entire authority."

A firm date has yet for a start. But Mr. MacDonald said the scheme would require large amounts of volunteer help from local groups and would use a full time dropoff depot.

Caution Urged

KINGSTON (CP) — Bishop J. B. Creggan told delegates to the 108th synod of the Anglican diocese of Ontario Tuesday that the most controversial issues facing the Anglican Church require further thought and discussion.

Bishop Creggan, former Belleville clergyman, said "it is quite obvious" that there is division in the church on the question of the admission of women to the priesthood.

Pool Is Asked

BLOOMFIELD — School trustees have been asked by Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students to aid construction of a tennis court at the school.

Steven Brant, students' council president said students have raised about $7,000 for several projects. Some $2,000 has been pledged to a pool. The balance of the money is to be used for students' council sponsored scholastic awards.

The pool project has been indefinitely postponed and now students would like to contribute money toward a tennis court, he said.

Mr. Brant requested trustees to consider financial assistance for the project in its 1975 budget. The 1974 budget already has been struck.

He said students could deposit $4,000 toward the courts now without taking money from the pool fund.

A Military Career

Some mighty strange things are happening to the armies of the world these days.

Armies are undergoing a strange process of evolution, becoming more and more deeply involved in politics, and in many cases shredding whatever is left of the tenets of the Geneva Convention regarding treatment of wounded, the civilian population and so on.

For instance there is the continuing carnage in Southeast Asia where humiliation and decimation of civilians, including a host of children, has been a blight on life there for years.

Then there are the various Arab forces for the liberation of Palestine; these have plumbed the darkest depths of man's primeval nature in massacre of innocents, many of them young children.

Similarly the Irish Republican Army and in more recent times, Protestant counter forces, have rained death and destruction on Northern Ireland and, in later days, on Dublin and Monaghan in the Irish republic too. Any semblance of civilized conduct or of concern for non-combatants, in the Irish hostilities, either like occasional prior warnings of bomb plants, has virtually disappeared in that luckless land.

Canada had its FLQ at the beginning of the seventies, marked by kidnaping and the death of a cabinet minister, Quebec's Pierre Laporte, but compared with these other militaristic phenomena, we got off lightly.

The United States has its curious Symbionese Liberation Army, not such a strange outfit, perhaps, considering warnings about their potential some years ago. Now the SLA appears to be a virtual has-been following the recent shoot-out in Los Angeles, but there remains its sinister legacy of mind-bending philosophy and the still-at-large heiress Patricia Hearst as its most perplexing symbol.

What about conventional armies? Here there are also contradictions and cause for some think-tank activity regarding the not so far distant past and forward to what the future holds for Canada and its allies.

The Germans for instance in Manitoba: the German army, that is, playing war games amid the vast reaches of our mid-west's Camp Shilo.

And back to Britain again, to discover that the army there is being cast in the role of a reluctant strikebreaker in Ulster, with possibly grave implications for the already disturbed situation there.

Finally, a local note, two Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment corporals are off to the Middle East this week. The militiamen have had a month's training in Camp Petawawa and will join regular forces in peacekeeping duties in Egypt.

It will be a great experience for them. If we must have armies, it is good to know they are going to disciplined forces such as Canada's or Britain's. They still offer a man an honorable career, while performing difficult and sometimes unpleasant tasks with courage and determination.

Kingston's Festival

Kingston's Festival '74, a summer extravaganza of music and the arts, is featuring among other things an exhibition of Mexican art at the Agnes Etherington art gallery.

The works by three of the country's leading artists, undoubtedly will evoke as many interpretations as there are people viewing them. They range from portrayals of humankind to a broad canvas depicting family life; the interior of a living room (including a fireplace which somehow we don't associate with Mexico), children playing on the floor and parents taking their ease. Outside is a warm looking sea and coastal scene.

There is a preoccupation too in these strange paintings and pencil sketches with ordinary household items — like a dripping faucet, this one larger than life, and with ladders, and panelled shapes, Man and his environment apparently is the theme.

Altogether a thought-provoking exhibition, if not always visually exciting in the Latin tradition.

Land Speculation Tax Encounters Barrage Of Criticism

By DON O'KEARN
Thomson News Service

On April 9 the Ontario government announced, as the star item of the provincial budget, that a tax would be placed on land speculation.

The tax, it said, was to be a prohibitive 50 per cent.

The purpose was to put a quick check on ballooning prices of homes since 1972 the price of an average house in Toronto had risen from $22,513 to $35,-434, largely through higher land values), and to make more houses available.

It said at the time, with pride, that this was pioneer legislation: that it was the first government in Canada to act against speculators.

It recognized that the program might not be perfect initially, as it represented a break-through into a completely new field, but it was confident that it would do the job aimed at.

But six weeks later it was having second thoughts. Third and fourth ones too. And any continuing public expressions of pride were strictly forced.

For as soon as the proposed legislation for the tax was released, right after the budget, there was a avalanche of attack, from both the opposition parties in the house, and the large section of the public that happens to be interested in real estate.

The bill was swamped with criticism in a caustic second reading. Following this the government pulled it back for repair. When it was returned to the house for committee study it had more than 20 pages of amendments. But even with this the opposition castigated it and continued to oppose it at every turn.

Essentially what the tax would do would be to take away 50 per cent of profit on sale of any undeveloped land or residential property (except a principal residence or cottage) over its market value on April 9. On top of this would be regular taxes bringing the impost to as much as 80 per cent.

The objections to this policy and the original legislation were many.

Among the major ones were: That it would be self-defeating in that it would encourage speculators to hold land off the market, and particularly that it could wipe out small builders, the backbone of the housing industry, as they wouldn't be able to buy land from their usual sources, speculators or developers.

That it would be a hard blow to the small investor, who has bought one or two houses as a hedge against inflation.

But above all that the federal government probably would not recognize the provincial tax as an expense, with the province not having checked this out. And if it were not so recognized the total tax could amount to as much as 112 per cent, which would be unthinkable.

In its amendments the government tried to clear up some of these criticisms (developers would get a small business tax-free if they undertook to build within a certain period),

But it did nothing about the federal question, saying only that Finance Minister Turner would do nothing until the bill was law. The opposition claimed that it could get a departmental ruling.

And this is a spectre which has hung menacingly over the program, and has been much of the cause of the opposition's bitter fight.

With the government having a large majority in the house the bill will become law.

But there is still a large question as to how well it will work, or whether it will work at all.

To date its main consequence has been that there has been, certainly surrounding it, it has had the real estate business in the province in semi-paralysis.

It has apparently brought at least a temporary halt to land speculation.

Some speculators have been letting their options drop and forfeiting their deposits. While others, caught short financially, have been selling at distress prices. There has been practically no buying.

But the home sale market has not slowed up any down.

The Toronto Real Estate Board, and it is probably representative of the province, reports a big drop in sales over the same period last year while the listings have soared. Buyers are afraid to move, while owners are trying to get rid of their properties as soon as they can.

At the same time there is no clarity as to what is happening to prices.

Government has claimed there already is a drop of five per cent in home prices.

But the Toronto board says there has been an increase of five per cent in the average price of homes sold, though, it points out that the average has been reduced by the number of high-priced homes sold.

Complicating matters, and any clear assessment, is the fact that we are in a period of both tight money and record high mortgage rates.

This at least would have tended on its own to slow down the market both in home sales and speculation.

All in all it is the most nightmarish legislative step Ontario has taken in a long time.

New Zealand Swamped with Citizenship Applications

From The Auckland Star

Britons and Canadians are swamping the Internal Affairs Department with a backlash with inquiries about taking out New Zealand citizenship.

Asked how many applications had been received, the assistant district officer, Mr. F.W. Baxter said: "Look, we haven't got time to count them.

"We are inundated, overwhelmed, swamped — which ever word you like."

The department's offices throughout New Zealand have been kept busy since the new immigration laws were announced in March answering inquiries from Britons and Canadians who do not have New Zealand passports.

Meanwhile, a departmental spokesman has made it clear that British people living in New Zealand but retaining their United Kingdom passports still need to obtain a work permit if they wish to leave the county and return, even if they have been here since before 1948.

Any Briton who emigrated to New Zealand before 1948 was automatically a New Zealand citizen. But if a person in this category wanted to go overseas and return, he would either have to put aside his British passport and use a New Zealand one, or else obtain a re-entry permit.

"They can't have it both ways," the spokesman said. "If they want to travel on a British passport, they are still claiming to be British, so they need a re-entry permit."

But he said there were no difficulties in obtaining a permit. "There have been a lot of misconceptions about this."

Watergate Could Delay Medicare Plans in U.S.

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — A series of compromises has brought the United States closer to the kind of universal health insurance program that most advanced countries take for granted, but the prospects for legislation in the current Congress are still uncertain.

Nearly two dozen bills dealing with national health insurance have been put before Congress. Both the Senate and the House of Representatives are currently holding committee hearings, hoping to arrive at legislation that might be passed this year.

But the whole speeded-up program may be derailed if there are time-consuming hearings on the impeachment of President Nixon. Some key opponents still need to be won over before any compromise bill stands a chance.

Health care in the U.S. has for years been acknowledged as a national scandal by almost every segment of American society, despite glowing successes in some areas.

Although the so-called "medical-industrial complex" consumes some $95 billion a year, figures from the United Nations rank the U.S. 17th in the world in infant mortality, 12th in female life expectancy and 30th in male life expectancy.

The most ambitious Medicare program covers 21 million elderly Americans and Medicaid helps more than 15 million of the poor annually with their health bills. The Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan of prepaid hospital and medical care has 30 million subscribers and other prepaid group programs — notably the Kaiser permanent plan in California — cover another eight million.

Still, Health Secretary Casper Weinberger testified that 25 million Americans do not have health insurance coverage at all and millions more face inadequate cover-age from illness because their coverage is inadequate.

The most concerted action in 1970 to the principle of a government role in health insurance was regarded as a milestone in the fight for a national plan — but some forward this year with a bill that includes compromises in several important areas.

Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem., Mass.), who had led a labor-sponsored bid for socialized medicine for several years, switched courses last month and joined with the more conservative Representative Wilbur Mills (Dem. Ark.) to back a compromise bill that has influential backing.

Even Senator Russell Long (Dem., La.), whose own proposals are regarded as far more prudent than either Nixon's or Kennedy's, has said he is "not frozen in any position."

"As I understand this business," the folksy Long remarked to the House ways and means committee as it heard testimony on health insurance, "Mr. Nixon is compromising with Mr. Nixon, Mr. Kennedy is compromising with Mr. Mills, and the rest of us haven't been compensated with jobs."

Others who haven't been "compensated with" include some religious forces outside Congress.

Organized labor has denounced the Kennedy-Mills bill and is reported ready to fight any insurance law this year, hoping for a more liberal Congress after the November elections that will pass the kind of cradle-to-grave coverage which Kennedy once endorsed.

Some consumer groups are also pressing for a role for more comprehensive coverage.

Pastor - Pilots Of Canadian West

By ALAN ABBUCKLE
EDMONTON (CP) — In the great expanse of unoccupied land that is Canada's north, traditional church organization is pretty difficult but a couple of flying Lutherans think they have the answer.

They are Lester Stahlke of Edmonton and Olaf Skinnes-berg of High Level, Alta., both pastor-pilots for the Lutheran Association of Missionary Pilots (L.A.M.P.).

Indeed they are the only pilots flying for the four-year-old association but they expect to be joined shortly by another flyer who will be responsible for northern Saskatchewan. At the moment they are covering northern Alberta and a bit of British Columbia.

"L.A.M.P. is geared to developing a ministry in hard-to-reach places in Canada using pastor-pilots to visit Christians in service," Mr. Stahlke said in an interview.

"My dream had been to use flying in the ministry but there really was no opportunity. Four years ago, when I was in Iget McMurray establishing a new mission, I realized the Lutheran church was not involved in the ministry in Canada's huge North because we didn't have the money or the manpower.

"I realized that if we were going to do any work we'd have to change our style because establishing a congregation in an isolated settlement just doesn't work—there aren't enough people."

He said L.A.M.P. aimed at the people who "had been forgotten because there weren't enough of them to make it pay and they were just too hard to find."

On over the 250,000 square miles they now cover and the 500,000 square miles they expect to cover with a third pastor-pilot, the association offers a minister who tries to visit Christians in the North once a month and a recruiting service that tries to get "Christians in service" into the North to act as a kind of lay ministry.

Christians in service, Mr. Stahlke said, are "people who have a desire to share their faith with other people in the context of their work and become involved in the community."

"The emphasis is on establishing a relationship with people that is meaningful and honest and in that context, with the opportunity presents itself, to share their faith in Christ."

Rather than a minister preaching, it is a Christian living and being visited once a month by a pastor pilot.

Not that the service is limited to Lutherans. As Mr. Stahlke said, the North needs people — ecumenical and L.A.M.P. does not wish to be a threat to other denominations nor does it feel threatened by them.

"We've discovered that part of our ministry is visiting clergy of other denominations. They get pretty lonely too sometimes and appreciate having a chance to share with a member of their peer group."

L.A.M.P. operates on a budget of $110,000, all of which is donated by people in the south but Mr. Stahlke said there has been a change if the project is to survive.

"As we get more Christians in the North we hope to have a congregation that's just scattered all over the place, but those Christians in service in an area of, say, 150,000 square miles will be supporting their own pastor."

Eventually, he said, L.A.M.P. should grow in about 12 pastor-pilots, each with a plane covering a section of all of Canada's North.

The association seeks Christians who can work in the North at whatever they do in the south and will, as well as support themselves, live their lives as a kind of lay ministry by example. They get themselves north and the pastor-pilots visits them to offer spiritual support.

Not that the service is limited to Lutherans. As Mr. Stahlke said, the North needs people — ecumenical and L.A.M.P. does not wish to be a threat to other denomina-

Ontario Farmers in Bind

United Church...

Possibly as much as 25 per cent of all Ontario or Quebec farmers cannot make a decent living off their land.

Let's look at a typical farmer on a 150-acre lot somewhere in Hastings and Port Hope. This is a century farm and he is fairly well established in that it. Up until five years ago, he could have had trouble getting $30,000 for the acreage and all the buildings on it — a pitiful record for the years and conditions of saving and scratching.

He buys approximately 50 young heifers at an average price of $250 and will try to sell them (after maturing and calving) in 18 to 18 months. Two or three of the animals will have died by then, some others won't get in calf and yet others will not thrive. In any case he will have difficulty realizing $400 for the animals he sells, even at the present farm market.

From this maximum gross of $9,600 or so he will have to take off as much as $4,500 for his proteins (hay which is not grown on his fields, seed, fertilizer, minerals, salt, fuel for the tractor, wear and tear plus repairs on equipment, casual labor during haying and corn time. There will have to be some custom work done, interest, finance charges on car, truck and equipment.

And in the good times, he may net $5,000 for more than a year's work. Being an ambitious man with a young family to raise and educate, he also has some land and an outside job. His day begins in the barn at 6 a.m., he returns there after supper and usually comes into the house at 9 or later.

Why does not friend do it? No one really knows except that he may not stick with it much longer because people in the city keep offering more money for his land, and one of these days he is more tired than usual and the offer is high enough, he will decide to sell.

Another farmer in the same circumstances has left the Temiscamingue area of of Quebec is not so fortunate since he has been a farmer all his life and has spent a total of $10,000 asked, without success.

Canadians have paid a lower percentage of their income for food than any other nation, but this era is over. From now on, either directly or through subsidies, the consumer will have to pay more for his fare.

The farmer has realized from his role as the benevolent provider of Canada's gigantic barbecue.

Hoots Mon

Editor,
The Intelligencer

I was amassed to see your usage of the obsolete Scottish expression "Hoots". In your news headlines (ask Thursday in place of the normal "Scoffs").

The Intelligencer's typesetting is frequently most ingenuously comic, but something kills me that "scuffs" slipped from the Editorial pen. Now your attitudes may be delightfully quaint but to express them in familiar language surely gives the game away.

Hunger of the Third World

Ottawa Journal

A dominant election issue is inflation with its ramifications at home, not in other parts of the world. Nonetheless, inflation, where it hurts most, is the poorest of lands among the poorest of people, should be increasingly the concern of the developed-nations, of which Canada is one. The food bill alone this year is $8.5 billion that has brought 50 per cent of 1972 needs by UN calculations. The total which will be one ton of grain per head is $400 short of the price today. Wheat at $70 a ton in 1972 is now $220 and fertilizer's cost has doubles in the same period from $50 a ton.

Canada's 10 per cent annual rise in the note of living is a pale shadow of the 100 per cent increase that is the lot of the basic necessities of aid. To keep abreast of existing programs will cost the average Canadian nation an additional $10 billion in 1974.

Any doubt about Canada continuing to pay its share and, perhaps, to do more is surely unnecessary; but it is part of our nature that we can put it out of our minds even now.

Hunger of the Third World

Three. A large part of the increase is attributable to the sevfold shock in those same areas of energy costs — from 53 million to 2 billion in a year and a half. Yet help from the developed nations, 27 states this year for each $100 GNP totals the same $8.5 billion that was brought 50 per cent of 1972 needs by UN calculations. The total which will be one ton of grain per head is $400 short of the price today. Wheat at $70 a ton in 1972 is now $220 and fertilizer's cost has doubles in the same period from $50 a ton.

Seasonal Wine Recipes

One of the qualities that helped our forefathers survive in this country was the ability to use whatever was at hand during its season. Imported foods and wines were out of the question for most pioneer folk, who turned to their surroundings for supplies.

In the lowly dandelion and the sour, persistent rhubarb ("It just keeps coming up!") they found the ingredients for delicious wines to serve during the next winter.

This spring, instead of cursing those golden patches all over your lawn, harvest them and like many other families in Belleville these days, enjoy the delights of home wine-making.

Here are recipes of varying complexity, amount and flavor for you to try.

Dandelion Wine
(Tiny Bennett's Recipe)
10 lbs. sugar
1 qt. white wine concentrate
5 lbs. bananas
5 tsp. acid blend
½ tsp. grape tannin
4 tsp. yeast nutrient
2 packets dried wine yeast
Camden tablets
3 quarts (120 ounces) dandelion petals

Pick dandelions on a sunny day when the petals are fully open. Shear off the heads, remove most of the green calix and exclude the bitter stems.

Put in a tub, pour in two gallons of boiling water, leave to steep for exactly two days. Stir mornings and evenings.

On the second day boil the petals for 15 minutes and strain onto the white wine concentrate with the sugar, acid blend, grape tannin and yeast nutrient. (NO yeast or Camden tablets).

Boil the peeled bananas in a gallon of water for 20 minutes and strain on to the top of the other mixture in the tub.

Bring the contents up to tablets in a little hot water. Crush and add five Camden tablets in a little hot water, cover carefully, leave for 24 hours and then sprinkle the yeast on top of the "must" (that's the name for the mixture at this stage). Do not stir the yeast in but leave for 12 hours, covered, and then stir in. Cover tightly with a plastic sheet tied down with string.

Seven days later siphon the must into a five-gallon closed container, add an air lock and leave to ferment until fermentation ceases. When the wine begins to clear from the top, siphon into clean container, top up, and leave for three months to clear again. Then repeat.

This makes a delightful dry wine with a lovely pale yellow color and a superb flavor. It can be bottled after five months, and drunk at Christmas, although its flavor improves after another year of bottle storage.

A superbly smooth flavor can be obtained by adding six fluid ounces of edible quality glycerine in the original mixing process. Glycerine is obtainable at druggistores or from wine specialty store.

If you experience any trouble with the wine clearing use a "finer" (again, obtainable at a wine specialty store) after three month's bulk storage. Don't bottle until brilliantly clear.

Here's another recipe for a smaller quantity.

Dandelion Wine
6 cups dandelion petals
3 lbs. white sugar
1 lb. light raisins OR
9 ounces white grape concentrate
4 level tsp. acid blend
2 Camden tablets

Here's another recipe for a
2 Camden tablets
½ tsp. yeast energizer
1 gallon hot water (160 ounces)
½ tsp. grape Tannin wine yeast

Use only the yellow petals. Cut up raisins and put all ingredients except wine yeast in the "primary fermentor" (the tub or plastic garbage can reserved for this purpose).

Pour the gallon of hot water other the ingredients and stir to dissolve the sugar. Cover with a plastic sheet.

Add yeast when the must is cool (70-75 degrees). Ferment for three days, strain, and siphon into a gallon jug or carboy and attach fermentation lock. Rack in three weeks.

Make sure the container topped up.

Rack again in three months. When wine is clear and stable, bottle.

To prevent oxidation add 1 antioxidant tablet per gallon.

Age for six months.

Dandelion Wine
(Ab and Queenie Clarke's Recipe).
2 quarts dandelion flowers (petals only)
4 quarts boiling water
2 lbs. white sugar
2 lbs brown sugar
2 lemons cut up in pieces
2 oranges cut up in pieces
1 packet yeast
Pour the boiling water over the dandelions and let stand for 36 hours. Squeeg out the flowers.

Add fruit and yeast, to the liquid in a crock for three weeks. Strain and bottle. Don't drink it for at least six months, and if you can, wait a year or two. It gets better.

Rhubarb Wine
3 lbs. rhubarb
3 lbs. white sugar
1 level tsp. yeast nutrient
10 ounces white grape concentrate
1 gallon water
2 Camden tablets
¼ tsp. Grape tannin wine yeast

Cut up rhubarb and put in primary fermentor. Pour dry sugar over the fruit to extract the juice. Cover with a plastic sheet and allow to stand 24 hours.

Add all other ingredients, including wine yeast. Ferment 48 hours.

In 3 or 4 days syphon into a gallon jug or carboy and attach fermentation lock. Rack in three weeks. Top up container.

Rack again in three months. When wine is clear and stable, bottle.

Wine may be sweetened to taste at time of bottling by adding sugar syrup (2 parts sugar to 1 of water).

Add three stabilizer tablets per gallon to prevent renewed fermentation.

To preserve color and flavor, add 1 antioxidant tablet per gallon.

Weeds for Wine

Ab and Queenie Clarke spend a pleasant afternoon like this every spring, picking dandelions whenever they find them growing "wild", in preparation for making wine. The Clarkes have recently taken up the hobby, and now make wine from ingredients as varied as potatoes and grapefruit.

Ann Landers

He Flirted with Danger

Dear Ann Landers: Our favorite nephew was killed in an automobile accident two weeks ago. We will never get over it. His parents are still in a state of shock. His sister's in still unable to return to school.

He was one of the most lovable kids in the world—only 16—and had his driving licence less than seven months.

But he was one of those kids who loved to flirt with danger—he always tried to beat a traffic light or exceed the speed limit just a little. If he was caught, he'd try to talk his way out of it and usually he succeeded.

I was at his home one day when he got a ticket. (It was a week before he was killed.) He complained about the state trooper who had given him a ticket for speeding. It was his third moving violation, which in our state means you lose your licence for a year. I never saw him so furious. He was driving without a licence when he was killed.

You printed something by a public safety official several years ago. I can't remember the man's name or where he was from, but I am asking you to hand it up and run it again. How I wish I had clipped it then and sent it to my nephew. It might have meant the difference between life and death. Thank you, Ann.—Bereaved Aunt

Dear Aunt: I recall the piece. The author is Commissioner William O. Newman, Kentucky department of public safety, and I'm printing it again in the hope that other young people will read it and pay attention.

You Break My Heart

Are you one of the people who calls me on the phone or writes me a letter to tell me my troopers are stopping motorists and giving them tickets "for no reason at all"? I wouldn't know. You never give me your name.

You tell me you're a good citizen and a safe driver who uses the Interstate for the purpose intended—speed. And that "dumb cop" gave you a ticket.

You break my heart! I hope the next time you tear down the road, exceeding the speed limit, that another trooper gives you a ticket and the traffic judge takes away your licence. I hope he catches you before he has to help pry your lifeless body out of that crushed car you were enjoying so much.

I wish you could come with me to the scene of a wreck and watch a man wither in the gravel on the shoulder of a highway while he waits for an ambulance that will get there too late to do anything but carry him to the morgue.

I wish I could make you help scrape the bits of bone and flesh of a whole family off the asphalt and into baskets. You'd vomit like some of my troopers do. But you'd think differently the next time you climbed into that car of yours.

Your letter doesn't bother me, my friend. What bothers me is that you apparently have not learned your lesson.

And who gave that kid of yours driving lessons? You? No wonder he wolves in and out of traffic and leaves strips of burned rubber at stop lights.

I hope we catch him, too, mister, before we have to call you or your wife and ask you to come down to the morgue and identify his body.

And you got a ticket "for no reason at all." You break my heart, mister.

Put Your Thoughts on Paper

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Very often, by putting our thoughts and feelings in writing, we can prevent futile arguments, as between husband and wife — parents and children — employer and employee and so on.

A married couple could drive each other up the wall by the way they talk to each other or argue ceaselessly at times. Did you ever advise any of your quarrelling couples to write to each other, little notes of kindness and explanation of desires and wishes, etc., rather than by word of mouth?

I can "talk" a lot better by writing letters.

Not a Talker.

Dear Not A: To judge by my mail, many readers would say "Join the club!"

Writing down thoughts is a precious and comparatively rare means of self-expression and also of interpreting oneself to another. I have many times suggested that a correspondent who found difficulty in being understood by a too-dominant or just too talkative — partner, undertake to put thoughts and feelings on paper for him (or her) to read.

In this way the writer can think out the things he or she wants to say, express it perhaps, with fewer tears, or in less vituperative language than might happen in a face-to-face argument. It also gives the receiver time to think it over somewhat less angrily or emotionally, before responding.

British Study Looks at The Pill

LONDON (Reuter) — The world's biggest inquiry into risks from the birth control pill acquitted it today of most of the serious side-effect charges laid against it.

In fact, the study said, "it could well be that the beneficial (side) effects actually exceed the adverse reactions."

The study, conducted by Britain's Royal College of General Practitioners, began in 1968 and will continue for at least another two years. It has so far examined 46,000 case histories submitted by family doctors.

The interim report confirmed that there are distinct, though very small, increased health risks for pill-takers.

The pill is associated with increased incidence of urinary tract infections, skin problems and itching and with some more serious diseases: deep-vein thrombosis of the leg, raised blood pressure and strokes.

However, the report said, the pill can improve conditions including menstrual disorders, iron deficiency anemia, premenstrual tension, non-cancerous lumps in the breast and such minor ailments as acne and too much wax in the ear.

"Some of the most widely reported adverse reactions, notably migraine and headache, vaginal discharge, depression and loss of libido (sex drive) was thought largely to be due not to any pharmacological action of the pill but to biased over-reporting by women anxious about its possible effects," the report said.

There was no evidence that the pill was associated with cancer of any kind, although longer-term studies were required.

The survey underlined what it called the remarkable effectiveness of the pill: the failure rate is 0.34 per 1,000 women-years. Nonetheless, a high proportion of women in using it for no valid medical reason—27 per cent did so in the first year of use.

"It seems," the report said, "that the estimated risk at the present time of using the pill is one that a properly informed woman should be happy to take.

"Not a single previously unsuspected important adverse effect of the pill has been revealed by the study so far, and several suspected risks have been shown to be small, or nonexistent. . . . The risk of serious illness is very small."

Pill-users reported an average of six episodes of illness every three years while non-users reported five. But women using the pill tended to report their health problems more often, so the evidence suggested they were no more sickness-prone than non-users and may even suffer fewer illnesses.

Pill-takers did seem to get more chickenpox, possibly because the pill lowers residual childhood immunity. Slightly increased rates of other virus infections were reported and warranted further investigation of the pill's effect on the body's defence mechanisms.

There also were unexplained excesses of brachial neuritis—pain from the nerves of the arm—and of sciatica among takers and ex-takers which needed investigation.

Increased incidence of hypertension—high blood pressure—among takers seemed to be a long-term effect—fewer than one in 100 women reported it in their first year on the pill and the figures rise to around five per cent after five years.

The progestogen hormone content of the pill could be responsible for this, the report said. The figures did not justify taking women off the pill routinely every few years to give them a break from usage, it said.

Deep-vein thrombosis, a blood clot in the lungs, was reported five or six times more often in pill-users than others. But this incidence was cut by a quarter if pills containing lower dosages of estrogen—the other main hormone content—were used.

The risk attributable to the pill was about 81 cases per 100,000 a year on higher doses. For the less serious superficial venous thrombosis, pill-users ran a 60-per-cent higher risk than non-users—30 cases per 100,000 users a year.

There was no significant increase in the number of abnormal babies born to pill-takers.

City's Official Plan Just About Complete

Quinte Planning Board members concluded discussion Tuesday of all material received from city residents who have requested changes in Belleville's draft official plan land-use designations.

Only two matters, added to five from a previous meeting, were sent back to board professional staff for further study.

The board adopted seven major points in the remainder of an 11-page report summarizing changes requested by the public.

Few steps now remain before the draft plan document goes before Belleville city council for final discussion and approval.

When staff completes requested studies, another board meeting will be called. At this time, final decision will be made. Those concerned with the particular issues will be invited to debate any changes.

When all changes have been adopted, the board will recommend the draft plan to city council. The entire procedure is expected to be completed within the next two or three months.

Lower-tier supervision of director Bert Kenny, staff will study alternative designations to land at the Janlyn Crest-Bradgate Rd.-Haig Rd. area.

Ratepayers association group, Concerned Homeowners in Action, has objected to increased traffic flows expected in the area if commercial and highrise apartments are permitted as outlined in the draft plan.

Belleville Alderman John Sheck suggested the area should be looked at as a completely new "ballgame" after both Mayor Fred Jeffrey and Alderman Arthur Keegan came out in favor opposition to highrises at the foot of Haig Rd.

Staff will also study joining the Parkdale East areas now designated as separate secondary plans.

Three areas in the city have been newly designated for higher density than row apartments than was originally outlined in the draft plan.

The Stanley Park East and West area, now under a secondary plan, would include density four construction — one that permits 45 units per gross acre. As originally designated, the maximum units per gross acre permitted was 28.

(Aside from an actual dwelling unit, be it single family house or apartment, a gross acre includes parkland, roads and parking spaces.)

The Douglas Boyle property on the south-west corner of Church and Campbell Sts. has been redesignated to a density permitting a highrise. The entire city block will be slightly redrafted.

The board also approved a higher density designation for the south side of Bell Blvd. This, it was noted, would permit construction of two 13-storey apartment buildings proposed recently by Cambridge Lesseholds Ltd. Units permitted in the entire area would remain the same.

At the neighborhood level, the board approved three changes in the draft official plan.

Berchtsner Hill, a favorite toboggan run for easterd children, has been changed to parkland from the former residential use. Mayor Jeffrey said the city will attempt to buy the property for that use.

The location of a variety store or other small consumer business has been relocated from the College-Sidney Sts. area to the College St. north side at the proposed Ethel St.

Despite the objections of the Cannifton Rd. Motel owner, the board included the east bank of the Moira River as open space.

With regard to road patterns, an attempt by Ald. Sheck to amalgamate Bridge St. West was defeated by the board. Members opted to retain the original draft plan proposal to assign Bridge St. West to Church St. an arterial function and Bridge East from Church a collector function.

Ald. Sheck proposed an amendment that would have changed the designation similarly at Sidney St., not Church St.

No Show Gets Month

A Yarker, Ont., man, Garfield McMahan, 29, was sentenced to one month in jail yesterday in provincial court after he pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to appear in court for a trial that had been scheduled for Dec. 2, 1973.

McMahan had been charged with public mischief last March 24, 1973, after he was alleged to have given police another man's driver's licence with his own identification during an investigation into a breach of the provincial liquor laws.

The public mischief charge was dismissed against McMahan yesterday, after the crown failed to offer any evidence on the case.

McMahan was given the one month jail term by Judge J. L. Clendenning after the judge noted that this was the third time McMahan had been convicted of failing to appear in court for a trial.

In earlier cases, McMahan was fined $200 and sentenced to three months in jail for failing to appear at a trial.

Plant Workers Show Solidarity

More than 100 striking plant workers at Stewart Warner-Alemite turned up for picket line duty this morning in a show of solidarity in their demands for higher wages. Union members, now off their jobs for six weeks, are asking for a 95 cent-an-hour increase over two years, cost of living and other fringe benefits. Present wage scale at the plant under the last contract which ended Feb. 28, ranges from $2. an hour to $4.10, with an average of $2.78.

Marie Kurchak Grit Contender

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

This is the first time Quinte district dwellers have read of Marie Kurchak.

Should events culminate as she hopes eight days from now, she'll be a consistent newsmaker in coming weeks.

Young, articulate Mrs. Kurchak is bidding for the federal Liberal nomination in Hastings riding.

If successful at the June 6 convention, she'll be the first woman in contest a senior government election in the Belleville area.

Her nomination chances have an optimistic tinge. Frank Chapman, Liberal constituency president, said Tuesday there were "no other declared candidates at this stage" and "we don't honestly know if there will be or not".

A Kurchak nomination would be a radical departure for a riding party which for years has given its campaign standard to veteran native sons who have worked their way up through local party ranks.

Mrs. Kurchak is a 28-year-old journalist who specializes in citizen communication. She's been a resident of Toronto most of her life. But for some time she and her husband, Bill, 29, television writer and producer have been seeking to discard the big city for Hastings County.

It's a district both have been watching for a home. Politics is an area that Mrs. Kurchak meantime has been eyeing quite a while.

Both objectives have converged with the current federal election the catalyst.

But Mrs. Kurchak answers the obvious question: She is here to stay and is no non-resident being temporarily rung into the riding to run a campaign.

"I chose this area deliberately," she emphasizes. "I wasn't parachuted in. It had nothing to do with Liberal party headquarters."

While political campaigning may be a fresh experience, she seems to have gravitated to politics by inclination.

A native of Scotland, raised in Toronto, her university subjects include political sociology. After graduation, she turned to journalism — as researcher for the Toronto Telegram's Action Line, the column that helped citizens here through corporate and government red tape. More recent tasks have included consultant on citizen communications with federal provincial, television public affairs and documentary programs.

At a citizens' conference two years ago she first talked political participation with Liberal organizer Senator Keith Davey.

The contact was maintained. As one time the senator spoke to her about running in a Toronto constituency. By then, however, the Kurchaks had opted against big-city living, had become familiar with Hastings and made some offers on property — including a Bancroft-area farm. They're now looking in the Foxboro area.

Next episode was in April when she phoned Liberal headquarters and "asked if Hastings had a candidate yet" for the next election.

She came down, spoke with Mr. Chapman, then "spent some more time thinking about it." Finally, with the election called, she recently met the Liberal riding executive and talked of her intentions.

The sequel now rests with the party membership in convention in Belleville next week.

If she's endorsed the Kurchak campaign style will be strongly influenced by her background of citizen action and will be — "for lack of a better word — a people campaign," defines the young hopeful.

"I don't have a lot of money and I don't want fanfare — a slick campaign. What I want to do is to depend a lot on volunteers. If you don't get a lot of volunteers there's no sense in ever having a lot of money poured in. It's people help that counts.

A preoccupation and actuating principle of her career to date, has been the problems of people struggling with the complexities of business and government bureaucracy.

"Bureaucracies, local, provincial and federal, have grown to solve the growing problems of society — how to develop mechanisms to deal with that kind of complexity."

The federal Liberals have "tried to make the bureaucracy more accessible," she believes.

Socially, she sees the party of her choice as an amalgam of all that's worked in free enterprise and socialism — selecting the approach that solves the problem. There've been snags — including unemployment insurance administration, she admits. But nothing that can't be worked out with a positive approach.

"If you keep on taking the negative approach to these things, scrapping them because of problems, you're not going to get anything solved," says the hopeful campaigner.

Why now party political commitment

For one thing, she says, she senses a cynicism — particularly in the Watergate era — toward public affairs and political associations everywhere having difficulty finding candidates. "People are retreating from civic responsibility ..."

Mrs. Kurchak shows no concern that being a newcomer with no political background in the riding — could be a negative campaign factor. Facts are easily absorbed and she's an experienced researcher.

"What is important is the spirit with which I approach this area."

It's an area where she sees relatively unspoiled and worthy of preserving.

It's an area that she's serious about representing in parliament, Mrs. Kurchak emphasizes.

"Yes," she says. "I will be very disappointed if I lose. I really want to win."

Corbyville Boy Killed

A nine-year-old Corbyville boy, Stephen Charles Hillier, was killed late yesterday afternoon when he was struck by a car while he crossed Highway 37 at Honeywell Corners, between Front Garth and Fifth Concession, Thurlow.

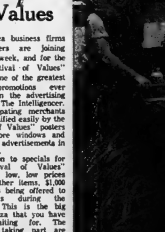
PC Shane Harkness, of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said that the young boy and a companion were crossing the highway on their way home from school when the boy was hit by a northbound car driven by William Gerald Wilkes, 48, of RR 3 Arden.

At the time of the accident, the boys were hidden from the view of the driver by a southbound school bus that was making a turn.

No charges have been laid in relation to the incident.

The accident occurred at 4:05 p.m.

Old-time Shearing Revived Sunday



Sheep dog and sheep shearing demonstrations will be reenacted on Sunday, June 2 at the Peterborough Exhibition Centennial Century Village at Lang, 15 miles southeast of Peterborough.

A shepherd with his sheep dog will be herding his flock while a shearer relieves the sheep of their heavy winter coats with hand shears as it was done 100 years ago.

Sheep shearing is the life of the pioneer and provided not only food and clothing but candles but also wool for clothing, rugs and bedding. Women and children washed and carded the wool before dyeing and spinning.

Many of these early crafts will be demonstrated throughout the village; carding, dyeing with vegetables, spinning, rug hooking and weaving.

Century village at Lang is a group of pioneer structures, many of which have been moved to the site and includes the old Lang mill on Indian River two miles north of Keene. Included in the pioneer buildings are old farm houses, municipal and church structures, a general store, inn and blacksmith shop, dating back to the 1830s.

Belle Base

A vacant downtown movie house will be Liberal headquarters during the federal election in Hastings riding.

The Belle Theatre, recently closed after a long run as the city's major downtown theatre, has been acquired by the party for the campaign, Frank Chapman, Hastings Liberal association president said Tuesday.

The theatre auditorium will be used to house the crucial curtain-raiser for the Liberal campaign — its nominating convention.

The convention will be held June 6 and the keynote speaker will be announced later.

Meantime, said Mr. Chapman, the campaign rooms will open this weekend and telephones already have been installed. Telephone number is 968-1141.

Deaf Teacher Guest Speaker

A teacher of the deaf, who has been several deaf since birth, will be the speaker at the June 7 meeting of the Quinte Association of Hearing Handicapped Children. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the Teacher Education Centre, Ontario School for the Deaf.

Charles Bourke, a teacher at the Montreal Oral School is coming to Belleville for the meeting. The school at which he teaches is one of the few completely oral day schools for the deaf in Canada.

Mr. Bourke, who bears some sounds with the use of a hearing aid, received his early education in New York and holds a degree in commercial art from Brooklyn's Pratt Institute. He continued graduate work at Yale and Columbia. Two years ago, he lived with a Spanish family in Barcelona while on holiday and learned to speak Spanish. He is now studying Dutch in preparation for a holiday trip to Holland. He is particularly interested in speaking to the parents of deaf children while he is in Belleville.

Retailers Offering Big Values

Many area business firms and retailers are joining hands this week, and for the eight "Festival of Values" issues for one of the greatest sales promotions ever presented in the advertising columns of The Intelligencer. The participating merchants can be identified easily by the "Festival of Values" posters in their store windows and through the advertisements in these papers.

In addition to specials for the "Festival of Values" weeks, and low, low prices on many other items, $1,000 in prizes is being offered to shoppers during the promotion. This is the big sales bonanza that you have been waiting for. The businesses taking part are offering reduced prices and other sales incentives.

Check the Festival of Values advertisements in Tuesday's papers and every week for the duration of the promotion. And, with these prices, go hundreds of others that will appeal to your pocketbook. The merchants offering them have their sales people geared for the finest of personal service. Look for the "Festival of Values" window posters ... Check the "Festival of Values" price tags ... In all of the participating stores!

Hydro Man Says Dialogue Essential

The public and a utility such as Ontario Hydro should co-operate with one another when it comes to making decisions concerning both.

This was the message from Ontario Hydro public relations director, Jim Durand in a speech to Kiwanis Club members this week.

"The involvement by the public (in such matters as setting up Hydro transmission lines) is a double edged sword. They are responsible as both adults and as Mr. Durand.

"We can have a citizen group that is responsible having difficulties with an irresponsible utility. So we can have irresponsible citizen groups having trouble with a responsible utility."

"This takes a lot of co-operation on the part of the public and the utility. And we must have a government that makes courageous decisions," added Mr. Durand.

Mr. Durand was responding to questions of public distrust he said were generated toward Ontario Hydro following public meetings set up in 1972 to deal with the matter of transmission lines running through private property.

"What we must do now is involve the public early enough to take part in the decision-making processes," he said. After the first series of public meetings in 1972, the public couldn't participate until after the decisions were made by Ontario Hydro.

"We must also be aware," said Mr. Durand, illustrating a means of regaining the public trust. "We should have Ontario Hydro show a willingness to respond to the needs of the public."

Seeking Nomination Nod

Marie Kurchak is a young journalist and communications consultant who may become first woman to contest federal election in Hastings riding. She says she and husband are moving from Toronto to Belleville area and she's intent on winning Liberal nomination for July 8 campaign — a topic she's discussed with party's executive, including local president Frank Chapman.

Mortgage Aid Promised

PCs May Curb Credit Buying

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Robert Stanfield promised Tuesday night to give an income tax break to homeowners burdened with high mortgage interest rates.

But the national Progressive Conservative leader also hinted that his party may take tough measures against credit buyers if it is elected July 8.

The mortgage interest proposal, made to a cheering election audience of about 1,800 here, was one of the first promises by Mr. Stanfield since he opened his campaign tour last week.

Under his proposal, taxpayers could deduct interest costs that exceed eight per cent on the first mortgage of a principal residence.

"It is our intention to bring interest rates down by controlling inflation," Mr. Stanfield said.

"But persons who have taken on mortgages at excessive rates will continue to suffer for some years to come.

"In order to alleviate at least in part the harsh impact of these unreasonably higher interest rates on homeowners, we propose to permit taxpayers to deduct interest in excess of eight per cent.

"This was the approximate rate in effect when Mr. Trudeau first began to mismanage the economy."

The Conservative leader said the deduction would be limited to a maximum of $1,000 a year.

The cost the scheme would be about 10 per cent of what the government now spends yearly on outside consultants, he said. A total of $780 million will be spent by the government on consultants fees this year, he added.

Conservative officials gave some examples of the savings that could result from the plan. They said an Ontario man, with two children under 18 and earning $10,000 annually, could save $90 to $300, depending on the size of his mortgage and the interest rate he was paying.

Mr. Stanfield also dropped a hint about how his proposed anti-inflation policies would affect the consumer.

"I believe we have to establish more appropriate minimum down payments in the consumer market: I believe we must discourage the purchase and the hire-purchase of many non-essentials.

"I believe we can restructure our tariff policy to reduce the costs of certain imports."

Conservative officials said they could not amplify his remarks, but they acknowledged that it appeared as though a Conservative government would seek higher down payments for credit buying.

There was no indication here the purchase of non-essentials either through cash or instalments — hire-purchase — would be discouraged.

David Lewis Curious About Spending Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis said Tuesday night a Progressive Conservative government would slash expenditures which help the needy while creating a giant bureaucracy to run the proposed wage-and-price control program.

Speaking at an NDP nomination meeting in Ottawa West, Mr. Lewis called on Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield to specify what programs would be cut by a Conservative government pledged to reduce spending.

At the same time, Mr. Stanfield should tell public servants what would happen to their jobs and salaries, Mr. Lewis told about 150 people attending the meeting.

Mr. Lewis said he agrees there is waste in government spending, particularly in "unnecessary empire building in the civil service."

But this is not what the Conservatives are talking about cutting.

"They are talking about the humane programs, programs which help the poor and the aged, which help families with children, which help the destitute and the genuinely unemployed.

"The Tories want to reduce the quality of life for Canadians. They would make life unlivable for those who rely on some of these programs."

The NDP leader said the Liberal government has not dealt with inefficiencies that should be eliminated and neither the Conservatives nor the Liberals have shown any indication they would deal effectively with public service problems.

Among these problems were the disparity of salaries and salary increases between senior civil servants and those at lower levels, the "snail's pace of equality of opportunity" for women in the public service and regional discrepancies in pay rates for federal employees.

Trudeau's Description

Price Controls -- a Disaster Looking for a Place to Happen

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau came to Robert Stanfield's original power base Tuesday night to attack the price and wage controls advocated by the Progressive Conservative leader.

In the Cumberland-Colchester North constituency, so far without a Liberal candidate, the prime minister described the controls as "a disaster looking for a place to happen."

He came to this central Nova Scotia town after a day of whistle-stopping on a special train originating in Sydney and scheduled to terminate in Montreal late Friday.

At a school auditorium packed with about 1,000 persons, the prime minister continued his attack on the Conservative approach to inflation, saying it would create far more problems that it would solve.

Accompanied by his wife, Margaret, the prime minister received a standing ovation from the crowd and was warmly supported by Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan, who said "wage and price controls would not be a good policy for Nova Scotia."

The premier said that, this time, Nova Scotia would elect more than the one Liberal—Peter Council President Allan MacEachen—it elected last time.

Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau were nearly an hour late arriving at the nearby Bible Hill school auditorium where the crowd waited patiently for them.

The prime minister had spent the day whistle-stopping from Sydney, usually in a driving rain storm, and talking to residents at each stop.

He broke little new ground in his statements, repeating that it was the Conservatives and New Democrats who forced the election but that the Liberal party was ready and confident in the battle that had been forced on them.

The speech at Bible Hill was his only major statement of the day and, again, he emphasized economic matters, dealing particularly with the Conservative policy of wage and price controls.

He said that in 1968 and 1969, some 6,000 Nova Scotians left Province for opportunities elsewhere but that in 1973-74, 6,000 people came to Nova Scotia.

"If this can continue, it's the most beautiful thing that can happen to Canada."

The prime minister is scheduled to leave Truro early today with a two-hour noon-time stop in Moncton, spending the night in Campbellton.

He planned to make several stops along the way.

Cauouette Enters Hospital

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette was admitted to D'Youville Hospital in Rouyn Tuesday night to undergo a series of tests in connection with diabetes, a disease he has suffered for some time.

Mr. Caouette said in an interview at his home earlier Tuesday that it was nothing serious.

His doctor, Achille Juneau, said in an interview that the 56-year-old politician will remain in hospital until Friday.

Mr. Caouette said he looks fine, feels fine and has no intention of dropping out of the July 8 election campaign.

He has had health problems since late last year. He spent a large part of the winter recuperating from a throat injury suffered in a snowmobile accident during the Christmas holidays.

Fort Erie Hotel Called Drug Depot

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General George Kerr labelled a Fort Erie hotel a drug depot Tuesday in the wake of complaints about police tactics during a raid on the Landmark Motor Inn earlier this month.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon called for a public inquiry into the raid which saw the hotel patrons stripped and searched by police.

More than 50 policemen and police women searched about 115 customers and found several ounces of marijuana.

Opposition Party members peppered Mr. Kerr with questions about the May 11 raid, which involved RCMP and Niagara regional police.

Mr. Kerr said that entire area of the Niagara Peninsula is of great concern to the police because of drugs crossing the border from New York state.

Outside the legislature, Mr. Kerr noted that a number of people in the hotel were Americana.

In an interview outside the legislature, the solicitor-general called the hotel a centre for drug trafficking and said there was nothing wrong with police searching patrons.

"It's a fairly common occurence," he said.

In the legislature, Mr. Kerr told the opposition leader that he does not think there is a great deal of public concern over the incident.

"None of the people involved complained," he said.

However, the minister asked the legislature to wait until he had a full report before the members made any demands for a public inquiry.

However, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said in an interview from Prince Albert, Sask.:

"Under no circumstances can that (raid) be justified."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Supreme Court of Canada has ruled that the Canadian Bill of Rights, made law by his government in 1960, both negates and makes unlawful the powers of search under the Narcotics Control Act.

The Bill of Rights provides that any law that denies fundamental freedoms cannot legally be used for any purpose, Mr. Diefenbaker said, adding that the Narcotics Control Act denies those freedoms.

Federal Justice Minister Otto Lang said from Regina he had never examined the broad powers of search under the act because, until now, there had never been cause to look at it from a matter of policy.

M. F. Hatch of Welland, Ont., a member of the Niagara regional council and one of two elected representatives serving on the Niagara police commission, said in an interview:

"The question at this point is whether the police can conduct a drug search like this.

"I don't like a law that permits the police to conduct that type of personal search. They should have extremely good grounds first."

Legislature Refuses to OK Land Speculation Measure

TORONTO (CP) — The legislature came to an angry halt early today when the government failed in its attempt to push the controversial land speculation tax through the house.

Members spent until 1:15 a.m. today arguing about whether they should sit beyond the regular closing time of 10:30 p.m.

Government House Leader Eric Winkler angered the opposition by calling for the overtime session after the legislature had spent all afternoon in clause-by-clause study of the bill.

Mr. Winkler accused the opposition of obstructing the orderly passage of legislation.

The NDP provoked the wrath of the government members by calling for a recorded vote, then making the government wait 1½ hours when they left the chamber.

Another attempted recorded vote minutes later was delayed when some Conservatives left the chamber.

The bill—which if approved would put a 50-per-cent tax on land speculation profits—remained bogged down in committee. The legislation has been debated for four weeks.

Mr. Winkler, before giving up in his attempt to get the bill out of committee Tuesday night, said he was "appalled at the ability of the NDP to frustrate the workings of the legislature."

Members will get another crack at the bill Thursday.

Voluntary Pay Hikes Advocated

HAMILTON (CP) — Employers should adopt a flexible attitude when employees seek wage increases before their contracts expire, Peter Higgen, vice-president of Noranda Mines Ltd., said Tuesday.

"The rate of inflation wasn't foreseen when many contracts were negotiated," he told the annual convention of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce.

"We should do something about it and create a reservoir of good will."

Mr. Higgen predicted continuing inflation will cause a trend toward shorter collective agreements or greater use of cost-of-living clauses.

The 400 delegates at the meeting approved a resolution calling on the Ontario government to reinstate payments to merchants for collecting provincial sales taxes.

Such payments were stopped by the province because large retailers were receiving a disproportionate amount of the total compensation.

Seeks Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — Pakistani Foreign Minister Aziz Ahmed has appealed to Canada to impose a total nuclear aid to India, a move he feels would give his country some measure of security against nuclear attack by its neighbor.

Mr. Ahmed announced this at a news conference Tuesday after meeting with Ed Ritchie, deputy minister of external affairs, and other Canadian officials.

No Decision

TORONTO (CP) — The government has made no decision to build a second airport on Toronto Island, Premier William Davis said Tuesday.

Quints 40

MONTREAL (CP) — The three surviving Dionne quintuplets, Annette, Cecile and Yvonne, celebrated their 40th birthdays Tuesday, without a family reunion.

In a telephone interview, Annette, Mrs. G. Allard, said she planned to spend the day quietly and that the three sisters did not intend to celebrate their birthdays together.

All three live in the Montreal area.

Orderly Jailed

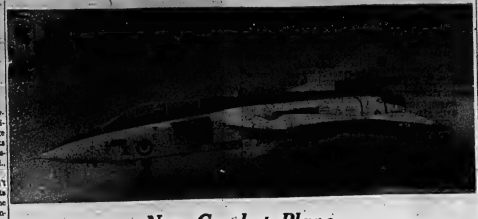
KINGSTON (CP) — A hospital orderly was sentenced Tuesday in provincial court to a 12-month jail term for assaulting a temporarily paralyzed and mute woman patient three times.

Paul L. Hughes, 21 of Sharbot Lake, Ont., convicted of indecent assault April 30, also was ordered placed on two-years probation on completion of his sentence.

The woman, who has since recovered from an illness, which had left her temporarily mute and paralysed, appeared in court April 30 to testify.

Trial Delayed

TORONTO (CP) — The trial of seven Toronto dentuists charged with practising without the supervision of a dental surgeon was postponed Tuesday pending an appeal before the Ontario Court of Appeal.



John Rook, lawyer for six of the seven, told provincial court Judge W. L. Cambell that he is seeking orders quashing police search warrants.

Vegas Heat

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors says it is responsible for engine damage caused by overheating in up to 1.3 million Chevrolet Vegas and will make needed repairs free of charge. Every Vega the company has made is involved in GM's offer.

New Combat Plane

This multi-role combat aircraft (MRCA) is undergoing ground trials at a test airfield near Munich, West Germany. The MRCA, a two-seater swing wing, is the product of a tri-national agreement, and will be the key front-line aircraft of the Royal Air Force, the German Navy and the Italian Air Force. (CP Photo)

Gun Supplier Faces Four Firearm Charges

TORONTO (CP) — A Peterborough man who has been supplying Canadian police forces with service revolvers for several years appeared in provincial court Tuesday on four gun charges.

John Thorndyke Wolff, 47, whose firm, Albion Guns, won Metropolitan Toronto police department gun contracts in 1972 and 1973, was charged jointly with Adrian Mathis, 44, of Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Wolff was released on bail and Mathis committed to the Don Jail. Both will appear in court June 4.

Pay Raised

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A 9.5-per-cent increase in the minimum salary for Anglican clergymen in Ontario diocese, located in the eastern end of the province, was approved Tuesday by delegates attending the annual diocesan synod.

The new schedules of minimum stipends ranges from $5,595 for a minister with four years experience to $6,105 for those with 15 years experience.

However, a survey of 50 ministers, most of those in the diocese, showed the average annual stipend is $6,714.

Aid Planned

KITCHENER (CP) — Plans for a six-member committee to co-ordinate flood-relief programs in the Waterloo region were drawn up Tuesday.

The committee is to be made up of two citizens from Cambridge, two from Kitchener and two from the Mennonite religious group.

Bell Asks Rates Tied To Increase in Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada lawyers concluded their case for higher rates for telephone service Tuesday with a plea for a plan to protect the company from inflation.

It was the first time Bell had made a proposal before the Canadian transport commission for indexing, the term used for automatic adjustments to allow for price inflation.

Lawyers for Ontario and Quebec, the main intervenors in the rate application case, did not consider the request a serious one at this stage, saying it is not a new idea.

The plan as proposed by Bell counsel Ernest Saunders has not been backed up by expert testimony on the merits of applying indexing to the telephone company situation.

Bell executives have suggested previously that indexing might be necessary.

Mr. Saunders said Bell should be able to get extra income to cover "inexorable and inevitable" cost increases.

He cited four factors for which rate adjustments should be allowed because of inflated costs: wages and associated benefits; taxes other than income taxes; depreciation; and cost of debt financing.

"It now seems inevitable that when Bell looks ahead into 1975 and 1976 it will be able to see . . . that there will be uncontrollable cost increases in reasonably identifiable amounts."

Mr. Saunders asked the commission to set a range on rate of return on invested capital of between 8.6 per cent and 9.5 per cent within which the company would be allowed to operate. Under the proposal, Bell would be allowed rate adjustments if rate of return or equity moved outside that range.

He said this might eliminate the need for annual rate hearings but proposed that there be "full dress hearings" for Bell to justify rate changes to adjust for the impact of inflation.

Plan to Pay Prisoners Confirmed

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand confirmed Tuesday that federal authorities are working on a plan which would put prisoners at federal penitentiaries in everyday working situations and would pay them up to the federal minimum wage of $2.30 an hour.

"The plans are not complete yet but we've been working on this for a long time," Mr. Allmand said.

"The purpose of the program is to pay up to the federal minimum wage to federal penitentiary prisoners who work on federal industrial projects."

The reason for such a program, he said, is to condition the men to the work ethic and enable them to step right into a working routine once they are released.

"A lot of prisoners who serve five, seven or 10 years are not attuned to a work routine when they are released and consequently turn to a life of crime. We are going to try to stop this by getting these men used to an eight-hour work day, five days a week."

Mr. Allmand said the men would not be paid the federal minimum wage of $2.30 an hour right away.

"They will earn that salary once they become fully productive and not when they are learning. They will earn less while they are learning to become fully productive.

Chinese Naval Uniform Restored

By PETER T. SUM
The Canadian Press

Part of a military clothing order issued by Lin Piao shortly after he was appointed China's defence minister in the mid-1960s now has been rescinded by the defence ministry.

Lin ordered in 1965 that the Chinese armed forces discard their Soviet-style uniforms. He instructed officers and men alike to wear the uniform of the "volunteers" he had commanded during China's involvement in the 1950-1953 Korean war.

He reasoned that the shapeless button-up tunic with baggy pants and a soft cap with a cloth visor worn by Chinese troops in Korea reflected the proletarian character of the armed forces.

Similar clothing is common among Chinese civilians.

To distinguish the military man from the civilian, Lin dressed the army in olive green, the air force in brown and the navy in pale blue. He also abolished military ranks and in place of rank insignias, the uniforms had two small rectangular red tabs on their collar.

Rescinding part of Lin's order has come 18 months after Lin was reported to have died in a plane crash in Outer Mongolia while fleeing to the Soviet Union.

Chinese Premier Chou En-lai has said that Lin fled after plotting to assassinate Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

The late defence minister along with the ancient Chinese sage, Confucius, are targets of an attack initiated by the party in a countrywide drive to improve the working style of all Chinese.

An announcement distributed earlier this month by the official New China news agency said the defence ministry has put the sailor back in the pre-1965 uniform of dark blue pants, white jerkin with a dark blue collar and a white-rim peak cap.

The jerkin is worn Soviet style, tucked into the top of the pants held up at the waist by a buckled black leather belt.

As in the days before Lin's 1965 order, the white jerkin has blue buttoned-down cuffs with four white stripes. The same number of white stripes also run along the outer edge of the turned-down collar.

The naval uniform was first introduced early in 1950, several months after Mao proclaimed the establishment of the people's republic.

An official announcement at that time said the four white stripes on the jerkin represented the navy's northern, eastern, southern and river fleets.

The sailor's cap bears the military emblem of a five-pointed red star with the Chinese characters for Eight One (Aug. 1) in gold in its centre.

China's armed forces, known officially as the Chinese People's Liberation Army, trace their origin to a Communist-led military uprising in Nanchang, central China, on Aug. 1, 1927.

Also on the cap but below the military emblem are the nine Chinese characters for Chinese People's Liberation Army Navy embroidered in gold on a black silk ribbon tied to the rear of the cap-leaving two lengths of the ribbon hanging from there.

The naval uniform shows a slight change from pre-1965 days. Where rank insignias were displayed, two small rectangular red tabs are on the shoulders of the jerkin.

No explanation was given why the naval uniform has been brought back after almost 10 years of absence.

The announcement also did not say if the army and the air force are in line for their uniform switch.

Immigrants Fare Better Than Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — Post-war immigrants have on average become better off financially than native-born Canadians, a Statistics Canada study shows.

The survey, taken in 1970, covered family income and assets of immigrants who arrived between 1946 and 1960 compared with native-born Canadians.

Family income of the immigrants was 10.5 per cent higher and the value of personal possessions was 21.8 per cent more. Personal assets do not include business or professional invested holdings.

Ownership of a home is a major factor in personal worth and this was one of the reasons the immigrant families came out ahead on average.

Among immigrants in the survey, 70.8 per cent owned homes while only 63 per cent of the natives were homeowners.

Average personal worth of the immigrant group was $18,953 compared with $15,562 for the native-born group. The immigrants had average family income of $9,963 during 1970 while the average for Canadian-born was $9,026.

Equity in a home accounted for 72.4 per cent of personal worth of immigrants and 69.2 per cent of the Canadian-born.

In dollar terms, the average equity in a home amounted to $17,996 for immigrant families and $13,669 for Canadian-born families—a differential of 31.7 per cent in favor of the immigrant group.

A major part of the reason for the difference was that the Canadian-born families were distributed between urban and rural areas whereas immigrants tend to be concentrated in the cities where prices and price increases of houses are greater.

Last Metal Being Picked Off Hulk of Queen of Seas

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The last metal morsels are being picked from the sunken hulk of the Queen Elizabeth, once he pride of the transatlantic run.

For years it had been a majestic floating palace for dukes and millionaires, carrying the cream of American and European society between New York, Cherbourg and Southampton.

Now all that remains, like some vast prehistoric skeleton, is a hulk of metal scrap just visible above the water of Hong Kong's otherwise picturesque harbor.

Disaster struck in January, 1972. The mighty 83,000-ton vessel, bought, by a Chinese shipping magnate here and being converted to a floating university, was gutted by fire.

A special marine court inquiry found the fires were deliberately started but no arrests have ever been made.

Now there are plans to blow off the underwater bow and stern of the ship with explosive charges—in effect, finally to break the ship's 35-year-old back.

Once this has been done, a marine department spokesman said, it may be possible to refloat the centre section of the hull.

Soon after the disastrous blaze, when the once-proud Cunard flagship wallowed over onto its starboard side and settled on the harbor bottom, one expert said moving the wreckage would be "easily the biggest salvage operation in maritime history."

The scrapping of the wreck's superstructure has been completed, but the complicated cutting of the bow and stern sections may take until next year.

The marine department spokesman said the whole operation may not be completed until 1977-78.

The work will get more difficult as it reaches the bottom of the wreck because of silting.

Thousands of tons of scrap have been picked from the ship. Much of it is reported to have been sold to China.

Whoever set the fires which engulfed the former liner more than two years ago achieved what Adolf Hitler failed to do during the Second World War.

The German dictator offered U-boat captains a reward equivalent to more than $184,000 and the Iron Cross for the man who could sink it.

But the Queen Elizabeth carried 800,000 troops across the Atlantic and covered half a million miles in five oceans during its wartime voyages.

It was built on the Clyde by the famous John Brown Co. of Glasgow and launched in September, 1938.

"Her initial days here after American businessmen who bought it from the Cunard Steam-Ship Line failed in their plans to turn it into a tourist attraction at Port Everglades, Fla.

Hong Kong shipping tycoon C. Y. Tung paid an auction price of some $2.87 million for the Queen Elizabeth in September, 1970.

He renamed it Seawise University and had hopes for United Nations backing in the project.

He spent $10 million on renovations and workmen were putting the finishing touches to the refit.

But Tung's dreams ended on Jan. 9, 1972. The last pocket of fire aboard still was smouldering five days later.

Now the thousands of tourists who visit this British colony each month have the charred and twisted corpse pointed out to them.

"She's pretty sad-looking," said one former Royal Navy commander. "What a sad way for her to go."

William Henry Harrison, at 68 the oldest U.S. president ever inverted, was also the first to die in office, in 1841, one month after his inauguration.

New Yeast Thrives in Cold And Can 'Eat Up' Oil Spills

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Research Council scientist has isolated a strain of yeast which thrives in the cold and can be used to "eat up" oil spills in the fragile Arctic environment.

"Permafrost is so easily damaged that you can't scrape up pipeline spills mechanically," said Dr. Toshi Kaneda in an interview. "With any damage to the surface area, erosion would be very serious."

Yeasts and bacteria have been used experimentally in the United States to clean up oil spills by decomposing various elements in the oil. But it was too cold in Canada for the micro-organisms to grow.

So the council obtained soil samples from various northern airstrips soaked with hydrocarbon fuel, and analyzed them to determine what types of organisms flourished under the harsh conditions.

A psychrophilic—thriving in cold—strain of the yeast Candida sake was isolated from soil taken in Sachs Harbour, N.W.T., and was found to "eat up" the hydrocarbons in petroleum, said Dr. Kaneda.

A major advantage of yeast is that it can be dried, stored for a period of time and then reactivated, he added. Bacteria was harder to preserve.

To be used on an oil spill, the yeast must be grown in tons, mixed with mineral nutrients and compressed into pellets. The pellets would be spread over the spill and the yeast would begin growing in the presence of moisture.

"The yeast uses hundreds of materials in the soil," said Dr. Kaneda. "After the oil is chewed up, the yeast dies and other bugs chew up the yeast. They're no environmental messing up at all."

He noted that soil normally contains many organisms which would degrade spilled oil over a number of years.

"The idea is to accelerate the process three to four times so the vegetation will come back."

A light spill could probably be decomposed by yeast in a summer, he said.

Although the project still is in the experimental stage, results so far are significant.

Research is also progressing on development of a micro-organism which could be used in the reclamation of the Alberta oil sands, said Dr. Kaneda.

"Heavy oil from the sands is more difficult to decompose than conventional crude oil," he said. "Some people believe heavy oil is what is left over from the biodegration of conventional oil," although he did not share the view.

"There are very few alkanes (hydrocarbons), the favorite food for yeast," in the sands. "A mixed culture, a combination of 10 or more microbes," would probably be more effective than yeast in oil-sand decomposition.

The council has obtained soil samples from the northeastern Alberta sands, he said. They contained yeasts, but the yeasts seemed to be living on something other han the oil.

Although environmental protection has been the chief aim of yeast research so far, Dr. Kaneda and his assistants have also been concerned about the production of protein from yeasts grown on oil.

Tests have shown that the yield of psychrophilic yeast is 3 grams for each gram of hydrocarbon consumed, said Dr. Kaneda.

The yeast would have to be grown in a fermenter with alkanes or heavy oil plus nutrients, then filtered and dried. It could be used as feed for pigs and chickens.

"So much protein is available on our continent" that it is not now economically feasible to grow the yeast for protein, even though the cost is comparable to production of soybeans or rapeseed, he said.

"People won't buy a new product unless there is a new advantage."

But plants in France and Scotland are currently producing feeds from yeast and in 10 years the demand could exist in Canada, he said.

Trenton Dominates COSSA Track Meet

By ALAN TEBWORTH
Sports Staff

NAPANEE — Trenton High School ended up the top school over-all at the Central Ontario Secondary School Association, (COSSA), track meet held here on Tuesday, racking up 190 points in the boys division and 56 in the girls, to win the school championship with 246 points.

Crestwood Secondary School of Peterborough was second with 116 points in the girls' section and 52 in the boys' for 16 points edging out McLaughlin High School of Oshawa.

McLaughlin collected 148 points on 24 in-the girls' and 124 in the boys'.

In AA boys standings, Trenton came out on top, with 190 points; with McLaughlin second.

In AA girls, Crestwood won the title, with their 112 points, Trenton was second.

Oshawa Catholic Central High School took the over-all title for A schools, with 69 points.

Trenton was, of course, tops in Bay of Quinte Schools concept, with Napanee second with 138. Moira was third in line with 90.

Included in the Impressive Trenton totals were 10 wins and two individual titles.

The winners are:

Hilary Wright in the midget girls' section took a pair of wins, as well as capturing the individual honors. She recorded a time of 12.9 in the 80 metre hurdles, as well as jumping 5' in the high jump. It was the high jump on which her individual honors title was based.

The only other girls winner was Brenda Lawry, with a 2.33 flat clocking in the senior 800 metre run.

Seven wins were recorded in the boys' section, with one double winner.

The midget boys' relay team in the 4 by 100 metres had a 47.7 clocking to take that race.

Jeff Skaggs in the 800 metres ran a new personal best, 2:08.9, to win the event.

Chris Thompson had two wins under his belt-for the day, in long jump and triple jump competitions.

His triple jump of 13.10 metres converts to 43'3", just off the record, while his long jump of 6.61 metres, some 21 feet, was .07 metres off the COSSA mark.

Joe Belanger took the junior pole vault with a mark of 3.36 metres (11'3"), while Isaac Saylor was the winner in the junior discus with a toss of 36.2 metres, which converts to 162.5 feet.

Nick Alexander, the only winner in the senior division from Trenton, was also the individual winner in the senior boys' 110 hurdles.

Other individual winners were, in the junior girls' section, Jean Jeneret of College East, and Barb Graham of Belleville Collegiate Institute, a tie, with both jumping 1.57 metres in the high jump.

Arlene Keaply of Courtice ran a 12.9 in the 100 metres to take the individual championship in the senior girls' section.

Allan Thompson of Napanee was top midget with a new COSSA record throw of 49.4 metres in the discus.

Jim Brennan of Clark High School took the honors in the junior boys' division with a 14.8 time in the 110 metre hurdles.

A total of seven new records were set in the meet, two, in the senior girls, and five in the boys' sections.

Angela DeWild of Clark High School ran a 5:04.6 1500 metres, with the Crestwood relay team running 4:17.2 in the 4 by 400 run.

Casey Umb of Brighton set a new mark of 43.4 seconds in the 300 mextre hurdles, while Ray Porter of Pemberton High School of Oshawa high jumped 1.9 metres. Thompson's discus throw was the other record in the midget section.

In the junior division, Al Sechenoic of Thomas A. Stewart, of Peterborough, blazed over the track in the 800 metres in 1:58.6 seconds, while Darrel Colby of McLaughlin ran a 4:14.9 in the 1500 metres.

No records were set in the senior boys' competitions.

Over 1000 athletes competed in 75 different events during the day—at the newly completed track.

Caught in the sky at the peak of his vault is Mitch Auger of Bayside Secondary School. Auger took the senior Boy's pole vault with a jump of 11' 3", edging Doug Cramp of Bowmanville. Both had leaps of the same heights, with Auger taking the win on the basis of fewer misses at the low-er heights.

About to hit the dirt after his winning long jump of 6.61 metres, is Bob Thompson of the Trenton High School Track Club. Thompson took two titles at the COSSA track and field meet, held yesterday in Napanee. He took the triple jump as well as the long jump, with a 13.10 metre hop, skip, and jump.

Was Original Hearing Biased?

TORONTO (CP) — Trent Frayne, a Toronto journalist, said Tuesday that an aggressive atmosphere faced Gerry Henderson, president of Bramalea Blugs of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B League, as he attempted to explain his team's withdrawal from the all-Ontario final before an OHA hearing last month.

Frayne, a writer for The Star, told the provincial inquiry into violence in amateur hockey that "Mr. Henderson was receiving an unbiased hearing."

He said the only issue at the April 26 meeting was that the Bramalea club had violated an OHA regulation in pulling out of the series with Hamilton Red Wings.

The instances of violence cited by Bramalea officials for their decision were not considered.

"I thought the issue was much broader than that" and since Henderson was to be "publicly unfrocked", he should have been given every opportunity to state his position, Frayne said.

Henderson earlier testified he felt as if he "was going into a lion's den" when he entered the meeting.

Testimony at the hearing's first session Monday included statements by Bramalea coach Richard Hay that he feared for the safety of his players following the violence-filled first game April 16 in which 189 minutes in penalties were assessed.

Accusations also were made by various witnesses that a foreign object may have been used by one of the Red Wings in an altercation in which a Bramalea player had the cornea of his left eye scratched.

Hay blamed inadequate officiating for allowing the game to get out of hand.

Henderson said Tuesday that when the question of officiating was raised at the April 23 meeting, it was ruled out of order by Hugh McLean, an OHA vice-president and supervisor of officials.

"Every time we attempted to make a point, we were subjected to the opinions of the (OHA) committee itself," he said.

Henderson said his council also was denied the right to question Hamilton coach Ron Templeton concerning the game won by Bramalea 3-2.

At the meeting, Henderson was suspended for two seasons and Hay and club manager Gerry Offidani for one year each.

Henderson said he was "solely responsible" for the decision to pull the club out of the series and had nothing to do with the earlier resignations of Hay and Offidani.

The team president said a Bramalea official had gathered "about a dozen people" who had agreed to accompany the club to Hamilton and ring the bench to protect Hay and the players.

In a letter to William Hanley, secretary-manager of the OHA, Henderson said he "must withdraw for the safety of our players."

William Harris, a member of the Ontario Amateur Hockey League executive for five years and father of Billy Harris of New York Islanders of the National Hockey League, said if OHA executive members had been present at the game, much of the brawling might have been prevented.

He said such officials could have spoken to representatives of both clubs after the first period—when it was evident further outbreaks might occur—and stopped the game under control.

William Jackman, a scout for Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Major Junior A series, said that the game was "the most violent" he had ever seen.

The hearing adjourned Tuesday and will reconvene June 4 when Bill President Clarence Campbell is scheduled to appear.

Auger's Wastes No-hitter

George Ferguson of the Trenton Auger Men's Wear team must be wondering what he must do to win a ball game after Tuesday night's game with Howard and Robert Printing.

Ferguson threw nine innings of no-hit ball, striking out eight, but still managed only a tie with the Printers. The final score — 0-0.

Ferguson's team banged out six hits off Printers' hurler Bob Ebbert, but still could not put together the right combination for a run.

Auger's had their chances, however, leaving men stranded on third base twice, in the first and third innings, and men on second three times, in the third, fifth, and sixth.

They left a total of six men on the baselines.

Howard and Robert left four men on base, including two at third, one in the third inning and once in the fifth.

Auger Men's pitcher Jim Clements, Jack Jury, and Larry Mavety, all with two singles each.

Ferguson finished his no-hitter with eight whiffs, walking five batsmen.

Ebbert gave up six hits, striking out 14, while issuing only a single base on balls.

In the second game of the night, Rollins Construction trek its third win against no losses with a 5-0 whitewash of the Ellis Printing Juniors.

Rollins got at least one hit from every player in the lineup, up except Ralph Plaue, to shellack the Juniors.

Carl Boomhower led the Rollins' attack to seven inning home run, with Glen Carlton contributing a triple and single, with Dale Duvall adding a pair of two baggers.

Boomer hits went to Wayne McTaggart, with a triple and single, Doug Dafoe, Ted Waite, and Doug Adams, each with a single.

Duvall scored the winning run in the top of the second inning, doubling to right and being driven in by Dafoe's single.

The Constructionmen got two more in the fourth, combining McTaggart's triple, a double by Duvall, and singles by Waite and Adams.

Two runs came in the seventh, on Boomhower's home run, and Carlton's three base hit. Ralph Plane's infield out drove Carlton to the plate.

Ted Waite took the win on the Rollins' rubber, giving up only one hit, that to third baseman Ken Yeo in the second inning. He left nine standing at the plate, striking out only one.

John Sprackett absorbed the loss, giving up 10 hits, whiffing two and walking the same number.

The loss put the Junior's record at one win against two losses.

The league is idle now until Thursday night, when Rollins Construction will hardon Supply look up in the first game of the doubleheader. In the second contest, Dervelin Motors take on Auger Men's Wear.

Posties, Leaders, Meads Are On the Winning End

A pair of four-hitters highlighted the pitching performances in the Belleville Industrial Softball League Tuesday night action.

Post Office hurler Norm Lockhart limited Canadian Tire to four hits in his team's 6-1 win at Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School while at Prince Charles, Leaf Pointe Leaders' Terry Murphy duplicated Lockhart's feat in a 2-1 defeat of Brooke Bond.

In the auger league game, Mead Johnson turned back Black Diamond 15-10

Bayside Cheerleaders Champions

Cheerleaders from Bayside Secondary School have once again proven their ability in competition, winning the Eastern Ontario Cheerleading Championships in Kingston on the weekend, taking three out of four sections of the competition.

The Junior team from Bayside won their division, while Sue Mountford was the leading competitor in the juniors.

Cindy Newman was top individual in the senior section.

Loyalist Collegiate of the host city took the senior team division, followed by Belleville Collegiate Institute.

as each team connected for 15 base hits.

Norm Lockhart nor losing pitcher John French issued a walk in the Post Office win over CTC. The winner fanned six and French was touched for seven hits while striking out two.

Randy Burke sparked the winner's attack with a double and a single, Gord St. Louis poked two singles with one each for Lockhart, Ken Williams and Kaye McQuaid, Dave Fox had a double to lead CTC. Ken Wootten, Larry Ostinelle and Ken Trice supplied a single each.

Brooke Bond's Tom St. Jules was in a stingy mood himself, Tuesday. Although forced to take the loss as the hands of Murphy and the Lenders, St. Jules authored a solid five-hitter while striking out nine, and walking none. Murphy had eight strikeouts and walked only one.

Lenders clinched it out in the top of the seventh inning, scoring twice to break the tie.

Bob Wilkes provided the winners with 4 homer, Herm VanDaelen, Bob Lloyd, Tim Armstrong and Murphy banged a single apiece. Ron Stratton tripled for the losers. Al Coleen, St. Jules and Bob Pozo each had a single.

The hitters held the spotlight in the other match.

Meads exploded for seven runs in the top of the second to make it tough for Black Diamond.

Harold Wilkinson and Larry Waite shared the pitching for Meads. Ron Bateman went the distance in defeat.

Leading the hit parade for the winners was Charlie Rowbotham with two singles and a triple. Vern Whalen and Tim O'Connell each whacked a pair of doubles while Jim Sopha tripled and singled. Jim Woods had three singles.

Tops for Black Diamond at the plate were Gene Farmer, homer, triple and single; Jack Francis, two doubles; Ross Empey, single and double, and Ralph Francis, two singles.

First Loss

OSHAWA (CP) — Dicu Ballot picked up only three hits as St. Catharines mopped Oshawa 1-0 in the first game of an Ontario Fastball League doubleheader Tuesday night.

It was the first loss in six games for Oshawa which came back in the second contest, shortened to five innings by rain, to beat St. Catharines 5-0.

Ballot struck out eight in the first game while loser Paul Vanmaanker fanned 10.

Barry Timbers with the second game for Oshawa and Don Clark was the loser.

Larry Van Norman winds up and lets fly the discus. Larry, a Belleville resident is one of the two local people that will be participating in the Ontario Wheelchair Olympics. The Olympics sponsor this year is Bruce Beach, (background) from Trenton. The competition is scheduled for June 29 and 30 at OSD in Belleville.

Two from Quinte Area In Wheelchair Games

For the first time in its seven year history, the Ontario Wheel Chair Olympics will take place in Belleville.

June 29 and 30, at OSD, nearly 2 members of the Ontario Wheelchair Sports Association will compete in 25 events. The top athletes will represent the province at the national competition in Winnipeg during August.

"I would like the people of this area to realize that the handicapped are capable of doing everyday things despite their confinement," commented Bruce Beas, coordinator of the event.

Beas a resident of Trenton for the past three years has been confined to a wheelchair since 1949.

Bruce feels, "activities with a challenge, especially sports events, help to instill self confidence in the handicapped."

Two of the competitors are from the Quinte area. Larry Van Norman, of Belleville, and Terry Scott, of Picton, will be vying for one of the spots on the provincial squad.

Larry will compete in the three track and field events free style, back stroke and individual medley-discus, javelin, the track events, 40,80,100, 400, and 1500 metre races and the 75 metre slalom-and possible weightlifting.

Terry will also participate in all of the track events, table tennis, shotput and javelin.

Besides the above events, there is also competition in discus throwing, archery, darchery, precision javelin, snooker, chess, checkers, crib bage and bridge.

An added attraction to the Olympics will be a basketball game starring the Toronto Thunderbirds, an organized wheelchair team. Verification of the Thunderbolts presentation is still necessary, but Beas says their arrival looks hopeful.

Perfect Game Eludes Abrams

A disputed fifth inning single by Reserves Mike Murphy is all that stood between Carnitton Plane's Concrety pitcher Lenny Adams and a perfect game, Tuesday.

Playing at home, Plane's record an 11-0 South Hastings Baseball League win.

Adams finished with an 11-strike out, one-hit shutout. Murphy was the only Reserves player to reach base in the seven-inning contest.

Steve Bassett and Ron Marocle split the pitching for Reserves. They surrendered only five hits while striking out four and giving up four walks.

The winners spiced their attack with a three-run second inning and it was all downhill from then on.

Trenton Team Signs Mavety and Ferguson

After announcing Tuesday afternoon that catcher Larry Mavety and pitcher George Ferguson had both signed for the Quinte Fastball League season, Wayne Drake, spokesman for the Trenton team and manager of the team, agreed with the observation that all the club needs now is a 19-game winning streak.

After two losses in league play, Auger's did everything but chalk up a win, Tuesday night.

Ferguson and Mavety did their part. George supplied a nine inning no-hitter and Mavety, handling the catching, accounted for two base hits.

But all Auger's could manage was a scoreless tie with Howard and Robert Printing.

Until Tuesday...it appeared the Trenton team may have to get along without Mavety and Ferguson. Both pro hockey players, George with WHA finalist Chicago Cougars and George with the NHLs Toronto Maple Leafs) the talented athletes were listed as undecided about playing ball, due to other off-season commitments.

With the battery mates in the lineup, Drake says "Now we're ready to roll".

Quinte Antenna Shaded

Out-hit but not out-scored. That was the story for Belleville Broadloom in the only Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League game played Tuesday.

Broadloom made the most of 10 hits off Quinte Antenna pitchers Nina Pfleger and Dare while coming out on top in an 11-10 nailbiter.

Norene Fuller went the seven innings to get the win. She scattered 16 hits while fanning five and walking six.

Chris Smith had a home run and a single for the winners. Roseanne Hordngs was right in step with a triple and a single. Helen Silis and Janet Smith supplied a pair of singles each.

Tops for Quinte Antenna was Bonnie McKeon with a homer, triple and single.

The idea of the secret draft was to give the NHL teams a head start over the rival World Hockey Association in negotiating with the over-age juniors.

Some clubs revealed all of their choices, others just their first picks and still others kept quiet.

Washington Capitals, who had first pick, introduced defenceman Greg Joly at a news conference about three hours after he had been officially chosen.

Joly was a key man in the Regina Pats march to the Memorial Cup earlier this month in Calgary.

Montreal Canadiens declined to discuss their five first-round picks. It was learned, however, that they selected left winger Sam Connors from Flin Flon Bombers, centre Doug Risebrough from Kitchener Rangers, defenceman Rick Chartrand from Kitchener, forward Mario Tremblay from Montreal Juniors and centre Gord McTavish from Sudbury.

Montreal had the fifth, seventh, 10th, 12th and 15th picks in the first round with only the 15th being originally their own. The other four had been acquired in various deals.

Kansas City Scouts had second choice and took right winger Wilf Paiement from St. Catharines Black Hawks while they took Mark Howe, Howe, who played for Toronto Marlboros two seasons ago, was a 38-goal scorer this season for Houston Aeros of the WHA and played on a line with his father Gordie.

Paiement, Hampton, Larochelle, Tremblay, Valiquette and Mulvey all are 18. Each of the NHL teams were permitted to draft one exceptional 18-year-old player in the opening two rounds.

Detroit Red Wings, drafting ninth, took Bill Lochead, a left winger with Oshawa Generals, while Buffalo Sabres, with the 11th choice, opted for Oshawa defenceman Lee Fogolin.

The 13th choice belonged to Toronto Maple Leafs and they grabbed 18-year-old centre Jack Valiquette from Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds while defenceman Dave Maloney was taken by New York Rangers.

Grant Mulvey, a forward with Calgary Centennials, was Chicago Black Hawks' first pick and Boston Bruins, drafting 18th, took Don Larway, a 46-goal scorer with Swift Current Broncos last season.

The Bruins made one surprise later in the draft when they took Mark Howe, Howe, who played for Toronto Marlboros two seasons ago, was a 38-goal scorer this season for Houston Aeros of the WHA and played on a line with his father Gordie.

WHA Announces Award Winners

TORONTO (CP) — Winning most valuable player awards in old hat for Gordie Howe of Houston Aeros of the WHA Hockey Association.

Howe, who captured the National Hockey League's Hart Trophy six times in a 25-year career with Detroit Red Wings, shared the awards spotlight with son Mark, 19, who was named WHA Rookie of the Year.

WHA President Dennis Murphy announced media selections for his league's top individual awards on the eve of the WHA expansion draft.

Other award-winners were Pat Stapleton of Chicago Cougars, top defenceman; Ralph Backstrom of Chicago, most sportsmanlike player and Billy Harris of Toronto Toros, Coach of the Year.

Gordie Howe, 46, retired as a player with the Red Wings after the 1970-71 season, but decided to come back this year when the Aeros offered him a chance to play with sons Mark and Marty.

He finished third in the scoring race with 31 goals and 69 assists.

Mike Walton of Minnesota Fighting Saints won the scoring title but lost out to Howe in the MVP voting, drawing 86 points to Gordie's 130.

Favell to Play

TORONTO (CP) — National Hockey League goalie Doug Favell said Tuesday he will play his first game with Philadelphia Wings of the National Lacrosse League Friday night.

Favell, a forward, has been working out with the Wings in Peterborough. His first game with the Wings will be against Toronto Tomahawks in Toronto.

Offers 'Ridiculous' Claims George Reed

REGINA (CP) — Players in the Canadian Football League will not go to training camps without a new contract and team owners have so far proposals, says George Reed, president of the CFL Players' Association.

In an interview Monday, Reed said recent Toronto meetings with CFL representatives to discuss the players' demands "were not that good."

"They presented us with a very poor set of proposals. Their proposals are ridiculous.

The players seek a new two-year contract that would substantially improve playoff bonuses, pre-season pay and pension benefits.

General manager Ken Preston of Saskatchewan Roughriders said "it comes down to how much we can afford."

"Salaries are going up by close to $150,000 per team this year. The players can't have that $100,000 increase in salaries as well as a big increase in fringe benefits."

St. Catherines Nips Rexdale

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Tom Patrick and Scott Hadson scored four goals each to lead St. Catharines Legionnaires to a 14-13 victory over Rexdale Warriors in Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A action Tuesday.

In the only other game, Ian Robinson scored five goals to lead Brumalea Warriors to a 21-16 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Others scoring for St. Catherines in the game played at Toronto were Joe Martin and Mike McGrath, with two each; Ted Howe and Bruce Richardson.

Scoring for Rexdale were Dennis Marak, with five, Blair Campbell, with three, Rory O'Neill, with two, and Phil Swayne, Casey Patterson and Bill Murdoch.

Also for Toronto, Ken Webster and Gord Lyons got four each and Ron Camelia, Bob Burk scored three, Steve Wilson and Terry Mastine got two each, and a single went to Art Webster.

For Toronto, it was Ron Smith with three, Mike Baker, Ken Lane, and Rick Dixon, with single scores, Bob Richards, Jim Foote, Ted Hopkins, Duart Vanin, John Cooney, Brian Rickton and Rick Bennett.

Early Surge Carries Astros

MONTREAL (CP) — Houston Astros jumped on Montreal starter Steve Rogers for five runs in the first inning and went on to defeat the Expos 8-4 in National League play Tuesday night.

Greg Gross and Roger Metzger led off the inning with back-to-back singles and Rogers, now 7-3, then loaded the bases by walking Cesar Cedeno.

Bob Watson drew a walk to force in the first Houston run and Lee May delivered a two-run single to drive in the next two. One out later, Doug Rader appeared to hit a sure double play ball to third baseman Bob Bailey. Bailey threw wide of the bag at second in an attempt to get May and the ball wound up in right field as Watson scooted home.

May appeared to pull a groin coming into third on the play and had to be replaced by pinch runner Cliff Johnson who came on as a sacrifice by Tommy Helms.

Houston added another pair of runs in the top of the fifth when Watson walked with one out, scored on a double to right center by Johnson, who came in on Mill May's single to right.

The Expos drove Houston starter Tom Griffin from the mound in the first inning when the right-hander, seeking his seventh win in eight decisions, failed to retire any of the four batters he faced.

Boots Day and Larry Lintz received back-to-back walks and Day scored on a single by Willie Davis.

After Lintz stole his 13th base in as many attempts this season, Ken Singleton drove him in with a single.

Left-hander Mike Cosgrove then came in and retired the side, fanning Ron Hunt, getting Bob Bailey to line to Helms and Jim Cox to hit into a force play.

Han kAaron is not through chasing Babe Ruth, it seems.

In April, the Atlanta Braves slugger hit his 713th career home run, surpassing Ruth's 714 lifetime figure. But there was another record of Ruth's that Aaron didn't know about.

The homer, his ninth this year and 722nd of his career in regular-season games, ended a long dull drought for Aaron. He hadn't hit a baseball out of the park since May 12.

In other National League's games Tuesday, Los Angeles routed St. Louis Cardinals 11-3 and Cincinnati Reds beat New York Mets 7-2.

Home runs by Ken McMullen and Joe Ferguson keyed a 20-hit attack that propelled Los Angeles over St. Louis.

Both homers. McMullen's second of the season and Ferguson's fifth, were two-run blasts off one-time Dodger pitcher Alan Foster, who was chased after 2 2-3 innings.

Ron Cey contributed four singles and Steve Garvey added three as the Dodgers mounted an 8-2 lead in four innings and withstood Reggie Smith's three run homer for the Cards.

Johnny Bench hit a two-run homer and Merv Rettenmund added a solo shot, powering Cincinnati past New York. It was the Reds' fifth straight victory, their longest winning streak of the season.

Hank Aaron—Another Ruth Record

Bep Explains His Stand

TORONTO (CP) — Bep Guidolin isn't hurt so much by the fact Boston Bruins didn't agree to his terms for a five-year contract, but they didn't tell it like it was.

Guidolin resigned Monday as coach of the National Hockey League team rather than accept a short-term contract of one or two years.

"All I wanted was a five-year contract with the team, just so I was sure of a job," said the 48-year-old native of Thorold, Ont., in a telephone interview from his home in Barrie, 50 miles north of here. "Hell, I need some security at my age.

"And it wasn't as if it was a contract to coach. Maybe two years as a coach and the other years to work for the organization. I felt I deserved it.

"I wanted to feel in a position where I could take my family with me to Boston and get established. But I didn't want to be a charity case."

Guidolin, who earned the Boston coaching job midway through the 1972-73 season when he replaced Tom Johnson, had enjoyed a measure of success as a coach of junior and senior teams in Canada and with the Boston Braves American Hockey League affiliate, Boston Braves.

Guidolin said he was sure his knowledge would benefit the Bruins at the minor league level and that he was basing his demands on this reasoning.

In announcing the resignation in Boston on Monday, general manager Harry Sinden made no mention of the qualifications within Guidolin's demands, merely stating that his hardline position remained unchanged.

"Harry didn't explain the five-year contract," claimed Guidolin. "Hell, in this league coaches work one or two years and are discarded like a piece of flesh.

"And that's another thing," he continued, "it was actually settled (the resignation) last Friday but nothing was supposed to be said until 2:30 Monday afternoon, after Harry phoned me.

"After all, a guy can have a change of heart between Friday and Monday. But I still haven't heard from anyone on the Boston team."

BOXER LEAVES HOSPITAL

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Rodrigo Valdes, the Colombian boxer who won the World Boxing Commission middleweight championship Saturday with a seventh-round knockout over Benny Briscoe, left the hospital early Tuesday where he had been under observation since Sunday.

Eight Straight Wins For Gaylord Perry

Gaylord Perry says he isn't using the greaseball anymore. "not since the crackdown," but going straight hasn't hindered his effectiveness.

Perry, 30, became the first pitcher in the majors to log eight win eight games this year when he checked Texas on five hits and Cleveland Indians blanked Rangers on Tuesday night.

"Everything seems to be breaking my way," said Perry, who lost only one game this year—on opening day.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox beat Minnesota Twins 9-5, New York Yankees edged Chicago White Sox 3-2 in 10 innings, Kansas City Royals defeated Baltimore Orioles 9-8 in 11 innings, Milwaukee Brewers stopped California Angels 6-5, and Detroit Tigers beat Oakland As 3-1.

"I've watched Perry pitch for years and I thought he loaded up every other ball but I didn't see him do it tonight," said Texas pitcher Ferguson Jenkins.

"I started using the greaseball in 1964," said Perry, who boasts the most victories by any active AL hurler—185. "I hated to see it leave the game. I enjoyed using it."

Detroit's Gary Sutherland raised his 1974 homer count from one to three, providing the difference against Oakland.

Sutherland connected for solo shots in the fourth and sixth, helping Woody Fryman, 1-3, to his first victory of the season.

A grand-slam homer by Cookie Rojas in the 11th inning gave Kansas City the victory owe Baltimore.

Dick McAuliffe started a decisive five-run fifth inning with a homer and the Red Sox rolled to their ninth victory in their last 10 games. Minnesota's Bert Blyleven, 4-7, retired the first nine batters in order before being tagged for three runs in the fourth and being shelled in the fifth.

Craig Nettles' run-scoring double down the right field line in the 10th inning gave New York its extra-inning victory over Chicago.

Jim Murphy saved Jim Slaton's sixth victory with ninth-inning relief work and Dave May and George Scott hit home runs, leading Milwaukee past California.

Japanese Boats Fish Squid Off New Zealand

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — About 80 Japanese squid boats are fishing just off New Zealand's coast during the last few years have New Zealanders wonder ing if there's any percentage in starting their own industry.

At the moment the local boats take so little squid that the catch doesn't even figure in the ministry of agriculture and fish land's offshore waters the Japa nese boats used, to fish off west Africa. But some countries i there put an end to that by ex tending territorial waters to 200 miles—something thought about seriously now by some officials here.

While fishermen worry about the massive squid catch break ing the marine feeding chain, they don't worry about going out after squid themselves because there is little demand on the do mestic market for it.

And one school of thought has that New Zealand fishermen aren't all that keen on the long Japanese boats used to fish off west Africa. But some countries i there put an end to that by ex tending territorial waters to 200 miles—something thought about seriously now by some officials here.

While fishermen worry about the massive squid catch break ing the marine feeding chain, they don't worry about going out after squid themselves because there is little demand on the do mestic market for it.

And one school of thought has that New Zealand fishermen aren't all that keen on the long time at sea, often under poor conditions, needed to make a squid fishing pay. They would need a way to make it pay on a Monday-to-Friday basis before they would show any real inter est. The local fishing industry has tried to pro mote squid catching for years. But this has taken the form of sling ing on the trawlermen to take financial success of squid fish ing.

But with only one boat oper ating all they have really a bad idea of squid industry follows the

The Japanese fish only be tween November and May of New Zealand, heading back to the Sea of Japan for the rest of the year. But officials say it could be a year-round industry, the continuing interest in squid, there is no reason why an industry can't be developed. Loans are available to fish ermen to convert their boats and there obviously is a ready made export market.

But the question of economics makes the assessment of such an industry difficult.

And while the debate goes on, concern is often being ex pressed that the Japanese are depleting what is seen as an es sentially New Zealand resource.

Denturist Exams Set For August

TORONTO — Health Minister Frank S. Miller has announced that examinations will be held in August for those who wish to become licensed as denture therapists.

"The new Denture Therapy Bill, which I introduced on May 16, 1974,—will allow denture therapists to practice independently in the taking of impressions, fitting, and manufacture of full dentures," said Mr. Miller, "Therapists will also be able to undertake other work, such as partial plates, if supervised by a dentist."

Mr. Miller said he expects to obtain the Legislature's ready acceptance of the bill, enabling it to be passed into law prior to the summer recess.

"Over the next few weeks I plan to meet with representatives of the Denturist Society, dentists, denture therapists and dental technicians to discuss implementation of the Bill," Mr. Miller said. "But there is an urgent need to conduct the examinations, because dental clinic facilities at the universities will only be available until the end of August."

The minister said he would not negotiate at this time on the issue of independent denture therapists providing partial plates.

"Expert opinion made available to the Ministry, by those practising in the denture therapy field as well as others, supports the decision that only dentists should provide partial dentures," Mr. Miller explained.

He said legislation introduced earlier this month cleared the way to satisfy public demand for an independent practitioner.

"Our prime concern is to safeguard the health of the public by establishing standards. We have to make sure that those who practice are qualified to do so," Mr. Miller said.

"Those who wish to practise as denture therapists must have taken the exams and become qualified by he end of the summer," said the Health Minister. "Once the bill is passed and proclaimed, those who have made no attempt to undertake the licensing procedures will be subject to the penalties outlined in the legislation," the Health Minister warned.

Prisoners Learning Slaughterhouse Jobs

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — If the thought of a room filled with knife-wielding, meat-cutting prisoners makes you feel uneasy, that feeling is just one of the hurdles the province's new prison industrial program must clear.

Fifty prisoners—or more—at the Guelph Correctional Centre are being offered to private industry as slaughterhouse workers. Their job will be to kill thousands of animals in the centre's own abattoir, cut them into pieces and pack them for sale under some company's brand name. The prisoners will be paid the going wage.

Prisoners now earn up to $5 a week under an allowance system based on behavior. In the new program they might earn $2 to $4 an hour as relatively inexperienced slaughterhouse workers.

Don Kerr, a government information officer, said the idea is that a job with worthwhile pay may teach a prisoner to cope with a regular working lifestyle so that he will be able to survive on the outside.

"It's not as if he is never going to get out," said Mr. Kerr, who worries about people who think prisoners should be punished.

"Look out lady," he warns. "Because if he can't function when he eventually gets out, he's going to be a repeater."

John Fahapill, a 46-year-old mechanical engineer hired last February to head the project, said under the proposed program the ministry has advertised to about 30 meat processors in the province who are licensed by the federal department of agriculture. A formal call for tenders is being prepared.

"The industry would provide supervision, management and on-the-job training," he said. "We, of course, would provide careful pre-screening of inmates. There is a bit of risk involved, so the inmates will have to be carefully picked."

Mr. Fahapill said the abattoir at the Guelph prison is "already here" and is well-equipped compared with some of the other industrial facilities we have.

The abattoir is "very, very under-utilized," he said. It is producing a product that is very much in demand in Canada and there is an acute shortage of experienced workers in the industry."

He said 15 to 30 Guelph prisoners currently work in the abattoir preparing meat for the province's correctional institutions and mental hospitals.

Airship Comes Back

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — The blimp is making a comeback in Canada. An airship known as the CAS-1 is under construction in Toronto, and it might mark the beginning of a new form of transport and communications in Canada, those involved say.

The airship is being built by the Canadian Airship Development Corp. of Thornhill, Ont., and a group of engineers from McMaster University here. The CAS-1 is 120 feet long and 40 feet in diameter and is powered by two 100 horsepower engines.

Like the earlier blimps, the new airship has a fabric envelope which contains the lifting gas—helium. But there the resemblance ends, McMaster University says in a news release.

The group has made use of computer analysis to determine the most efficient design, and of work done in the U.S. space program for the most suitable fabrics. These signs are expected to enhance the performance of the envelope.

A study of the use of airships for transportation in Canada's remote northern areas was produced by mechanical engineering students at McMaster University in 1972. The report was highly praised by earlier people now in government departments and the Canadian aerospace industry, the university says.

As a result, a group from McMaster was invited to join the Canadian Airship Study Group, and this led to the formation of the corporation. It has obtained financial support for three years' operation and now is quoting for a second airship of the same type.

Students and faculty members at McMaster and University of Toronto's Institute of Aerospace Studies have contributed their time and expertise to the technological work on the

Heritage Village Reproduces Past

Burnaby, B.C. (CP) — Heritage Village is a reproduction of a small British Columbia town of the early 1900s.

Since it was built three years ago, it has only been a faithful reproduction, a collection of buildings, furniture and artifacts.

This summer, 10 young people will try and bring some life to it.

Dave Nash, one of the project workers, said in a recent interview money may be raised from other groups.

"We'll really be in business," he said. "I like acting and this will give you the experience of playing the same role regularly. It'll be our lives, not a short play, and it will add that real element to the village."

Tony Scott, executive director of the Century Park Museum Association which operates the village for Burnaby municipality, said he believes the "towns people" will greatly increase visitor interest.

"This is something we're very excited about," said Mr. Scott. "We hope to bring life to the village."

He said he would like to see the group run a cooperage, typeset and print a newspaper, work in the village smithy, entertain, clerk and just generally go about their business.

Project worker Garnet Wiens said the group is bursting with ideas.

"For example, every two weeks we'd like to put out a small newspaper," he said. "We could give a resume on each person involved in the project, say what's happening at Heritage Village and cover small-town gossip and the like."

But the main holdup to projects like the photography studio will be money.

"For example, I want to set up a photographer's shop and take portraits for 50 cents with a magnesium flash and c... hooded cabinet," said Mr. Nogo.

"But we can't afford it without more money. We're going to apply to local foundations, but mostly we're hoping. At the minimum, we'll need $1,000."

Mr. Scott said the association plans more changes for the village. Already the architects who originally designed the village as Burnaby's Centennial project, have drawn up a master expansion plan that includes a town hall, new stores, warehouses, a hotel, and a lumber mill.

Ontario's Art Gallery Plans Busy Program

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The new Art Gallery of Ontario is taking the middle road between elitism and democracy, says its director, William Withrow.

"It's quite evident today that the old image of the stuffy, static, no-smiling, no-talking no-fun sort of institution is disappearing," Mr. Withrow told a meeting of Kitchener businessmen.

"There has been, is and always will be, a first obligation to scholarship which must be served but this gives us no licence to turn our backs on the cultural and recreational needs of thousands of people who now pay an increasing share of our bills—through their taxes."

The gallery in Toronto will offer services to all ages and ethnic groups, Mr. Withrow said.

"And to do this effectively we plan to have something going at nine o'clock in the morning and at nine o'clock in the evening."

"When the public enters these new doors, it will rightfully expect to find a gallery that is a living member of the community. We intend to satisfy this expectation."

The new Henry Moore Sculpture Centre, Zacks galleries and a print gallery have been funded by $13 million in provincial grants and $5 million raised by the gallery. The new areas will open this fall.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR MIRACLE FOOD MART

NEW GUIDE TO SIMPLIFY BEEF BUYING

Now available in Miracle Food Mart's Consumer Corners is a most practical guide to wise and economical buying of meat. It's a Beef Buying and Cooking Guide, the size of a large envelope, which has a sliding scale to tell you instantly the cost per serving of all the popular beef cuts.

Covering everything from sirloin and porterhouse steaks to short ribs and liver, the scale breaks down per serving costs for prices from 50 cents a pound (we can hope that could be a useful figure at some future time!) to $2.99 a pound.

To illustrate how it's used — if a standing prime rib roast were $1.10 a pound the guide shows that, since it yields two servings per pound the price per serving is 55 cents. Beef liver at $1.06 a pound provides four servings at 27 cents a serving.

The guide includes a clearly illustrated beef cutting chart plus concise instructions for the major cooking methods — roasting, braising, broiling, pan broiling, frying and cooking in liquid. It indicates which cut is suitable for each purpose.

Small though the guide is, it contains a mint of useful information for meat shoppers. The cost of individual price is 50 cents, but we thought it so valuable that Miracle Food Mart arranged to make copies available to customers for just 10 cents each.

This new battery operated mobile chair for the disabled can be used on city sidewalks and rough open country. Produced in Britain, the "Batric" powered chair runs on a standard 12-volt car battery which provides power for six miles before recharging. All controls are mounted on the steering tiller, which also operates the brakes when it is depressed. (CP Photo)

THE BARNHART DICTIONARY OF NEW ENGLISH SINCE 1963 — Clarence L. Barnhart.

Are you puzzled about the meanings of expressions such as "funky," "heavy", or "think tank" which appear. This dictionary gives definitions, pronunciations, and etymology for over 5,000 words and phrases which have come into the English language in the past 10 years. For each, one or two citations from recent periodical articles illustrate the use of the term.

SHEPHERD'S GLOSSARY OF GRAPHIC SIGNS AND SYMBOLS — .. Walter Shepherd.

With the bewildering proliferation of signs and symbols at the present time, this book, which gives the meanings for about 5,000 marks, will prove very useful. Among the wide variety of subjects covered are: china and silver marks, highway signs, numismatics, and the letters of several alphabets. Detailed instructions on the use of the glossary are included.

A HANDBOOK OF CHINESE ART — Margaret Medley. — —

This short book defines terms connected with Chinese arts including bronzes, ceramics, jade and painting. A large number of line drawings and black and white photographs add to the definitions, and bibliographies throughout the book will be helpful to readers wishing to study a subject in greater depth.

INDIAN ARTS IN CANADA — Olive Patricia Dickason.

This beautifully illustrated publication of the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs displays in words and photographs, the wide variety of artistic styles and materials of the Indian tribes across Canada. Beginning with the traditional art before the coming of the white man, he book shows the influence of the contact with Europeans, and finally, the work being done by present-day Indian artists.

A DICTIONARY OF MODERN REVOLUTION — Edward Hyams.

A great help in understanding modern world politics, this book explains ideologies from Marxism to women's liberation, defines words and abbreviations frequently encountered in the news, and gives biographies of revolutionaries from the mid-nineteenth century to the present. Useful cross-references are included in many articles.

DICTIONARY OF PAGAN RELIGIONS — H. E. Wedeck, and Wade Baskin.

Useful for students of anthropology or classical mythology, this dictionary gives brief explanations of ancient gods and religious practices, some of which have become incorporated into modern religions.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Q: When does the Cape Vincent, N.Y. Ferry start running?

A: Horne's Ferry that runs from Wolfe Island to Cape Vincent, N.Y. started running May 21st on a reduced schedule at present. Car and driver $2.00, extra passengers 50 cents.

Q: We are planning a trip to Atlantic City, N.J. in early June and down along the coast. Please give us a direct route down and a few attraction on the way.

A: Atlantic City is one of the most popular seaside resorts in the United States. The famous boardwalk, 60 feet wide and 8 miles long, along the Atlantic Ocean is a wonderful place for a brisk walk and the air is so invigorating. There are beautiful shops all along, the boardwalk which are excellent, and there is a long, white, sandy beach for swimming. This is a very popular place for conventions and tourists, so it is wise to make reservations well in advance. Get a room overlooking the ocean if you can. Ocean City and Wildwood Beaches a little further south along the ocean front are very good also, but much smaller and quieter.

Virginia Beach, Virginia, about 200 miles further south along the coast, is a good spot to stop for a few days. It is a resort city with an ocean the largest and most famous resorts along the Atlantic Ocean, Virginia Beach offers an excellent sand beach and 2 miles of boardwalk.

Fifty miles west of Virginia Beach on route 60 is the historical town of Williamsburg which you shouldn't miss. "That the future may learn from the past" is the theme for Colonial Williamsburg, a restoration without equal. The colonial area of the city has eighty-three 18th century buildings restored to their original appearance. This project was made possible by the generous provisions of the late John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Visit the Information centre first, where you'll see a beautiful free color film which will take you back in history to the 18th century and will explain the past of Williamsburg. You can take a bus to all the historical buildings from the information centre.

Carter's Grove, a famous old plantation, 6 miles east of town, is open daily to the public. This mansion, built in 1750, was once owned by the famous Roobrt Carter, one of Virginia Colony's wealthiest and most influential men. He owned more than 300,000 acres of land and had 1,000 slaves. It is filled with beautiful antiques and restored to its original grandeur. Here George Washington and Thomas Jefferson and many famous people were frequent guests.

On U.S. 60, just east of there, is a museum that contains a wealth of maritime and nautical interest. Among the hundreds of exhibits are the world's largest collection of ship models, maps, canvas, nautical instruments and an extensive library. Open daily.

From Virginia Beach you can continue south along the coast about 300 miles to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. This has one of the finest beaches on the coast, excellent golfing and deep-sea fishing and many good motels.

Take I-81 from the 1,000 Islands bridge and the Pennsylvania Turnpike and Atlantic City Parkway to Atlantic City. From there, we suggest the Cape May Ferry and down across the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel to Norfolk, Va.

Opposes Airport

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield rejected Tuesday a second Toronto-area airport at nearby Pickering.

Mr. Stanfield, on a visit to the constituency of Etobicoke, told party workers that a case has not been made for a second Toronto airport.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, May 30

Aries (March 21-April 19) Later you'll regret the harsh way you handled a close personal relationship. Kind words will be needed to patch it up.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A task facing you will be made easier if you think about rewards you'll be getting, rather than the present inconvenience.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) That little green imp of envy will pop up today when you compare your material situation to another's. You'll put him in his place.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) There are certain domestic responsibilities you'd like to shrug off today. Your nobler instincts won't permit it.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're in for a surprise. Something you've already made up your mind about negatively will turn out to be positive in nature.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A friend in need of something you have. You wish she could borrow it elsewhere. You'll loan what's needed and like yourself for it.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will adjust your thinking regarding a self-interest you're pursuing after you realize how one-way you're behaving.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The early part of the day will be rather restrictive, accompanied by some small frustrations. Hang in there. Things get better later.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A serious matter where you share an interest with an outsider still needs a solution. An unbiased third party's going to be helpful.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though you can't get the co-operation you need for something you want to accomplish, you'll find an alternative.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're much too close to a problem that's confronting you. Get a fresh opinion from one whose advice you trust.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Your credit you'll face up to. A You'll be tempted to make excuses in order to dodge a responsibility. However, much to your chagrin, you'll do it.

To Your Good Health

Spontaneous Lung Collapse Possible

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you discuss spontaneous collapse of a lung or lungs? I have heard that the collapse can be complete or partial due to blebs that pop, and does history or X-rays suppose to be a congenital defect. Since they don't show up in x-ray, it is impossible to know you have them until a collapse occurs.

At-that age will this "pneumothorax" most likely occur and what are the chances that it would occur repeatedly? I am confused as to how this can-does happen to someone who is otherwise healthy, of average weight and exercises moderately.—M.K.

You seem, except for a minor detail or so, to have a pretty good idea of what pneumothorax, or lung collapse, is all about. As you say, it usually results from rupture of a bleb in the lung after which, like a punctured bicycle tire, there is more or less collapse and can-not draw much air in.

It most often happens to healthy young males, and most often between the ages of 20 and 40. It most commonly occurs after heavy exertion or violent coughing but can occur with sudden changes in pressure—as high-altitude flying without pressurization. Or it may be a complication of such lung diseases as tuberculosis, bronchiectasis or others.

Small blebs can be invisible in an x-ray but large ones may be seen readily.

While it is conceivable it could occur in both lungs at once, it is extremely unlikely as it is just one side. There is a sharp drop in the recurrence of breath in varying degrees.

The bleb usually heals over, with a little scar formation, and the lung resumes normal action. Whether the accident will happen again is unpredictable. It has been reported to recur in some women around menstruation. It may recur-but many times it happens once and that's the end of it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband is recovering from quinsy with the help of an antibiotic. A friend advised that sinus drip can contribute to quinsy. Is quinsy a unique virus or does it develop from other infections such as sinus This is my husband's second quinsy attack and it can be a very scary experience.—Mrs. E.E.

Quinsy is an abscess in the area around the tonsil due to infection of tonsil (tonsillitis).

You are right. An attack can be scary, since there is usually pain and a high fever. The sufferer often has great difficulty breathing. A person can even lose-much of the senses of smell and taste.

The cause is more often a strep germ than a virus. And I doubt whether post-nasal drip has anything to do with the attacks. (That implies trouble higher in the nasal tract.)

If this is his second attack, it would be time to take a serious look at his tonsils. They may have to be removed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last time I had my physical, my doctor told me to take Nitrostat twice a day. I had been taking nitroglycerin only, when I had pain. Sometimes a week goes by without needing it. Is this something new.—V.S.

Your trouble, obviously, is angina but not particularly severe.

Nitrostat is the brand name of nitroglycerin in a more stable form—has less tendency to lose effectiveness on exposure to air.

I would assume that the two-a-day program your doctor suggested is designed to prevent attacks of angina pain rather than treat pain in the start before you take medication. Which makes sense to me.

Opening lead — 4 Q

By Oswald and James Jacoby

South's five-card club suit and two 10 spots justify his one notrump opening. West makes the unfriendly lead of the spade queen and South stops to count tricks. He has six top winners and can produce three more by dropping the club queen doublet on or finding West with the heart queen.

The second chance is better than the first but Rosse and Dorsner point out that South can try both plays. He should start by playing out his ace and king of clubs.

He does this and the queen drops. Now he leads a third club to dummy's ace. The only normal entry back to his hand is his second high spade but South has nothing to lose by leading a heart.

Very alert East might hop up with the queen and hold South to three notrump but most Easts will play low and South will wind up with at least four notrump.

Why is it correct to try the clubs before attacking hearts? Because if the heart is led and a trick lost to East's queen a second spade will be played. This will leave South with no way to get back to his hand to cash the last clubs.

Canadians of Third Division Are Returning to Normandy

By WILLIAM STEWART ..
The Canadian Press

Memories of an overcast June day 30 years ago, when the fate of Nazi-enslaved Europe hung in the balance, will come alive next week for Canadians returning to the D-Day beaches of Normandy.

The men going back to the Calvados country of France represent 3rd Division assault and support units and navy and air force crews who took part in the invasion expedition from Britain to France.

They will visit beaches that were lined with explosive obstacles, strung with barbed wire barriers and planted with concrete forts and gun emplacements from British, United States and Canadian assault troops stormed them June 6, 1944. They also will attend ceremonies at war cemeteries with graves of 5,500 Canadians killed on D-Day and in the fierce battles that followed in the rolling farm country.

One group of 160 representing all services and units involved on D-Day will be guests of the government of France whose liberation resulted from the June 6 victory, of the Normandy Comite du Debarquement and of Caen, the region's principal city which was battered beyond recognition before and during the Normandy fighting.

The stakes on D-Day were enormous.

The Germans, still occupying most of Western Europe and part of Scandinavia, were about to launch rumored secret weapons—flying bombs and long-range rockets—and soon were to produce the first operational jet fighter aircraft. They counted on these to recover the initiative lost by defeat in North Africa and Sicily, the Allied invasion of Italy and setbacks in the Soviet Union.

German forces in the West held Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium, and France, all conquered in the stunning 1940 Blitzkrieg. That year they drove the British army across the English Channel from Dunkerque and in 1942 they slaughtered a Canadian raiding force at Dieppe. Meanwhile, they had built formidable defences along the western coasts of Europe.

Unable to launch a cross-channel invasion of Britain, Adolf Hitler intended to prevent an invasion in the opposite direction.

Originally, the Allied Invasion of France was planned for May. A need for additional landing craft delayed it. D-Day was set for Monday, June 5, but foul weather caused a 24-hour postponement.

Any further delay would have been for two weeks because of a required combination of tides and morning light. In mid-June the Channel was churned by the heaviest weather in 20 years and an invasion at that time would have been impossible.

Another fortnight's postponement would have jeopardized the deadline for capture of the heavily-fortified port of Cherbourg, whose facilities were needed before reasonably uncertain Channel weather came on in mid-September.

Supreme Commander Dwight Eisenhower weighed these factors when he gambled with risky weather June 6 and set in motion the largest and most complex operation with combined arms in history.

The D-Day force included well-trained sea-borne assault troops, parachute troops, glider-borne troops, tanks and artillery, all supported by battleships and smaller warships, rocket ships and dozens of squadrons of bomber, tactical and fighter aircraft.

All these elements had to be co-ordinated and the planning and time-tables were elaborate. As always, however, success rested on the skill and determination of individual servicemen and their combat leaders.

More than 14,000 Canadians were in the D-Day force. Hundreds more manned ships and flotillas of motor torpedo boats, minesweepers and landing craft. Canadian air force squadrons were in the skies.

A Canadian military historian wrote:

"There can have been no man in the assault force who did not have to face and vanquish unspoken fears within himself."

Col. C. P. Stacey added that the mustering of courage for D-Day fighting may have been an "even harder victory" than the victory the young soldiers gained on the beaches and in and about the villages inland.

"Every one of them knew the story of Dieppe and every one knew the enemy had strengthened his defences greatly since."

Col. Stacey described the debt owed the D-Day men as "too vast for calculation."

Twenty years after the invasion, Gen. Omar Bradley, commander of the 1st United States Army on D-Day, roamed the Normandy beaches and their dunes, examined the remnants and sites of German fortifications and said:

"It was hard to believe that so many lives, so much effort and such bravery on the part of so many had gone into gaining a five-mile sliver of land."

The "sliver" gained on D-Day, although in fact longer than five miles counting all assault areas, was the vital foothold.

Gen. Guenther Blumentritt, German military historian and chief of staff at headquarters in France on D-Day, said afterwards:

"In the late evening of June 6, it became clear to us that the invasion was successful and irreparable."

In other words, on D-Day the heroism of the Allied servicemen brought to the people of Western Europe the certainty that soon they would be rid of the burden of years of fear and furtive living imposed by occupation troops and the Gestapo.

The Canadian delegation to Normandy for ceremonies June 57 is headed by Dan MacDonald, veterans affairs minister, and Leo Cadieux, Canadian ambassador to France. Aside from the official delegation, veterans of individual D-Day units are travelling to France independently. Altogether, about 400 Canadian veterans will visit Normandy next week.

Heavy Equipment Moves In

Tanks and bulldozers roll onto the beaches during the Allies' D-Day invasion of Normandy 30 years ago. Drama Tops 1973 Emmy Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A poignant drama tracing a black woman's path from slavery to the civil rights movement and two zany comedies were the big winners of television's Best of the Year awards.

Cicely Tyson was named actress of the year for specials Tuesday night for her performance in the title role of The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, and the show was named as television's outstanding special of 1973.

All of the performers, writers and directors competing for the newly established Best of the Year awards were previously honored by television.

Alan Alda, the anti-establishment Army surgeon of M-A-S-H, and Mary Tyler Moore, who starred in the long-ago assistant producer of a television news show on The Mary Tyler Moore Show, were named actor and actress of the year for series.

They beat out Telly Savalas of Kojak and Michael Learned of The Waltons, Emmy winners as performers in dramatic series.

M-A-S-H, an irreverent spoof of the army set in wartime Korea, was selected the outstanding comedy series. The British production of Upstairs, Downstairs was named the outstanding drama series.

Hal Holbrook was named actor of the year for specials for his portrayal of the skipper in Pueblo.

Michael Moriarty and Joanna Miles were named supporting actor and actress of the year for The Glass Menagerie, which starred Katharine Hepburn.

Columbo was picked as the outstanding limited series.

The Carol Burnett Show and its star, Miss Burnett, won Emmys for the second consecutive year as the outstanding music-variety series.

Lily Tomlin and her special, Lily, were honored for the best comedy-variety special.

Mario Thomas and Friends in Free to Be . . . You and Me was named the outstanding children's special.

Emmys for outstanding achievement in sports programming went to ABC's Wide World of Sports and to its host, Jim McKay.

The Emmys ceremonies were staged just hours after a Superior Court judge denied an injunction sought by actress Tina Louise to have the telecast stopped on the grounds the new awards structure was unfair.

Still more Emmys are to be presented, in September, when the news and documentary statistics are to be awarded.

Saltzman Quits

TORONTO (CP) — Percy Saltzman, a co-host of Canada AM, has quit the CTV Television Network's morning show, Murray Chercover, president and managing director of the network, says.

Mr. Saltzman resigned Friday after two years with the program, citing "personal reasons."

Mr. Chercover, in a news release, said:

"We are reluctant to see him go, but it was a purely personal decision on his part.

"Norm Perry has taken Mr. Saltzman's place on the show this week.

IN MEMORIAM

HOUSE — In loving memory of a dear friend, Warren who passed away May 30, 1973.
The Midnight stars are shining,
Flowers are blooming,
Beneath it sleeps the one we love,
And the one we could not save.
—Sadly missed by Etta and daddy-No.

HOUSE — In memory of our dear friend, Warren House, who passed away last year.
Memories are sweet, but very dear,
In silence we remember,
—Always remembered by Carl and Marian.

HOUSE — In loving memory of a dear dad, Warren, who passed away May 30, 1973.
A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Some day time will pass our sorrow,
Though on earth you are no more,
Our love for you will always remain,
As you always were before.
—Sadly missed by Fred, Ruth, Dave, Dora, Judy, Peter, Paul, Rexy.

HOUSE — In loving memory of a dear husband, Warren, who passed away May 30, 1973.
Since you've gone from us and I remain,
One thing I'd have you do,
Walk slowly down the path of memory,
For some I'll follow you.
I want to know each step you take,
That I may walk beside you,
For some day down this lonely road,
You'll look back and call your name,
—Sadly missed and always remembered by wife Dorothy.

HOUSE — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Warren House, who passed away May 30th, 1973.
Sadly missed and remembered day by day,
No longer he grieves to sleep,
But in our hearts you are always with us.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by son Fred and daughter-in-law Ruth and grandchildren.

HOUSE — In loving memory of a dear son Warren, who passed away May 30, 1973.
We think of him in silence,
No eyes can see us weep,
But our wishes to be with him,
His memory we keep.
—Lovingly remembered by Mom.

WADE — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away May 30, 1973.
A beautiful one has gone to heaven,
To be with the angels above,
He from the world of sorrow,
Has come to the home of peace.
—Lovingly remembered by son Sherwood, daughter-in-law Doreen, grandchildren.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our thanks to relatives, friends and neighbors for the beautiful flowers during the illness and recent death of our dear husband and father, to all those who sent cards and spoke kind words of comfort. Thank you to those who sent food and helped serve lunch following the funeral. Special thanks to Drs. Macdonald, Hall and Hamilton, to the nurses and staff of Belleville General Hospital on 2S, 5N and Intensive Care, Sincere thanks to Rev. Hallcroft and the Canaby Funeral Home.
—Mrs. Ethel Hamilton and kindred in each sympathy.

The Fred Trost Family.

What Salary Is Average?

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said Thursday that the provincial government is not allocating enough housing money to meet the needs of people with low income.

"The lion's share by far goes to the moderate and upper income levels . . . ," he said.

Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) said it was time the government realized that middle income in Ontario is between $8,000 and $10,000 and not between $14,000 and $20,000.

Housing Minister Sidney Handleman said all of his ministries programs were aimed at the lower and moderate-income groups.

"The average income in Ontario is about $11,000 and that fits right into the group that we are trying to serve with our programs," he said.

Ulster Talks Held

Troops Face Enraged Mob

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland's British administrator held crisis talks with Ulster's political leaders today after a night of violence in the predominantly Roman Catholic city of Londonderry.

The army said a band of about 200, many armed with pick handles and garden shears, attacked troops during the night. Soldiers fought back with rubber bullets and anti-riot gas.

Seven sniper attacks, without casualties, were also reported.

Merlyn Rees, Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, met with Brian Faulkner, head of the toppled Ulster coalition government, hoping to salvage something of the collapsed power-sharing experiment between Protestants and Catholics.

"I have made it very clear we will co-operate in every way possible to see a new partnership administration formed," Faulkner said.

Rees said his meetings today included talks with hardline Protestant leaders Rev. Ian Paisley, Harry West and William Craig.

Meantime, commercial life of Northern Ireland moved toward normal as Protestant workers, satisfied that their 15-day general strike has reversed British efforts to bring minority Catholics into the Ulster government, returned to their jobs.

Rees assumed administration of Ulster when the British reimposed direct rule from London late Wednesday by suspending the Northern Ireland Assembly for four months.

The move followed the collapse of the Northern Ireland executive Tuesday over the economic paralysis caused by the strike.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson termed the developments in Northern Ireland Ulster's "gravest crisis" since the Second World War. Wilson called Parliament back from spring recess for an emergency session and pledged Rees will make every effort to restore some form of power-sharing arrangement.

But Protestant hardliners were firm against giving the Catholic third of Ulster's 1.5 million people any more power. "The answer will be 'No' if Rees comes up with that idea," said Craig, leader of the militant Vanguard Movement.

The Ulster Workers' Council warned that the strike will quickly be resumed if demands for early elections for a new assembly are ignored. The militants believe they would win overwhelming support, which they see aimed at eventual unification of the six counties of Ulster with the predominantly Catholic Irish republic.

The Workers' Council suspended the general strike Wednesday after Protestant workers spontaneously began returning to work in droves. The council's 14-man executive, which set the strike until new elections were called, but the workers evidently thought the fall of the moderate government was sufficient for now.

Suez Voyage Made

LAKE TIMSAH, Egypt (AP) — A British naval command ship has become the first large ship to transit as much as half the war-blocked Suez canal since 1967. Work on rebuilding the canal began after U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger negotiated a disengagement of Egyptian and Israeli forces along the waterway.

Duck Eggs Stolen

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Ten eggs valued at a total of $1,000 were stolen Wednesday at the Kortright Waterfowl Park here. The eggs — six Buffalohead and four Elder duck eggs—were each valued at $100 by officials. Nothing else was taken.

Mine Air Surveyed

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — A team from Ontario's health ministry started today to make an air-quality survey into the two big uranium mines here. The survey was ordered as a result of complaints by miners that conditions at the Rio Algom and Denison Mine operations are causing serious health problems in the mines including silicosis, a lung disease, and lung cancer.

Loss Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — J. R. Kimber, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, says the exchange may lose as much as $750,000 in the current fiscal year because of reduced trading activity.

Nuclear Waste Safe

TORONTO (CP) — Nuclear waste shipped by rail and road in Ontario will not cause harm even if vehicles carrying it are involved in accidents, Ontario Energy Minister Darcy McKeough said Wednesday, in a written report to Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the legislature. Mr. McKeough said all waste materials are packaged according to standards set by the federal atomic energy control regulations.

Hoffa's Release Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal judge has directed the White House to produce today records and documents concerning the conditional clemency granted former Teamsters chief James Hoffa. U.S. District Judge John Pratt told Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Katz Wednesday to telephone the chief of the White House records file, William Mathews, and "tell him to show up with as much of the material as he can."

It's Wet, Wet Work

High water is back again in the Bay of Quinte, blamed mostly on weather conditions. At Deseronto marina, tug engineer Ron Power of Prescott, stands knee deep while vessel undergoes inspection. Bay water in recent days has been within two inches of last year's record level, due to heavy rains, runoff and overcast preventing evaporation, says Angus Duffy, Quinte emergency measures co-ordinator.

House Group Warns Nixon Stand May Go Against Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee today warned President Nixon he may be providing grounds for impeachment by refusing to honor committee subpoenas for Watergate tapes.

By a vote of 28 to 10, it authorized the sending of a letter to Nixon stating that his refusal will be weighed by the committee when it votes on whether to recommend his impeachment.

"In meeting their constitutional responsibility," the letter says, the committee members will be free to consider whether your refusals warrant the drawing of adverse inferences concerning the substance of the material and whether your refusals in and of themselves constitute a ground for impeachment."

* * *

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyer James St. Clair says the House of Representatives judiciary committee's impeachment case against President Nixon does not amount to much so far, but some committee members disagree.

The committee prosecutors, ever have this kind of evidence available," said Representative Charles Rangel (Dem.N.Y.), a former federal prosecutor, after the committee wound up the preliminary presentation of Watergate evidence Wednesday.

St. Clair, who has been committed to attend the committee's closed sessions as an observer, said if the impeachment inquiry was an ordinary trial he would be tempted to rest his defence at this point.

"Nothing substantial has been presented," he told reporters.

Also at the news briefing, special counsel John Doar said that proposed articles of impeachment are being prepared by the staff, but he warned against drawing conclusions about the activity. He said the work is being done so the material will be ready if the committee decides it is needed.

Rangel said he is convinced on the basis of the White House-edited transcripts that Nixon committed impeachable offences. Asked how he felt after hearing the "additional evidence presented by the committee staff, he said: "Wow, more than ever."

Representative William Hungate (Dem.Mo.) said he thinks the case is "very substantial." Representative Robert Kastenmeier (Dem.Wis.) said he found it "compelling." And Representative Walter Flowers (Dem.Ala.) said "very damaging items of evidence" were presented.

World Housing Crisis Forecast

MONTREAL (CP) — A United Nations housing expert stood an immense housing challenge Wednesday and a Canadian university professor offered one solution.

Samy Chamecki, research chief in engineering sciences at the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), told a world housing conference here that fast political decisions are essential to deal with a growing world housing shortage.

Later, I.E. Majnub, architecture professor at Laval University, said that Canada and the United States can help by providing house components to developing nations from abundant resources on the North American continent.

The two men were speaking to an international symposium on low-cost housing problems here.

Mr. Chamecki said that more houses will have to be built by the end of the century than have been constructed up to now. The new houses were needed to accommodate the increase in world population which was expected to double by the year 2000.

New houses were also needed to provide homes for about one third of the world population who now live in without houses or living in poor dwellings, he said.

Stanfield Says Six Premiers for Controls

HALIFAX (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield says there are indications of support from six Canadian premiers for his proposal for wage-price and wage controls.

Mr. Stanfield said here Wednesday night Prime Minister Trudeau's statements the preceding day that no Canadian premier supported the plan indicated either arrogance or ignorance on the part of Mr. Trudeau.

Mr. Stanfield said newspaper reports indicate Premiers Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan, Ed Schreyer of Manitoba and Dave Barrett of British Columbia favor the controls.

Ontario Treasurer John White has publicly supported the proposal and Ontario Premier William Davis has pledged co-operation in implementing such a plan.

The Conservative leader said Premiers Richard Hatfield now ported the idea and Premier Peter Lougheed indicated a few days ago by telephone he can be counted among supporters of the proposal.

Premiers Hatfield, Davis and Lougheed are Progressive Conservatives, Premiers Blakeney, Schreyer and Barrett are New Democrats.

"I get the impression that he (Mr. Trudeau) will say anything that suits the occasion, regardless of the fact or the truth of the matter," Mr. Stanfield said.

"Either he is contemptuous of the Canadian people, which is arrogance, or he simply doesn't know what he's saying, which is ignorance."

Peace Hopes Raised

JERUSALEM (CP) — Henry Kissinger finally left for Cairo and home today, ending a 33-day marathon peace mission that won an agreement to separate hostile Israeli and Syrian armies on the Golan Heights.

The U.S. state secretary termed the accord a possible "turning point in the history of the Middle East."

"There is now hope we can move to a more lasting peace in the Middle East," Kissinger told a farewell airport news conference.

Kissinger shuttled 13 times between Jerusalem and Damascus in his search for the ceasefire agreement.

Kissinger arrived in Cairo for a stop over of several hours to give Egyptian President Anwar Sadat a personal report as Israeli and Syrian leaders studied the agreement.

Premier Golda Meir was presenting the accord to the Knesset, Israel's parliament, and in Damascus the council of Syria's governing Baath party was meeting to consider it.

Meanwhile, an Israeli team left today for Geneva to sign the pact under United Nations auspices Friday. The agreement was to take effect 6 hours and fighting was to cease and prisoners held by both sides to be freed.

The artillery duel on the Golan Heights lapsed in a halt Wednesday as news of the agreement reached front-line troops. But the Syrian military command said shelling began again today for the 80th consecutive day.

A spokesman in Damascus said Syrian artillery pounded "enemy positions with artillery in four areas, and there were artillery exchanges in some other parts of the front."

Reuters news agency reported that the text of the agreement was officially released in Damascus. Syria and Israeli agreed to refrain from all military activities against each other, under the agreement.

The former Syrian garrison town of Quneitra in the Golan Heights will be administered by a civilian Syrian authority although it will be the buffer zone manned by a United Nations observer team, the document said.

Troops and weapons will be limited on both sides of the buffer zone but air forces of both countries will be allowed to fly east and west of the buffer zone without any interference.

Disengagement should be completed within 20 days, the document said.

Inspection of the area will be carried out by United Nations personnel, who will form the observer corps.

Wounded prisoners of war shall be exchanged when the military working group completes its task.

Mountain Hideout Is Raided

ROME (Reuter) — Italian police raided a mountain hideout of a right-wing group which may have been responsible for a bomb attack in Brescia Tuesday, killing one man in a machine-gun duel, police sources said today.

Two policemen were seriously wounded in the gun battle at the remote hideout of the extremist paramilitary Mussolini Action Squad near Rieti, central Italy.

Police found a cache of fire-arms in the hideout and arrested the two survivors of the trio which raided machine-gun fire with them.

Police sources said the men belonged to the right-wing group which has recently carried out armed attacks in the Brescia region, where six persons died and 74 were injured in a bomb blast Tuesday.

Left-wing anger over the blast led to street battles in most of Italy's main cities Wednesday.

Ethiopian Guerrillas Kill Dutch Nurse

ADDIS ABABA (CP-AP) — Anti-government Ethiopian guerrillas have kidnapped a Canadian helicopter pilot and a young United States nurse and killed a Dutch nurse, it was reported Wednesday.

Four members of the separatist Eritrean Liberation Front (E.L.F.) abducted Deborah Dortzbach, 24, of Freehold, N.J., Monday at a mission hospital in Ghinda, the U.S. embassy confirmed.

The four also shot to death a Dutch nurse, Anne Slickvreld, 54, the embassy said.

Grant Wyatt of Calgary, a 30-year-old pilot, was captured the same day not far from the mission hospital, the Canadian external affairs department confirmed in Toronto.

Wyatt, who flies for CanWest Aviation Ltd. of Calgary which is under contract to the Tenneco Oil Co. of Houston, Tex., was on a flight to pick up five other oil company personnel captured by the guerrillas March 26. Two of the original five captives also are Canadians.

Mrs. Dortzbach, the captured U.S. nurse, is pregnant and reported in delicate health. She and her husband Karl, a theology student from Philadelphia, had been working in the hotel since last June.

The new captures mean seven North American hostages now are in the hands of the E.L.F., which is demanding independence for the northern Ethiopian province of Eritrea.

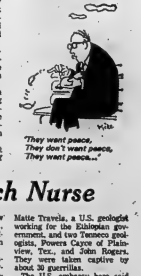
CanWest has been flying Tenneco geologists in an aerial survey for the Ethiopian government.

Fragmentary — reports indicated Tenneco had arranged a clandestine rendezvous with the guerrillas and sent Wyatt to pick up the five men captured in March, expecting them to be released.

They are Don Wederfort, 37, of Calgary, CanWest's president, and four passengers—Cliff James, 27, Walkerton, Ont., Mattie Travela, a U.S. geologist working for the Ethiopian government, and two Tenneco geologists, Trevor Zayce of Plainview, Tex., and John Rogers, They were taken captive by about 30 guerrillas.

The U.S. embassy here said the four guerrillas involved in Monday's incident attacked the American Evangelical Mission Hospital, apparently while Wyatt was flying to his rendezvous nearby.

When the helicopter arrived, the guerrillas forced Wyatt to take them and Mrs. Dortzbach to an unknown destination, the Canadian external affairs spokesman indicated.



Centre of Controversy

Acupuncture, which burst into American consciousness after the thaw in American-Chinese relations three years ago, is at present subjected to research at dozens of U.S. medical institutions. For instance, dentists at the University of Southern California dental school are testing acupuncture,

Miriam Bishop: Project For Belleville's Youngest

New Nursery Will Aid Special Cases

Belleville soon will have a facility to assist the youngest of its citizens with special, personal problems.

It's a new nursery centre now, being developed for operation sometime next month.

The project — to help tots with what are called special needs/plan in normal home situations has been allocated space in the city's new day care nursery at 281 John St.

It will be supervised by medical authorities and backed up by education, social and government agencies.

But its evolution has been the work of community volunteers.

It's community professional resources the project will attempt to remedy social, educational and psychological problems in its little students, says Miriam Bishop.

Such problems are more extensive than generally realized, says Mrs. Bishop, chairman of a community volunteer-professional committee that organized the undertaking.

There always have been a few such youngsters in every classroom, she says.

"But it's only been generally recognized in recent years how such problems involve a child's educational progress."

The need to correct problems at an early age — when it's most receptive — has finally won public acceptance. Later on problems compounds personality difficulties, making them "more difficult, if not impossible to solve," she says.

Genesis of the project can be traced back to a pioneering attempt eight years ago. A group of volunteer women banded together and organized a preschool centre — that included mothers — in a church basement. The group later became a service of the city's Volunteer Bureau and has gradually progressed into the special system. Some are now allocated in three elementary schools.

Initial requests from various agencies mounted for more complete.

"What was ideally needed was a separate place for this nursery," says Mrs. Bishop.

Educational, social and psychological health and ministry was approached for a grant. It produced 64,200 to be administered by Belleville General Hospital through Dr. Bert Conn, its mental health director and a member of the founding committee.

The city let space in its new day care centre for a token $1.

"I think we were fortunate every thing moved so quickly," says Mrs. Bishop. "I think it's due the fact the ministry knows this type of program is vital for a community."

Now, says Mrs. Bishop, the nursery will hopefully be in operation some time in March. Enrolment maximum will be set by the community and social services ministry.

Mrs. Bishop estimates enrolment eventually may be around 20.

The youngsters will be "in a specialized nursery school situation" where the ratio of teacher to class group will vary with the problem to be tackled. It is necessary the relationship will be one-to-one. Problems will be diagnosed and referred to the necessary professional services.

There are no fees. Even transportation is free. A minibus will pick the tots up at home.

Parents also will be involved, since they can help monitor a youngster's progress by assistance and will be advised on how to help their offspring.

The committee viewed similar projects in other areas while organizing the centre.

But, believes Mrs. Bishop, the community's size of Belleville have such a facility.

Other members included Alderman Jean Smith, Eric Andrews, Hastings County education administrator; Evelyn Payton, Family and Children's Services; Lea Hughes, Hastings—Prince Edward Health Unit; Jim Maddocks, United Community Services; Betty Gerrity, Loyalist College early education program director.

Police Arrest Theft Suspect

Belleville police have charged 22-year-old Belleville man and charged with theft under $200 and theft after someone broke into a home at 227 Charles Street yesterday at 12:21 p.m.

Police Chief Douglas Crombie reports that his department was called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Goodfellow early yesterday afternoon after a neighbor heard the sound of breaking glass at the rear of the building.

On their arrival police discovered that someone had broken a glass pane on an outer rear door and had entered the building.

Drawers in the house had been opened and a cash box had also been pried open.

John Charles Thomson, 22, of 34 Great St. James Street, was arrested at the rear of the building. He has been charged with break and enter and will appear in provincial court here on Monday.

SWEEP Operation Expanded

Now in its fourth year of operation within the Moira River Conservation Authority this year's SWEEP program (Students Working in an Environmental Enhancement Program) will see a total of $40,000 in continuing programs initiated last year.

Projects include a water quality study, cataloguing of artifacts at the O'Hara Mill Pioneer Museum, the repair of the mill, the old O'Hara homestead, and other attractions and a resource assessment program.

In addition, a canoe route development program commenced last year will be completed, while a municipal and authority maintenance crew will be again working on such projects as stream improvement, refuse gathering, municipal projects and general maintenance.

A new aspect of the program this year will be production of a movie film dealing with the purpose and activities of the authority.

Senior supervisor for the SWEEP force will be Kevin Murray. There are seven technical advisors, four foremen and seven labourers. The Ford Motor Company will provide two half-ton pickup trucks and a van.

Periods of employment for the students are from 12 to 16 weeks, with rates of pay ranging from $2.25 an hour to $3.

Since the SWEEP project was initiated in the Authority four years ago, the general nature of the program has changed considerably.

What once was mainly an environmental cleanup program has become more technically oriented—a move that has enabled college and university students in different fields of study to gain some first-hand experience in applying their knowledge to related programs.

This will be the second year of the water quality study on Moira and Stoco Lakes, with emphasis this year to be on specific problem areas.

The resource assessment program, also a continuation of last year's general study, will deal in greater depth with environmentally unique and sensitive areas within the watershed.

The canoe route project will conclude with portage and camping sites being cleared along the Shootamatta and Moira Rivers.

The authority film will be produced in co-operation with Loyalist College and will provide first-hand experience to students trained in script production, direction and sound synchronization of film.

Potatoes Up

By BARBARA ROBSON
The Canadian Press

Coffee drinkers who splash their brew and enjoy potatoes were hardest hit by rising food prices in May.

The cross-Canada Survey of 13 cities by The Canadian Press showed sharply increases in the total price of 17 standard items in most urban centres.

Potatoes topped the list with increases as high as 85 cents above April prices of $1.49 for a 10-pound bag in Winnipeg. A pound of coffee cost more than last month in several cities and sugar prices continued to climb.

However, near month's end wholesale sugar prices dipped 75 cents a 100 pounds and a spokesman for one major refiner predicted "sugar would once again be the cheapest thing in the food line."

A reduction in the federal beef subsidy to three cents a pound from five April 29 appeared to have little effect on supermarket prices.

Expensive cuts were up slightly in May but all-beef hamburgers and ground chuck dropped between 10 and 50 cents a pound in several cities.

The Canadian Press survey is based on a shopping basket of 17 items priced on the last Tuesday of each month. It is used internally to compare prices among cities.

Items are priced in the same supermarkets each month and show the lowest regular price for the same brand or nearest comparable items. The survey began in April, 1973.

Housing For Elderly, Picton Site Approved

PICTON — The Ontario Cabinet has approved a site purchase in Picton for 66 senior citizen housing units and an architectural firm has been commissioned for drawings.

James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox, said the Cabinet has formally approved purchase of property at the corner of Spring and Mary streets. Size of the land parcel is 2.15 acres.

The architectural firm of Mill and Rose of Kingston, will prepare drawings and a modified tender call will be issued on them.

Mr. Taylor announced that when the design is completed it will be submitted to town council for approval before tenders are called. Since the project originated between Prince Edward County council and the Ontario Housing Corporation, residents throughout the county will be eligible to occupy the new subsidized units.

Construction of the units has been delayed for more than two years because of difficulty in locating an approved site. Council originally suggested self-care housing until at the site of the new county home for the aged.

OHC rejected this plan. It was felt the units should be built in an urban centre, if possible central Picton.

Several sites in town were considered but, because of location or cost factors, were not approved.

Steep Rise In Marmora Tax Rate

MARMORA — Village residents are faced with a 21.35 per cent increase in property taxes this year.

"The increase in rates is unavoidable," said Reeve Jack Reynolds, "due to the general inflationary trend and a deficit in 1973 operations."

"Council, in budgeting this year, has given careful consideration to all areas and have eliminated all but essential services," he added.

The consolidated public school rate will increase 22.54 mills from 106.59 mills to 128.13 mills and the consolidated commercial public school rate was set at 143.87 mills, an increase of 24.61 mills from the 1973 rate of 119.26 mills.

The consolidated separate school rate is a little less than the public school rate. It is set at 124.62 mills, an advance of 19.04 mills from the 1973 rate of 105.58. The commercial separate school rate is also a little less, than the public school increase, at 139.97 — an increase of 20.75.

The finance committee headed by Deputy-reeve Chuck Airhart, recommended that no increase be made in the water rates this year, in spite of increased costs. The last increase in the water rate was in 1972.

A change has been made in the dates for taxes to become payable. The new dates will be June 28 and October 31 instead of June 30 and November 30. Reason for the change is that earlier payment of taxes in the fall will help to eliminate interim borrowing expenses.

Part of the Village's deficit last year was incurred in the operation of the arena. When a current survey is completed the municipalities of Deloro and Marmora — Lake townships may be asked for a greater cost share in operating an arena.

Some $18,000 was budgeted for recreation. Last year's costs amounted to $14,200.

A projected payroll of more than $60,000 is also in the budget.

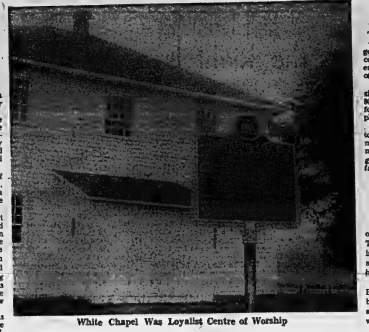
Juveniles 24 Hours In Bush

MADOC — Two juveniles were apprehended about noon Wednesday, 24 hours after they were reported driving off in a car left by a Flinton woman while she made a telephone call in a booth in Northbrook.

The Stouffville area boys, aged 14 and 15, were found north of Highway 7 in the Whispering Pines Motel area.

The pair drove the car from Northbrook to Moher's Restaurant north of Highway 7 where they abandoned it and took to the bush. A provincial police tracking dog was brought in Wednesday morning in an attempt to find the pair.

Blood Donors Are Fewer



MARMORA — Marmora Red Cross officials were disappointed with results of the recent Tri-Town Blood Donor Clinic at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc.

The 121 pints of blood donated was down considerably from last year. Twenty-six people were rejected for one reason or another.

Bernice Smith, chairman of Marmora Blood Donor Services, says there will be another clinic in the fall.

Guide for Art

MADOC — A curriculum committee of Hastings County board of education is engaged in drawing up guidelines for the teaching of art. A workshop was held at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc in May.

White Chapel Was Loyalist Centre of Worship

Built in 1809

Anniversary For Historic Church

PICTON — Prince Edward County's historic White Chapel will hold its annual anniversary service on Sunday beginning at 3 p.m.

Guest speaker for the 165th anniversary gathering will be Rev. J. Clare Kellogg of Holloway United Church, Belleville. The service will be conducted by: Rev. Robert Sherwin of Picton United Church. Music will be provided by Picton United Church organist Robert Keech and the United Church choir.

The White Chapel, built in 1809, and once known as "The Old Chapel" was constructed on land donated by Stephen Cooper, a Loyalist from New Jersey who settled with his family in Hallowell in 1787.

Opened in 1809 the White Chapel was the first Methodist Church in Prince Edward County and one of the earliest in Upper Canada. Built by William Moore and financed by local subscription, it has been maintained as a place of worship longer than any other church of Methodist origin in Ontario.

Although regular services have not been held there for a number of years, each year on the first Sunday in June there is a special interdenominational hour of worship.

Arrest at Burglary Scene

PICTON — A young Picton man has been charged by police following a break-in early today at Holland Supplies on County Road 8, on the outskirts of town.

Dennis Dunlop, 19, 42 York St., was charged with break, enter and theft after a man was apprehended fleeing the scene shortly after 1:30 a.m.

Constable Douglas Goodkey of Picton Provincial Police detachment said the store alarm system was triggered. Through the combined efforts of store owner Robert Holland, Picton Constable Charles Fletcher and OPP Constable Arthur Wiersma the man was stopped as he fled.

Several small items including a heat gauge and two cigarette lighters were reported missing from the shop.

Car Rolls, Damage $5,600

BRIGHTON — Damage was estimated at $5,600 resulting from a single - car accident early Thursday.

Donald Moran, 34, RR2, Codrington was injured slightly, when his stake truck left the road and rolled, reported provincial police at Brighton.

Work Saves Trenton Money

TRENTON — This town gets a break on maintenance costs this year following earlier-than-usual completion of road re-surfacing projects.

Arie Hoorweg, commissioner of works, says at least 80 per cent of the jobs slated for this summer will be completed by early July.

This, he said, will save the town money, since the municipality won't have to maintain old roads until crews get around to laying new surfaces.

Police Seek Thieves

TRENTON — Thieves made off with an estimated $100 Tuesday morning after breaking into the offices of construction firm Miron-Wiggers here.

Provincial police at Brighton said access to the building was gained by smashing a plate glass window.

Cash was taken from a vending machine and from a petty cash box kept in the "dilettante millionaire whose

Police said the office was ransacked in the search for more cash in desk drawers.

Centennial Plans

If there is a sort of never-never quality about the current federal election campaign — with any sense of urgency as to the issues and the July vote conspicuous by their lack — it is not surprising that Belleville's 1978 centennial year is even more of a damp squib in the public mind.

As polgied out in our news columns of late, the subject came up at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. Chamber president George Thompson said the centennial committee of which he is chairman is there to help groups thinking about undertaking a project.

"We are trying to show those people planning to take part . . . such as service clubs, what direction to take."

It went on to speak of efforts to create awareness of the event and of the committee being there to help.

Certainly the public should be giving this matter more thought. Mr. Thompson mentions the service clubs and we doubt they will be participating. But the Centennial must reflect all sides of community life — schools, business and industry, hospital and medical care, recreation, the arts and much else.

We need centennial projects and seem to recall Mayor Jeffrey suggesting the service clubs might get together to provide a municipal swimming pool.

There has to be a little more urgency, even at this early point, on the matter of Centennial preparations.

All-Canadian

Anne Murray's Annie in the Arctic television special was a happy, skilfully-produced, entertaining mixture of popular song and northern spectacle, an insight into the lives of Canadians of the polar region.

She had flown there, in a plane aptly named The Snowbird Special, after her Gene MacLellan hit song, because (as she told the curious from "the outside") "there are people there . . . and that's what it's all about."

This was really the heart of Anne Murray's special to-date, something that went off well musically. It showed us more of the real Anne Murray herself, as well as something uniquely Canadian.

For this reason it is the kind of program the CBC might well try and sell to U.S. and to overseas networks. It is the kind of program too that will "export" as the norm, might well be enjoyed more the second time around.

While on the subject of Canadian entertainment, we see that the inestimable Guy Lombardo has been in Peterborough and in Kingston, the latter performance in connection with The Limestone City's Festival '74. Our enduring Lombardo is certainly a catch for any community and the Lombardo sound remains one that evokes pleasure and a sense of nostalgia the world over.

Too bad that for some of the bigger entertainment events on the national calendar, such as the Ottawa Exhibition in August and September the headliners, including Lyn Anderson, Glen Campbell, and Ian Nabors are not Canadian. All great performers to be sure, but with so much talk of "Canadian content" we need more Anne Murrays and Guy Lombardos.

The same applies to the CNE in Toronto where the grandstand lineup will include such attractions as the Lawrence Welk Show, Liza Minnell, Helen Reddy, Charlie Rich, the Osmonds. The only Canadian presentation appears to be the National Drum and Bugle Corps Competition at the very end of the Ex. on Monday, Sept. 2.

In Action

A footnote to our observations on the military forces of the day. CBC news recently reported a Montrealer, a Captain Cochen, on patrol in Belfast of all places. This soldier expressed himself as having been dissatisfied with the way things were going" during service at home, transferred to the British army, and says he is enjoying the action in Ulster.

About the closest our people here get to that kind of thing is the more sedate service involved in United Nations peacekeeping duties. However, over the past five years of disturbances in Northern Ireland, officers of the Canadian army have been there as observers — lest the need ever arise for security duties of that nature in this part of the world.

PC's Jack Horner Looks To Future

New Party Of The Right Is a Possibility in Canada

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Believe it — there is a new federal "party of the Right" in the making. The Canada Party."

Alberta Conservative MPs Jack Horner and Stanley Schreacher have talked publicly about it.

So has Jack Horner's brother, Norval, a Conservative MP from Saskatchewan.

And so have Hu Harries, an economist, and Allan Sulatycky, a lawyer, both until their defeat in the last election, Liberal MPs from Alberta.

Mr. Harries recently was in Ottawa discussing, he claimed, the possibility of forming a new "Party of the Right" with both Conservative and Liberal MPs who supposedly are disenchanted with what they see as the "socialist leanings" of both Prime Minister Trudeau and Conservative Leader Stanfield.

And no, this is not just a Prairie "rump" of party malcontents.

For it has active organization. claims Stewart Crawford, an Ottawa businessman who tentatively is one of its candidates. not only in the West, but on the Pacific Coast, in Ontario — especially in Toronto's "Golden Triangle" — and in the Maritimes.

"And we're organized," retorts Mr. Crawford, "right down to the district — in some, the polling station level — in 200 ridings as 50 constituencies."

In the National Capital area, he says, the organization is fielding candidates in Ottawa West and Grenville-Carleton, two constituencies currently held by Conservatives.

This is happening, he relates, regardless of whether or not the new Party of the Right" can get fully cracking organizationally in time on "at least a good, solid regional basis," with those 50 nominations required to give the party an official billing on the ballots.

If it can manage to do that, "then," claims Stewart Crawford, If there is not time, then he and another candidate are still taking a run at Ottawa West and Grenville-Carleton, "to see what happens."

Jack Horner, recognized by the people in Mr. Stanfield's office as the leading proponent of the new party, has not been at a fraction as firm as Mr. Crawford.

Sure, he has said, he is "very dissatisfied" with the present state of conservatism and the party's embracing of wage and price control and a guaranteed annual income.

And yes, he was troubled by the way the recent Conservative convention dumped Dan Mathews as president for Michael Meighen.

But no, he has been quoted as saying, "I wouldn't be the one to lead any movement to be caught in the middle of an election campaign."

He has the Conservative nomination and is running in a Conservative.

But next time?

Stewart Crawford tells of meetings he has had with some of those Conservatives to discuss the formation of the new Party of the Right."

They were Jack and Norval Horner, Stan Schumacher and Duncan Bestie (Conservative MP for Hamilton Mountain), although I must say that since then Mr. Bestie has been a little on the shy side.

And we talked of the increasingly promising prospects of forming this new "real Conservative Party."

Other than Alberta and the National Capital area, we are those 50 or so ridings in which the new party of the Right" is organized.

"Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Hamilton, and New Brunswick," reveals Stewart Crawford. "In Toronto we're setting up in the ridings of Rosedale held by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald and in Eglinton which External Affairs Minister Sharp represents.

But New Brunswick we're strong around Moncton and will have representation around if not right in Saint John."

Who are the organizers and chief executives of the Canada Party?

Stuart J. Nelson, a retired Carleton Place businessman, is national leader, duly registered as such with the Chief Electoral Officer for the purposes of the current election campaign. There was not time for a formal meeting yesterday, he says, "that will come after we get some of our people into Parliament."

Toronto lawyer William C. Busby is president and the regional executives include Mr. Crawford, railwayman George A. Daley, and businessmen D. Russell Dickie and Charles L. McKee of Moncton, railwayman Russ Maley and businessman Douglas Tighe, wood of Winnipeg.

Subversion: Just Who Is Involved?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Intelligencer is to be commended for its consistent stand against the threat of Communist propaganda and subversion permeating the media, educational and liberal institutions of all as yet "unliberated" nations.

The newspaper's observations on the support of Canadian Church leaders for terrorists and the condemnation of their congregations to Soviet-subscribed forces now killing whites with a view to overthrowing established governments in southern Africa are particularly pertinent.

While Ann Landers sells arms for profit, the position of Russia and China in this part of the world is unique in that both Communist powers have supplied modern weapons free — conditional on their military experts training them in the indoctrinate and direct forces to overthrow the established governments of Portugal, Rhodesia and South Africa.

Just as the Kremlin, by engineering the wars against Israel, has caused a major shift of world capital thereby accentuating and debilitating inflationary forces and enhancing the appeal of Communism, so would the overthrow of established government in Africa affect the world protection of giant oil tanker routes in the Indian Ocean and around the Cape on which the survival of the industrial world depends.

In that the fleet of Great Britain, the U.S. and Russia are now vying for position in the Indian Ocean and the present navy of South Africa protects the Cape, any change in ownership of the latter navy could be vital to this predominance.

Transference of control of the vital mines would also be basic to world monetary markets in that South Africa and Rhodesia are the two leading suppliers of this precious metal.

The overthrow of established governments would lend impetus to similar activities elsewhere.

The gradual Soviet dominance of the World Council of Churches which is siphoning off the contributions of congregations of money countries to the terrorists was fully documented by senior Reader's Digest editor Clarence W. Hall in two articles appearing in the November and December 1971 issues of that publication.

These articles included criticism of the WCC programs by such authorities as The London Times and Germany's Die Welt.

Malcolm Muggeridge advised "The clerics should confine it."

The Archbishop of Canterbury denounced the program as "counter-productive."

A study by the Royal Institute of International Affairs London reported "The primary objective which Soviet foreign policy hoped to achieve from participation in the World Council of Churches was, of course, to influence its activities in such a way that the Council's decisions and actions would be comfortable to the Soviet interest."

Following publication of these articles which were probably read more carefully by church clerics in many countries than any ever to appear in an international publication, the Reader's Digest polished a refuting view for a layman member of the World Council of Churches. His efforts to negate well-documented evidence were so weak as to constitute a confirmation, leaving the subject matter as valid as ever, despite his perfidy to sweep under the rug.

One of the more outspoken disciples of church support for the terrorists, Rev. Bruce McLeod, a minister of the United Church, visited Belleville recently.

When asked by a lady caller on the open line show about the significance of the communist arms build-up in Africa, the minister airily dismissed the importance of this cooperation.

When the same caller asked him about the Reader's Digest editorials and references to the Reader's Digest articles he responded with a curt reply to this effect: "Oh those articles don't mean a thing. The important fact the Reader's Digest published a complete retraction."

Following the Moderator's visit, elaboration on the church's stand in Africa at the Bloor Street United Church, two local clerics were quoted in The Intelligencer confirming the Rev. McLeod's statement that the Reader's Digest had published a retraction.

Having read all three articles I was sufficiently astonished by this statement that I wrote to the editor of Reader's Digest to explain as follows:

"Thanks for your letter about the articles on the World Council of Churches. Your memory is accurate. We did publish an article by a member of the World Council of Churches Central Committee, but we certainly did not publish a retraction.

Signed C.W. Magill, Managing Editor."

Despite an obvious difference of opinion, the Moderator can be assured of the fact that in his support for the terrorists he is in powerful company.

When the Commonwealth Conference was held in Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau generously bestowed Canada's blessings on the plans of the African guests for Rhodesia's future.

Mitchell Sharp, despite the shooting of two Canadian girl tourists (mistaken for Rhodesians) continues to transfer millions of the Canadian taxpayer's dollars to Zambia via Tanzania.

Who said we don't need another election?

D. GRANT
Editor's Note: The Intelligencer also checked the validity and sequence of The Reader's Digest articles with that publication. In a letter dated May 15, managing editor Charles Magill wrote in part: "Because of the controversy resulting from the two articles in 1971) we ran an article by Irwin Ross who was from 1961 to 1968 a member of the executive committee of the WCC's Central Committee. A copy of that article is not really a rebuttal and certainly not a retraction by the Digest. It was rather an alternate point of view, is attached."

Cheap Food Days Are Over Says Weston

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

In that most fundamental of all businesses—food—the long-term outlook is for a steady rise in prices.

That's the warning from the Canadian head of one of the world's largest merchandising organizations. According to W. Galen Weston, chairman of George Weston Ltd., "rising costs" increases in operating costs and massive increases in capital requirements are in store.

This means that consumers will be spending more and more for their grocery needs.

"North Americans will have to accept the fact that the time when they can expect to spend only 15 or 16 cents of every disposable dollar on food is over," says Mr. Weston, grandson of the baker's apprentice who launched the business when he bought a Toronto bread route in 1882.

Galen Weston accepts the forecast that the world's population will double over the next 25 years. On that premise, he predicts difficulties in meeting the supply of food in balance with the demand.

Other experts break the food crisis down into geographical problem areas. One of these is India, such areas includes Bangladesh.

No such famine fears the people of this country. But heavy exports of grains by Canada and the United States, to areas such as the Indian subcontinent, can and do reduce the domestic food supply, and thus tend to push prices up.

Rising prices and the chronic shortage of suitable labor are incentives to the supermarkets to make food retailing more efficient. The familiar supermarket of today does not, after all, represent the limit of merchandising efficiency and business ingenuity.

As one example of the trend of the future, automated "frozen food equipment" will eventually replace the existing cash register and conveyor belt in your neighborhood supermarket. That conversion at all of Weston's subsidiaries' outlets will cost more than $100 million.

Galen Weston contends that if the food-distribution industry is to raise capital of that magnitude, competitive legislation would be users of the available capital. It must increase its profitability "dramatically."

That brings the problem back to shelf prices, and underlines the likelihood of more and more increases.

The stage is set, then, for allout consumer confrontation with Beryl Plumptre's Food Prices Review Board, and with political parties.

The latter usually claims descent the close scrutiny that they will undoubtedly be given by Mrs. Plumptre's economists.

Their earnings reports deserve much closer scrutiny than they receive from David Lewis, the recently bloated labor man M. Loeb Ltd. for reporting a 168-per-cent profit increase in its latest fiscal year.

He neglected to mention that most of the increase was attributable to the acquisition of a competing food wholesaler during the year. On a strictly comparable year-to-year basis, Loeb profits were only nine per cent on a six-per-cent sales gain.

Fern Guindon Switches To National Politics

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — While Labor Minister Fern Guindon was wondering whether he should resign and run federally a good many people here would have been wondering, and worrying, along with him.

For the Stormont member has been a very valuable member for his party and those who know his contribution would not have wanted to see him go.

This debonair 37-year-old oil dealer from Cornwall has political expert with the French vote.

He has been by far the most effective French-Canadian politician in Ontario PCs' history, with his influence extending right across the province to Fort Frances and Kingston.

His charm and conviction have been compelling, and they have been called on widely in both contentious and general elections.

Some years ago, for example, there was a Windsor byelection in a seat which was largely French.

Guindon was sent in for a week and he personally canvassed the riding street by street and door to door.

The Conservatives really hadn't expected to win but they did, and those in the know gave almost the complete credit to the member for Stormont.

A minister since 1967, Guindon has recently been criticized for the way he has run the Labor ministry, which he took over in 1972.

It is notable that most of this criticism has come from the NDP.

Actually Labor is probably the most distressing ministry to handle in the government.

It is a job in which you simply can't win.

It would be impossible to satisfy the demands of organized labor and its spokesmen in the form of the NDP.

You could give them the key to the city and they would want the mayor.

Therefore any minister in the Labor portfolio is condemned and made to look bad.

Viewed from the sidelines Guindon would seem to have been a good minister, and certainly he did a good job in tourism, his previous portfolio.

But the possibility of getting freed from the steady carping in the Labor job would have been a strong consideration he would have weighed when considering switching.

Firecracker Dangers Are Cited

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This is not a pitpit pounder, rather, it is something that the public in general to ponder about.

This evening at 10 p.m. my doorbell rang and as I answered the front door, a remnant of the Victoria Day fireworks display met my startled eyes.

Travelsound I was a beautiful flare (trade name Sorcerer); the beauty of it was quickly lessened in my view by the realization of how near the flare had been to my house (and hedge with dry leaves beneath) — the distance was approximately 1½ to 2 feet.

My first thought was, "those explosive deleted) that whoever I apparently chastised myself, for, as a child, I think I can own up to many done similarly. I feel that I was an average child so why expect other kids do as I did? We must expect these things of children as fireworks are not toys.

But are they toys? Yes and no. They assume so they must be toys. They are potentially dangerous so they must not be toys.

Can we expect any different behavior from a 10-year-old? No — especially not from one who is allowed out at 10 p.m. But was it a 10-year-old — was the child 11, or 12, or 13 makers not. The grisly fact is that some retail merchant in our city has sold these 15 months of explosive incapable of understanding the hazards.

We get quite indignant at the thought of lead in our letters (a subtle and insidious hazard) but must we wilfully blind ourselves to such apparent (and easily avoidable) dangers?

Parents, please do not blame your children. Slap your own wrists a little harder. Come on the retailer with all your weight.

The Community And Things to Do

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May 17 comment on your editorial of Tuesday, May 14, The Small Community, in which you deplore the "nothing to do" syndrome.

It is often supposed that small communities offer "little for the mind", quoting your editorial. This is a misconception. Unfortunately, though, it seems that in this many parents and teachers have not taught people how to spend and enjoy their leisure time. There are many ways to occupy time, whether living in town or country. If one finds that there is "nothing to do", one may think and enjoy reading Thoreau, Dickins or Hutchison, listen to a Berlin opera or a Beethoven quartet, watch a spider make a web, or a plant grow, or just meditate.

In the country, one may hike, cycle, birdwatch, or sketch a landscape; one may "do your own thing" so long as it doesn't hurt others (directly or indirectly) and there seems little excuse for "nothing to do". Why not write a letter to the editor, or better, to your MP or MPP or MLA explaining about the need for recreational facilities, such as safe bicycling routes.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

50 YEARS AGO

May 30, 1924

Great leaders like Winston Churchill and General Dwight D Eisenhower are bearing loads and tasks that would weigh down lesser men. Mr. Churchill is leading the great British Empire and Eisenhower in leading the Allied assault upon Hitler's Naxidom.

Rumors circulation in the city today regarding an alleged weekend shortage of meat due to motor truck accidents which caused the destruction of 24,000 pounds of assorted meats yesterday, were dispelled by local butchers this morning. The local provisioners stated their weekend supplies arrived intact on trucks.

Synthetic Vision Provided Blind

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A tiny television camera and electrical stimulation of the brain are being used experimentally to produce synthetic vision for the blind.

Although the project is a decade or more away from general use, its director believes it may be the first significant aid to the blind since the invention of braille.

For the vast majority, being cut off from sight means immobility and going without reading. Researchers estimated that 80 to 90 per cent of the ordinary individual's knowledge of the world comes from sight; the remainder comes from the other four senses.

Fewer than one of five blind people can read braille; fewer than one of 10 can move about independently with a cane.

Within the last year, W. A. Dobelle and his colleagues of the neuroprosthesis program at the Institute for Biomedical Engineering in Salt Lake City, Utah, have implanted electrodes on the vertical cortex of two blind men and have used a miniature television camera to produce spots of light.

Eventually, Dr. Dobelle said, a blind person may be able to use the system to achieve a mental picture comparable to a poor-quality, fuzzy television image.

Dobelle's research, based on earlier experiments in England by Giles Brindley, is one of several projects using modern electronic equipment to give new mobility to the blind.

At the Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Worcester, Mass., a research team is working on a system to translate light into sound, replacing vision with audio signals.

The experiment is based on the fact that high-frequency tones seem to come from high positions, while lower frequencies seem to come from lower positions—even if the tones in fact have a single source. Adding the principle of stereophonic sound—in which the ears determine the direction of a sound by variations in loudness between ears—the researchers believe a "sound picture" may be created.

In the Worcester experiment, a television camera is used to pick up light from common household objects, for example. The image is translated into sound and subjects have been trained to recognize such objects as scissors or pliers.

Another system developed at the University of the Pacific in San Francisco utilizes touch to replace vision—as well as hearing.

By placing an array of mechanical or electrical stimulators on the skin, students have been able to locate and recognize objects in the laboratory, to read meters and use oscilloscopes.

The researchers suggest that such a "tactile sensory replacement" may have a wide variety of uses, including providing information for a busy pilot flying an airplane or transmitting orders on a battlefield at night or whenever absolute silence is required.

This sudden multiplicity of aides for the blind—all developed in the last five years—has stirred a lively debate among those who work with sightless people.

Leslie Clark, a researcher at the American Foundation for the Blind, said sophisticated technological advances are extremely expensive and may benefit only a small portion of the blind. Many critics argue that the available funds would be better spent on projects which would be of more general use.

Clark estimates that only 10,000 to 20,000 blind persons could benefit from the most dramatic developments—artificial vision through direct stimulation of the visual cortex—and believes the cost of the project may not be justified by its usefulness.

He estimated the visual prosthesis might cost as much as $500 million.

Clark argued that the great majority of blind people are over age 65, making brain surgery to implant the necessary electrodes for artificial vision a near impossibility.

But Dobelle said his system can be of widespread use, even for those over 65.

He argued that the surgical technique is neither especially dangerous nor particularly expensive. Once his system is perfected—and he repeatedly cautioned that it is years in the future—he estimated it might cost $3,000, plus $2,000 for the surgical implant of the electrodes.

So far, Dobelle has tested his system on 37 patients who were undergoing surgery for blind men who had electrodes different reasons and on two temporarily implanted for the experiment.

When electricity flowed through the electrodes, the blind patients perceived a spot of light, or in some cases a glow like a white cloud. In one case, some of the points of light appeared to be orange; the other patient saw only white and Dobelle predicted that even a perfected system the picture received by the blind would be black and white.

The electrodes were connected to a tiny computer worn in eyeglasses—which in turn was connected with a television camera so small it can be implanted in an eye-socket.

Dobelle said his system is not there-creation of the natural process of vision—and moreover, he is not concerned with how a human ordinarily sees. What matters, he said, is that it works.

At its best, he estimated the quality of vision would approximate what television cameras first transmitted from the moon. The blind user should be able to recognize individual faces, make his way about without help and even read at useful speeds.

Beefalo May Solve Meat Costs

EDMONTON (CP) — Beefalo, an animal with combined buffalo, Charolais and Hereford ancestry, may solve the problem of high meat costs in the future, says Dr. Ken Wiancko.

Dr. Wiancko, a surgeon with an Edmonton practice, runs one of the only two beefalo operations in Canada on a farm west of the city. He obtained the animals from the San Francisco area farm of Bud Basolo, a world-famous rancher who worked 15 years to mate buffalo successfully with beef cattle.

Last summer, Dr. Wiancko read a magazine article about the Basolo animals and his curiosity was aroused. "Finally I told the wife I'd better take a look at them," he said in an interview.

"I went down a skeptic and came back converted."

Mr. Basolo said that his beefalo not only produce high-quality meat but are reproductive. However, his biggest boast is the beefalo's rapid growth and low production cost.

He estimated that the finished meat will cost consumers as much as 40 per cent less than they would pay for regular beef. Unlike cattle, which mature in 18 months on a grain diet, beefalo reach marketable weight in 12 months on grass.

With feed grains rapidly increasing in price, Mr. Basolo conjended that this production advantage will soon establish beefalo as the only alternative to exorbitant beef prices.

He said that the beefalo carcass is 20 per cent protein, compared with 10 or 12 per cent in regular beef. Its fat content is seven per cent, compared with beef's estimated 50 per cent.

Mr. Basolo reported a lively demand for beefalo semen. The semen is "fed" raw milk, then frozen and shipped around the world.

Beefalo sperm can't yet be shipped into Canada because the breed has not been registered here, so Dr. Wiancko brought seven heifers and a bull from San Francisco.

Alberta's Ombudsman Says He's 'Workaholic'

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's new ombudsman, an Anglican priest, describes himself as "a workaholic" and relishes the prospect of satisfying his addiction.

"I will always want to work, Very Rev. Randall Ivany said in an interview shortly before he assumed duties as ombudsman. "I can relax working.

"I'm not really a procrastinator and this puts a lot of people off. The fact that I will plow my way through very often, I suppose, covers up a lot of inadequacies.

Dr. Ivany, 41, was appointed dean of All Saints Cathedral in 1970 and tackled the job with vigor. He had come to Edmonton the year before.

Education Minister Lou Hyndman, chairman of a special committee that recommended him as successor to George McLellan in the ombudsman's post, described Dr. Ivany as an objective person with a "flash of independence."

"Although he will be a sensitive listener, he will not become involved with every person who happens to come to his door," Mr. Hyndman said.

A native of Port Rexton, Nfld., Dr. Ivany earned a bachelor of engineering degree in 1958 and worked as an electrical engineer before entering theology.

He obtained two theology degrees, was ordained and in the early 1960s became rector of two churches near Calgary. From 1963 to 1968 he was rector of St. Luke's Church in Red Deer and in the winter of 1968-69 he served as interim rector at St. John's Episcopal Church in Oklahoma City, Okla.

The announcement that he had been recommended as successor to Mr. McClellan, former RCMP commissioner and Canada's first provincial ombudsman, was a surprise to many.

Dr. Ivany, who stressed he was going into the new job "as a churchman and a priest," was relieved when his appointment became public knowledge after receiving unanimous approval from the legislature.

He said one of the unfortunate aspects of his application was that he was not at liberty to inform his congregation. He was one of 182 applicants for the job.

He acknowledges there has been some negative reaction to his appointment.

Some of it has come from parishioners "because I think some people still don't see a priest as doing anything outside the parish; they feel that for some reason or other you're going to be lost to the church."

Outside the church, there were those who questioned his religious affiliation and clerical background.

"That is one thing I'm sure people are going to worry about," Dr. Ivany said. "As Anglican and clergyman how will I react? I believe this is a fair question.

"But I'm not going to be a bigot. With my understanding of philosophy and religion, I think I'm less bigoted than the atheist, who in many ways is very bigoted against those who believe in God. . . .

"As for keeping my head above water in the political sense. I've had lots of experience in that because the church is political as well as religious."

The new ombudsman stressed he will make full use of his staff. "We're going to work very much as a team, and not myself as a prima donna."

The ombudsman deals with complaints from citizens about actions by government departments and agencies—a task that involves considerable knowledge of the law.

"That's one of the reasons there's a lawyer on the staff," Dr. Ivany said. "George McClellan was not a lawyer, but obviously he had a lot of background in law.

"I can distinguish between legal justice and natural justice."

The clergyman said he does not anticipate the new job will change his life-style unduly except that his family will move. As dean of All Saints Cathedral, Dr. Ivany lived in the rectory free of charge.

As ombudsman, he will no longer hold the position of dean and rector. The family plans to buy a house. With that added financial responsibility, Dr. Ivany anticipates the $30,000 ombudsman's salary will leave him with "maybe $10,000 a year more than I'm earning now."

His family—Dr. Ivany and his wife Joan, have three daughters—favors the change of jobs, although six-year-old Mary "is not very happy about having to move house."

Lynn, 16, is "a political animal" and has discussed the appointment in some depth with her father; Kathryn, 14, "is more of a studious type and less concerned about it."

Dr. Ivany said the family has always operated on the basis of discussing everything together—"mainly as a result of Mary's illness."

The girl is a victim of cystic fibrosis and it is not known how long it will be before the disease claims her life. "This has opened up the channels of communication," Dr. Ivany said. "We talk about all things; there are no secrets.

"Many knows she's got a very dread disease . . . and she's talked about death freely. Even at four years of age, Mary was aware of what death was."

His wife, whom he describes as "a rather magnificent character," has a dormant case of multiple sclerosis.

All of which "I think makes me rather sensitive and understanding to certain needs in people," Dr. Ivany said.

I didn't discuss any of this with the (legislative) committee. I don't think they're aware of it. They weren't hiring my family, they were hiring me."

Dr. Ivany expects the job of ombudsman will carry frustrations and that he will "have to develop a lot of patience."

"I'm not particularly a patient man but I think I have learned that in a face-to-face encounter it's possible to work your way through.

"I think one of the keys is to be available and to meet with people and talk to people."

Where it is necessary to fight political bureaucracy, "I will fight it," he said. "At the same time, when (government) is doing the right thing and people are complaining, I think you have to stand up and say so.

"I imagine one criticism is that the legislature, by appointing me, has taken the sting and the claws out of the ombudsman's job.

"George McClellan would be looked at as a tough cop and myself as a softie.

"But I don't see this as a job for a do-gooder. There are times when I'm going to have to say 'no, I can't do anything.'

"I don't think I'm any softer than my predecessor was. He's seen life in the raw and so have I."

He's A 'Workaholic'

Very Rev. Randall Ivany plays with the family dog, Andy, as he talks about his appointment as Alberta's new ombudsman. Dr. Ivany, an Anglican priest, describes himself as a "workaholic" and says he can relax by working (CP Photo).

Beautification Job Becomes Garbage War

CHASE, B.C. (CP) — What began as a beautification project has developed into a garbage war still raises hackles in this village, 30 miles west of Kamloops.

In 1972, artist Laurie Payne applied for an Opportunities For Youth (OFY) grant with which he and six friends proposed to construct a beautification project in downtown Chase.

"I had a vision," he said, "I thought how nice it would be to have a little park in Chase and build a fountain there."

The village council donated a small wedge of property at one end of the main street, approved Mr. Payne's design and authorized the work.

Two small concrete pools ringed with rocks form the fountain's base. In the larger pool stands a white concrete structure seven feet high and five feet wide which looks like a teacup.

On top of it was to have been a metal sphere from which a couple of dozen hollow antennae protruded, on a 12-foot copper pole above a pair of outstretched arms.

"The effect was that the water was turned on would have been like a huge dandelion puff about four feet in diameter," said Mr. Payne. "But the council decided it was too fragile, that vandals would have damaged it.

"So I made a new head, a little metal rose."

Whether the little rose will ever bloom above the teacup is the question.

After Mr. Payne completed the work, but before he had a chance to begin operating the fountain, the local electrical inspector rejected the wiring for the fountain's water pump.

Council then reversed its decision to maintain and operate the fountain on the grounds that it was received in non-working condition.

Finally, villagers began dumping garbage in and around the fountain.

"It looked like the Chase dump," said Mr. Payne. "Giving a work of art to these people is like giving a Boeing 707 to a bunch of pygmies. They're just not sophisticated enough to run it."

So, if it was a pile of garbage they wanted, a pile of garbage they would get.

Piles of refuse began appearing on the road to the Chase dump, which is near Mr. Payne's homestead on a mountain range a mile or so east of the village.

The RCMP investigated, said items found in the garbage had come from the Payne household and charged the artist with littering.

Mr. Payne vowed to fight the case to the Supreme Court of Canada but the Crown later withdrew the charge, saying the law dealing with such offences was not clear enough to proceed.

Mayor Alex Brown, whose home overlooks the fountain site, said the village has received an estimate of $300 for work to make the fountain operative but that he and the council believe the OFY program should put up the money.

Contemplating the view from his living room window, the mayor said: "If my wife had a machine big enough to do the job, that thing would have been out of there several times by now."

32 of 53 Kettles Exceed Lead Limit

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer affairs department tests of 53 different designs of electric kettles found 32 of them exceeded safe limits of lead particle emissions, the department announced Wednesday.

Twenty of the 32 hazardous kettles had lead particle levels 20 times or more greater than the safe level of 50 parts per billion which has been set by the federal health protection branch.

Just three kettles were found that did not contaminate test water with any lead at all.

They are a General Electric model KE82A, a Toastess "Caprice" model 725 and a Fitzbo model K67.

One kettle, a Sunbeam model No. K11, exceeded the safety limit by 640 times with 32,000 lead particles per billion.

The electric kettle found to produce the second highest lead levels in boiled water was a McGraw-Edison model EK3610 with 10,300 lead particles per billion.

Of 10 General Electric kettles tested, only one—model KE82A—gave a reading of more than 50 parts lead per billion.

Four of five Sunbeam Kettles failed the tests. The company's model K22SD had a safe reading of less than 50 parts per billion.

All three Samson Dominion kettles tested were found to have unsafe lead level emissions. One—model EK3630—had a test result of 9,800 parts per billion.

Only one McGraw-Edison kettle—model EK3063—had a test result under the federal safety level. Nine of this company's kettles were tested.

Westinghouse had four kettles that exceeded the safety limit and three that were under. The safe kettles had model numbers HK11A, HK11A and HK22W.

All four Kenmore kettles tested had lead levels at least 70 times above the safety limit. The one Viking model tested also failed.

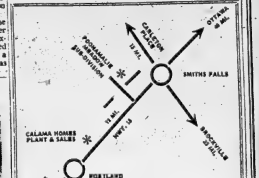
Other safe models included a Toastess 730, a Ronson 04 and a Proctor Silex 89005.

Other models with high lead emissions in testing were a Baycrest K5 with 2,800 parts per billion, a Filtro K80 with 1,800 parts per billion and a Jubilee 11 with 600 parts per billion.

Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray reiterated in a news release that the cabinet would be asked on an urgent basis to issue regulations that ban sale of unsafe electric kettles.

He emphasized that infants and young children are especially sensitive to lead and that "electric kettles with high lead release characteristics should be avoided in the preparation of baby formulas and foods, in particular."

The news release said laboratory testing is continuing on other electric kettles.



The potential hazard of the kettles became an issue earlier this month when Toronto experts found kettles that failed lead-presence tests after a seven-month-old baby was found to have lead poisoning.

Public Is Concerned About World Population

TORONTO (CP) — A series of public meetings indicates Canadians are concerned about a world population "problem", says a report by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

But there is disagreement over what is at the root of the problem: politics, social conditions or mismanagement of scarce resources.

The 74-page report was presented Wednesday to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp by Davidson Dunton, chairman of a four-member panel that crossed the country during March and April seeking the views of citizens on the population question.

Guild Studies James Bay

The repercussions of the James Bay Hydro-Electric Development Project were the subject of a talk given to the Women's Study Guild this week by Catherine Roulet and Diane Settle.

Meeting at the home of Georgina Mackie, the members heard a detailed account of how the hydro-electric plan was initiated by the government of Quebec's Premier Robert Bourassa. Mrs. Roulet traced the events leading to the announcement of the project in 1971 and explained the controversy that has raged around it since.

The promises made by Premier Bourassa guaranteed thousands of jobs, limitless electric power, creation of new cities and lakes as tourist resources, and economic expansion for the province.

In fact, said Mrs. Roulet, not enough research was done prior to the decision to go ahead with the project. It has since been made clear by government studies that many results would be destructive rather than beneficial.

Mrs. Settle explained the project itself — the plans to dam and harness 15 rivers on the eastern side of James Bay in order to create power sources — and what the ecological, social and political consequences would be.

The people most adversely affected by the project (which has already begun) are the 7,000 Cree Indians who live in the area drained by these rivers. The upset in the natural balance of wildlife deprives them of food and livelihood, and could cause their eventual demise.

To prevent injustice being done, the Indians applied for an injunction against the James Bay project, and won their case for a brief week in 1973, until the decision was overthrown by the Quebec Court of Appeals.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Settle said, although the Cree people are still in danger of losing their traditional land, the result and publicity has brought them to our attention as never before. What has been gained is a recognition of the rights of Canada's native people, and the knowledge that plans to change the face of the land must be made with greater care and respect.

Mrs. Settle and Mrs. Roulet distributed pamphlets and magazines sent by the Canadian Association in Support of the Native Peoples, and made available to members all the research literature they had used.

Included were "James Bay Project — The Plot to Drown the Northwoods" by Boyce Richardson, and the book by Robert Bourassa about the project, now banned by the Quebec courts.

Discussion about the situation followed as coffee and tea were served.

At the beginning of the evening, after the business meeting chaired by President Marjorie Reid, a worship service led by Loreen Ellis centred on readings relevant to God and nature.

At their May meeting, Hero... they point out where the potential flooding of river basins will occur.

Books By And About Women

THE STEPFORD WIVES
By Ira Levin

Ira Levin also wrote Rosemary's Baby.

Right off, you know something about The Stepford Wives, a small suspenseful tale set in modern exurbia.

In Stepford, women are a little different than in other towns. The heroine, Joanna, starts finding out just how different the day her family moves to Stepford and the suspense builds through to the ending.

If you're looking for a thrilling interlude, you can find it in this mystery-cum-horror story. If allegory and allusion — not to mention illusion — are your bag, you'll find it here, too.

Just don't read it while Hubby's out at the Men's Club.

This book is available from the Corby Library.

TOKYO (AP) China and the Soviet Union signed a 1974 trade agreement in Peking on Wednesday, the official New China news agency reported. Details were not given.

People and Events

Organizer of the Christopher Leadership Course in Peterborough, John Driscoll addressed members of the CWL in Marmora at their May meeting.

"A Christopher, or Christ bearer," he said, "is one who believes in the teaching of Christ; and the course prepares us to speak effectively as Christians. The distinguishing mark of the Christopher is one of love and thought for the other person, and their motto is "It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness."

Marmora CWL hopes to arrange for the Christopher Course here in September, 1974, and will invite any interested members from all the churches to participate.

Evelyn Homan, convener for resolutions introduced the guest speaker, Dorothy Fargey of Rawlin. Mrs. Fargey, district resolutions convener, attended the Officers' Conference at Waterloo University and gave a report of this meeting. She described a bus trip that was taken through the Mennonite villages and also explained the way to handle a resolution.

Mrs. Homan closed her meeting with a contest, and lunch was served by the hostess and assistants.

Thora Fuller, Family and Welfare Services, Belleville, and John Rowe, chairman of Counselling Services at Trenton High School, were guest speakers at St. Andrew's United Church Women's meeting Tuesday.

Through experience gained from working closely with troubled families and teenagers, Mrs. Fuller had a message for all regarding family relationships. She spoke on the pressures of society, the role of mother and how the church can help hold families together. The aim of parents should be to demonstrate hope and love, be realistic and display a positive attitude, Mrs. Fuller said.

Speaking largely on the role of father, Mr. Rowe said, a sense of humour can be very helpful. The father and mother's role is complimentary when working as a team and coupled with love and affection for each other. He cautioned against parents setting standards too high. He touched on children with handicaps and the difference praise can make. In conclusion Mr. Rowe gave a reading "If I were to start my family again" which emphasized security, stability and sacredness.

Following a lunch, the audience was divided into three groups for a discussion on advice to young people contemplating marriage, important influences in forming children's characters and what unique role father should play in respect to the children.

President Marie Cook announced a U.C.W. Leadership School would be held on September 6,7 and 8 at Camp Quin-Ho-Lac and the Fall Rally would be held on October 10.

Ann Landers

'A Crummy Thing I Did'

Dear Ann Landers: A while back you asked teen-age boys to write and tell how they felt about losing their virginity. I laughed when I read the letter because somehow one doesn't think of boys as "virgins." Then I stopped laughing and began to think seriously about my first sexual experience.

I was 18 and the girl was 15. I really didn't like her very much but I wanted to see if I could score because all the guys in my crowd were talking about the chicks they were knocking off and I was the only one who didn't have anything to my credit.

It was a crummy thing I did. I lied and told the girl I had been crazy about her for a long time—a real mave job. The whole "affair" lasted five minutes. I felt like a heel immediately after. When I took her home I didn't even kiss her goodnight.

I never called her for a date after that and I'm sure I hurt her feelings something terrible. I used that dumb kid for my own selfish purposes and to this day I regret it.

Sex without love is lousy. I hope every guy who reads this will remember what I am saying. It took me two years to get over that experience. The next time I had sex, it was with a girl I really cared about, and I married her.—We Name Please

Dear No Name: Thanks for telling it like it was.

Dear Ann Landers: I am beginning to think I have bats in the belfry. Please tell me if you think I'm crazy.

When I was in my early 20s I enjoyed men my own age, and I married one. We had a good marriage for eight years, until Jim died in a tragic accident. It took me a solid year to get over it.

When I once again began to enjoy the company of men, they were in their 30s, and so was I. Now I'm in my 50s. I never remarried but I have several gentleman friends who are also in their 50s.

The point I want to make is this: Why do so many young girls run after men who are 20 and 30 years older than themselves? It's not to be money because these girls are not chasing older men of modest means. It's always some rich geezer. I call it prostitution no matter how you look at it.

Don't these girls realize that when the glamour wears off they'll be bored stiff and stuck playing nurse to some sick old bumard? Why don't you tell them, Ann?—Seen It Happen

Dear Happen: When they ask me, I tell 'em. But everyone knows of at least one exception to which they fiendishly point to few who are all wet. (I know a few myself.)

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell your readers recovered alcoholics and handicapped people make the best employees. As the personnel director for a large firm I can vouch for them—both men and women.

The AAs and the handicapped are my most valuable employees. Their attendance record is by far the best and their job performance superior. It means a great deal to these people that someone had enough faith in them to give them a chance.

Please, Ann, urge your readers to hire recovered alcoholics and the handicapped.—Proof Positive

Dear Proof: Right you are! And I'd like to add a third group. Ex-convicts have proven to be excellent employees. Come on, folks, give these people a break. They really need it.

Women Want Resource Centre

CHATHAM (CP) — Delegates to the Ontario Business and Professional Women's Club conference Saturday urged the Ontario government to mark International Women's Year in 1975 by setting up an Ontario women's resource centre.

The centre would collect and cross-reference material about Ontario women and their activities in the province.

Margaret Archibald, a Chatham lawyer, told the 200 delegates to the two-day conference that the Ontario Status of Women Council is "a permanent body aimed at helping women participate more fully in all aspects of Ontario life."

She said the council is "making a determined effort to get more women appointed to boards, commissions and committees within the government."

She noted the recent appointments of Pauline McGibbon as Lt.-Gov. of Ontario and Dorothy Grisenden as deputy-minister of community and social services.

Miss Archibald told delegates that "education, perseverance and dedication" will help women win a higher place in government and business circles.

The conference elected Margaret Jackson of Toronto as president, replacing Barbara Cameron of Cobourg.

Successful Living

Doris Advises Picnic Preparation

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Our daughter of 16 is a defiant young lady. We told her she could not go out with her young man any more, since we know they have had intimate relations.

His home life is hell; his dad beats him, and his sister had a baby at 15 years of age. His mother realized that the girl marry. We think our daughter is mistaking pity (for him) for love. She says she intends to go out with him again, in spite of our orders.

Would it help if we sent her away from home? We feel that if she goes out with this boy again she will soon be pregnant.

Desperate Parents.

Dear Desperate Parents:

The boy friend does not sound right for her, but your way of handling it isn't either. You have put her in the position of having to take the young man's part or else lose face with herself.

If you had talked to her much sooner, in a loving open way, you might have helped her to see that it would be better to date several boys; and that steady dating sometimes brings about just too much intimacy.

Do not let her feel that you are her adversary, and do not even consider turning her out of your home. She is too young.

I wonder if you have helped her to enjoy other young people by welcoming them in your home? I wonder if you have let her know in the past that you love her? If you're are too stern with her, she may not realize that behind that authority are deep consern and love.

Dear Doris: I always read your column and sometimes I find my own problems in it, wish very helpful advice.

However, to the non-believer who calls herself "a peace lover": I'm sure if she looks deep inside herself, she may find she does believe, because there are so many non-believers who through some tragedy cry out to God. In my short life of 25 years I've seen this happen many times.

So in this whole world it must happen many, many times to non-believers.

An Honest Believer

In All That Is Good

Dear Honest: Thank you. One thoughtful gentleman expressed the idea that we simply must have something to look up to, or our lives have no direction; no anchor. We may discover this when we hit those moments of crisis or tragedy.

(Putting it down on paper helps — in a letter to Doris, a Canadian journalist with a master's degree in social work— in her newspaper.)

Part Time York Students Ensured Fair Deal by Dean

TORONTO (CP) — York University's first woman dean is determined to ensure a fair deal for part-time students.

Margaret Knitti, 51, who takes over as dean of Atkinson College next year, says that at other universities in the past, part-time students have tended to be shunted off on to the periphery of the academic world.

Atkinson College, set up 13 years ago to make part-time students the central concern of the college, holds all its courses at night.

Prof. Knitti, currently chairman of the college's history department, says small classes and personal contact between teachers and students are crucial to ensuring that standards of academic excellence expected of full-time students also apply to part-time students.

Part-time enrolment at Ontario universities has continued to climb even though full-time undergraduate enrolment has declined.

Course of Action

Electronic Devices Used To Police Vancouver Seas

WEST VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — From the top floor of a 12-storey building, Vancouver's new marine traffic controller covers a deep, watery beat.

Captain David Johns, 32, a former RCMP constable, will police British Columbia's coastal waters by means of a huge bank of electronic hardware. The tower also provides an all-round view of harbor approaches and is the nucleus of a $7.5-million control system for West Coast shipping.

The Vancouver Vessel Management Centre is a new arm of the ministry of transport and takes over control from the national harbors board.

The roof of the centre bristles with VHF radio aerennae and a radar scanner. The equipment, packed ceiling-high in one of the rooms, makes the old signal station on the Lions Gate Bridge look like a leftover from the days of the windjammer.

High-resolution equipment, with a 15-mile range, fills half the room. The rest is packed with radio equipment, including seven VHF transmitters, each with a backup system.

Pilots who previously reported their course and speed to the bridge station now communicate with Vancouver Centre, the call-sign for the new system.

In addition, the centre monitors all VHF messages between vessels and records them in its tape bank.

"In the unlikely event of a collision there won't be any question as to who said what to whom, because we will have it all on tape," said Captain Johns.

By 1975 or 1976, when the station becomes fully operational, the centre will be manned by a 37-member staff.

Although the centre's control now is based on a voluntary reporting system, Captain Johns expects it will soon become mandatory.

He said the federal government hopes to sign a treaty establishing a composite system with the United States before setting up a mandatory system. In some waters, such as Haro Strait east of Victoria, vessels have to criss-cross between Canadian and U.S. waters.

"If we don't get an agreement, we'll introduce a mandatory system some time this year," he said.

When fully operational, the centre will institute an unprecedented system of traffic lanes, provide an information service through its VHF network and use radar to co-ordinate all routings.

The lane system will ease the pressure on pilots, who now complain about the absence of mandatory routes. The VHF system will eliminate guesswork because it will allow captains and pilots to know the movements of other vessels.

Trail Riding in Rockies Makes Interesting Holiday

CALGARY (CP) — If Howard Watkins' attitude is any indication, the annual trail rides organized by Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies provide an addictive summer experience.

"Once a trail rider, always a trail rider," said Mr. Watkins, who has been a member of the non-profit organization since 1946. He has chalked up enough miles in the saddle to wear the 2,500-mile button—and then some.

Mr. Watkins is trail master on the annual treks into the wilderness which so capture the hearts of some riders that they return year after year.

"We don't rush," he explained. "We take our time, stopping anywhere somebody wants to get off to take pictures or relax.

"The horses are all old hands at trail rides. They're surefooted, gentle and patient with the greenest of dudes.

"The scenery is spectacular, of course, and the wonderful feeling of being away from everything in the wilderness, where the air is clean and nobody's in a hurry, is a real tonic. You just leave all your worries behind."

Riders each year explore a different area of the Rockies called the palace and was invited for a visit.

The man and his party were taken on a tour of the palace and grounds and, among other displays, spotted the king's 50-mile Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies pin.

One of the advantages of the trail rides, Mr. Watkins said, is that people from all professions, all nationalities and all walks of life can meet and get to know each other without the trappings of a stratified society.

The scenery and wildlife are other attractions.

"This is big game country," Mr. Watkins said. "One year we were able to stalk bighorn sheep in 10ire and get close enough for some great pictures.

"We have experienced guides to look after our welfare—one to every 10 riders. We limit the number of riders to 35 and about half of these have very little, if any, riding experience. But by the end of the week, they're old hands."

Guests bring sleeping bags or bed rolls, warm clothing and toiletries.

"We've never had a serious accident on a ride, but we always have a doctor along."

Ready for the Ride

Trail riders gather on the edge of Calgary (background) for the start of a six-day ride into the wilderness organized by Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies. The riders, accompanied by guides, explore a different area of the Rockies each county each

Logging Aids Elk

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Planned harvesting of overmature timber may actually improve the habitat of the elk, not hinder it.

James Harper, chief of environmental management for the Oregon Wildlife Commission, says logging of overmature timber in narrow, it-regularly-contoured settings can improve the food supply available to elk.

"Strictly from the elk's standpoint, an overmature stand of timber is a biological desert as far as available forage is concerned.

"I cannot think of any area in which I've ever worked where a well-planned logging program has been to the detriment of an elk herd. Man now is doing what nature used to do with forest fires—we're taking off some of the standing timber with logging and opening up elk range."

Mr. Harper, author of more than a dozen publications on Roosevelt elk, recently spent a week on Vancouver Island studying Roosevelt elk herds and ranges at the invitation of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.

He explained in an interview that while overmature timber provides cover for Roosevelt elk, the high canopy of trees inhibits growth of many shrubs and ground plants they use for forage. The available forage material is usually nutrient-poor because of a lack of sunlight and other factors.

He said that in a logged-off area, shrubs, grasses and other types of highly nutritional vegetation follow in the wake of harvesting, especially if the slash has been burned off.

However, the elk still require some mature timber or green as cover. The ideal blend, he said, is open forage range bordered by mature timber or well-established second-growth forest.

Mr. Harper, 41, who has studied the animals for eight years in Oregon, California and Alaska, said the best way to cut timber for elk is in long, narrow bands with irregularly shaped edges. Elk prefer to browse within 200 yards of tree cover and normally won't move deep into a clearcut area.

The Oregon biologist said that before any responsible decisions are reached concerning elk herds and other wildlife, a comprehensive survey and inventory of all species and wildlife habitat on Vancouver Island is needed.

Voters' List Shrinks in Belleville

Belleville's population may have declined slightly in the past year.

That's the indication from enumeration of voters for the July 8 federal election.

Reg Dunham, returning officer for Hastings riding, reports enumerators listed 23,009 Bellevillians eligible to vote. This compares with 23,778 enumerated for the October, 1972 national election — a drop of 3 per cent.

There also has been a decrease in neighboring Thurlow township.

Invariably some voters are missed when enumerators make their week-long canvass and most names undoubtedly will be added to the 1974 list.

Nonetheless, Mr. Dunham says he is surprised at the drop. In what seemed to be a time of urban expansion he expected a fair-sized increase in voters.

"It's hard to believe. I thought the whole riding might be up maybe 3,000 a year and a half," he said Wednesday.

Instead, the city voting population, is down while the total rural vote remains the same at about 18,000.

At first, said the returning officer, he was concerned about the effectiveness of the enumeration carried out last week.

Usually, voters who have been missed begin calling his office almost immediately. But so far, he had had only about 15 phone calls from voters who missed enumeration.

And with the rural canvass showing little change from the previous enumeration, he is now inclined to accept the fact there are fewer voters in the city.

Nonetheless, he is anxious that anyone not enumerated contact his office immediately at 962-6966. A revising agent will then be sent to register unrecorded voters.

Enumerators who have canvassed a household and registered voters leave a chit — officially known as Form 2 — Anyone without such a document should check with the returning officer. Lists of all voters recorded have been prepared by enumerators and hung on tree or pole in the city's 201 polling divisions. These can also be checked by voters.

In rural areas and villages only small population shifts were recorded.

These, with 1973 figures in brackets, included: Bancroft, 1,440 (1,449); Deseronto 1,126 (1,066); Tweed 1,136 (1,097); Madoc 883 (1,070); Marmora 875 (853).

Rural enumerators are responsible for revising lists in their own districts. Deadline

Time To Check

Belleviillian checks one of the lists of enumerated federal election voters now posted around city. Electors' officials are anxious all eligible voters ensure they've been enumerated, after registrations showed unexpected decline.

Land Acquisition Methods Changed

Property acquisition procedures of Ontario Hydro have been changed in response to public opinion, Neil McIlmurray, property secretary director, said in giving evidence before the Solandt Commission hearing here Wednesday.

The changes are considered improvements, he said, in explaining practices Hydro will follow in acquiring land for location of a 500,000 volt transmission line right-of-way from the Lennox Generating Station to an Oshawa area transformer station.

The 425-foot right-of-way will extend approximately 110 miles along the north shore of Lake Ontario.

Expropriation procedures, outlined in provincial Expropriations Act, will apply to all owners on a right-of-way, as yet to be finally selected. This does not preclude negotiated settlements.

Landowners can either sell their land outright or grant Hydro an easement. Previously, said Mr. McMurtrie, Hydro announced it would buy all right-of-way.

Property owners will receive compensation for any impact position of lines over their lands, or lower location has on property and its use.

Payment for any easement will be either in a lump sum or by annual payments.

This will be based on 75 per cent of the land's market value. An additional sum, based on a figure representing 25 per cent of an acre's market value, will be paid for each tower on a property. For each additional tower, a farmer will receive another five per cent.

Should a farmer sell the land outright, he has the option to lease it back at $1 an acre a year, plus taxes.

Annual payments for an easement would amount to the chartered bank prime interest rate plus ½-per cent applied against the lump sum value of the lands used by Hydro.

Mr. McMurtrie said the land will be valued for its use as farmed land, not for its possible future value as development land for housing.

Hobby farms or land used for a second residence would be valued similarly.

Artillery Group Growing

Membership in the newly formed Quinte Artillery Association is growing. After five months of operation the association now has about 60 members.

W. R. (Doc) Dafoe has been appointed special events chairman to arrange association meeting activities. After the last meeting, the majority participated in a dart tournament, with nine gunners winning a share in an Olympic lottery ticket. Gnr. A. J. Mulherin from Oakville was captain of the winning dart team and high scorer for the evening.

The constitution of the association calls for the annual commemoration of the feast of St. Barbara, patron saint of artillerymen. The occasion will be observed with a banquet and dance at the AN and AF Dec. 6.

The Solandt Commission moves into its second day of what is expected to be a three-day hearing today with the completion of Ontario Hydro's presentation of briefs outlining the 500,000 volt bulk power transmission line between Lennox Generating Station and Oshawa.

The provincially appointed watchdog of Hydro heard evidence Wednesday from various Hydro specialists as well as from consulting firm Associates Inc., a Jackson, Michigan, environmental consulting firm.

All Hydro witnesses were cross-examined by members of the 25-strong audience.

Hydro witnesses outlined the utility's proposed procedure in its acquisition of land, and construction practices. The need for the transmission line and the exact location of the preferred Hydro corridor was drawn, as was the environmental reasoning used to locate that route.

Roughly, the 500 kV line travels westward from the Lennox Generating Station at Bath 100 miles parallel to Lake Ontario to end at an Oshawa area transformer station.

In the Bay of Quinte area, the line jogs through Tyendinaga township's third concession. In Thurlow it proceeds through the fourth concession, crossing Highway 37 just south of Honeywell Corners before moving southwest across the Moira River.

Through Sidney, the line parallels the TransCanada Pipeline for approximately five miles, then dips into the third concession before crossing the Trent River north of Glen Miller.

The current hearings were called to gather public response to Hydro's preferred route, made public in April.

Once hearings conclude, the Solandt Commission will review all information in its hands and recommend a route to the Ontario cabinet for approval.

When the actual construction is to begin is not yet known. Hydro must still survey a corridor, once approved, enter negotiations for land acquisitions and actually build the line.

Construction time was estimated Wednesday at 18 months to two years.

During the first day of hearings yesterday, much evidence was not completely given. Today, it is expected a security specialist will outline the utility's procedures for handling classified data.

Oral presentations of preliminary briefs will be replaced before the commission by the townships of Tyendinaga, Thurlow and Sidney, the Quinte Planning Board, Hastings County and the Northumberland and Ontario Federations of Agriculture.

Presentations by individuals will be heard on the final day of hearings Friday.

Wednesday, only five audience members had examined Hydro witnesses.

Southerly Route Provokes Protest

Criticism was leveled jointly at Ontario Hydro and its environmental consulting firm, Commonwealth Associates, for their selection of the most southerly of three corridors for a 500,000 volt Lennox-Oshawa transmission line.

Both the utility and the consultant testified before the Solandt Commission hearing called at the Four Seasons Hotel here Wednesday. The hearing continues today and Friday.

Sidney farmer William Langstaff criticized Hydro for not placing the line further north in Tyendinaga Sidney and Thurlow townships.

Land further south is more productive, he said. More beef units are received where the right-of-way is now situated than further north and the solar heat is available for crops.

A Thurlow farmer, Borden Forsythe, claimed a more northerly route would not take out of use more productive soils in the area.

Hees Named Candidate

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — It came as no surprise Wednesday night when George Hees was uncontested for nomination His candidate for the Progressive Conservative party in Prince Edward — Hastings.

As political conventions go, it was a quiet affair with the hoopla, banting and billboards almost conspicuous in their absence.

The nominating convention became a simple vote of confidence in Mr. Hees, greeted with a standing ovation as he entered Trenton High School's auditorium.

Mr. Hees said one of the most interesting and satisfying points in the election race was the hard fought contests, not only with the Liberals but among Canada's Conservatives looking for local riding nomination.

"Stanfield and the Conservative Party are getting more support in the minds of Canadians," he told the house packed with the cream of the local Conservative Association.

Prior to the nomination, Mr. Hees replied there is no "safe seat" when asked if it was a factor that his riding seemed to be so thoroughly in support of the Conservative party. At the last election 18 months ago, Mr. Hees won by 10,000.

Drawing guffaws and ovations, Mr. Hees described the prime minister as a "dielectic millionaire who's charisma will not win him another election".

"The Liberals are making leadership the election issue.

"We are very, damn glad to accept the leadership challenge by the election issue because we've got the guy who can lick you," said Mr. Hees.

"He's got no wisecracks, he's not a swinger but he's a hell of a lot better leader than Trudeau will ever be."

Touching on inflation — the major plank in the Tory platform, Mr. Hees outlined one factor as the "tremendous increase in purchasing power".

"Consumers are bidding against each other on commodities they believe will cost more next year," he said.

Mr. Hees said a 90-day freeze was the answer and that a "series of boards would be set up to provide flexibility in the freeze."

He said the control would have to be a complete one and that government couldn't control steel and not control copper. Three per cent cost of living increases would be acceptable, he said.

"Without the controls, prices will go higher.

"Inflation will be stopped by a government that has the guts to do it," said Mr. Hees.

Farmers Fear Land Damage

Actual construction practices by Ontario Hydro in building the 500,000 volt Lennox Oshawa transmission line encountered the heaviest flak during the first day of Solandt Commission hearings here Wednesday.

Two main concerns emerged in cross-examination of Ontario Hydro's lone manager Douglas Johnson.

Of main concern to farmer representatives was that actual construction of steel towers and stringing of line interfere as little as possible with farm operation.

Land, once used by Hydro either in tower location or in transporting steel and heavy equipment, should be left in as close to its original state as possible, it was felt.

Mr. Johnson told the hearing Hydro crews would disrupt land as little as possible. Compensation would be negotiated with an individual farmer if damage does occur.

In response to questioning by Toronto lawyer Jane Pepino, Hydro agreed that any disputes over damage would be arbitrated.

Hydro work crews would bring heavy equipment into a tower site over existing roads. A rule of thumb generally used, said Mr. Johnson, was that 8-10 deliveries were made to year an approximate 54 tons of concrete for a tower base. Steel deliveries, on large flat-bed trailers would take one or two trips over several days. Erection of the tower would take another couple of days.

In all, approximately two to three weeks would see Hydro crews off a farmer's land and a tower complete.

In response to a question by William Langstaff, a Sidney township farmer, Mr. Johnson said discussions with farm operation could not be minimized by extensive use of helicopters.

Mr. Langstaff is chairman of a township committee formed to present a brief before the Solandt Commission.

Both Mr. Langstaff and Jean May Hosking are Federation of Agriculture president, were concerned that Hydro not disturb topsoil on agriculturally productive lands. Both worried that subsoil will be brought to the surface and the land would need years to recover completely.

Farmers will want as much control as possible on location of transmission towers on their land, the hearing was told.

Mr. Johnson said tower location is negotiated at the time of property expropriation. Discussions between Hydro and groups of neighboring farmers will also be undertaken.

Southerly Route Provokes Protest

Both spoke following an afternoon presentation of Commonwealth Associates Inc., a Jackson, Michigan, firm.

A Toronto lawyer, Jane Pepino, claimed Hydro's preferred route was not consistently located along existing right-of-ways along the entire 110-miles long preferred corridor.

She claimed Hydro had not followed the provincial policy of placing several similar or different utilities in a single corridor.

The provincial policy was followed as far as the Trent River, but further west, the utility had generally been put aside, she claimed.

Dundas Street House Robbed

Yesterday Belleville police discovered a break-in at a home at 563 Dundas Street East that had netted thieves approximately $300 worth of household goods.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that thieves had broken into the home sometime between May 19 and May 29 and stole a soldering gun, a tar sealer, a fishing pole and a rod and reel.

Nine windows and a panel to a rear door were broken also.

Damage to the building was estimated at $50.

PCs Plot Strategy

Quinte's jam-packed Trenton High School auditorium Miss Flora MacDonald (PC, Kingston and the Islands) chats with Prince Edward-Hastings PC president Doug Whitley and member of the last house George Hees. Both politicians worked on inflation — the main plank of the Tory platform — during their addresses to the 800-strong crowd.

Price and Wage Freeze Major Platform Plank

TRENTON — Flora MacDonald, former Conservative MP for Kingston and the Islands, said Wednesday night, only her party had the "intestinal fortitude" to enact a Canadian price and wage freeze that would curtail the country's inflationary trend.

The fiery native of Nova Scotia told the hierarchy of the Prince Edward Hastings Progressive Conservative Association, "we would establish profit margins though not so stringently as to discourage capital investment.

Referring to wage controls, she said the Conservatives had "no intention of allowing inequities to be perpetuated. The wage controls would be flexible allowing those who have fallen behind to catch up."

If the party is right, inflation may be all in Canadians' heads, she said.

Miss MacDonald said "a major factor in inflation is the widespread expectation of escalating prices.

"If people think prices are going to go up, they will go up."

She said her party's two objectives to battle inflation would be break the inflationary expectations and to ensure price changes be related to conditions in the market.

Rising prices, she said, could be justified provided the costs of imported materials or labor necessitated increased consumer prices to offset these two factors.

"We'll put a control on excess profit," she said.

"The 90-day freeze is the type of dramatic measure to shock the country out of its inflationary psychology," said Mrs. MacDonald.

She said the 90 days would give Ottawa a chance to get the proper legislation on the books and the necessary bureaucracy working to handle the task of monitoring price and wage variations.

This does not mean we are hiring more people, she said. "There are civil servants in Ottawa (a number) that can already handle the task.

"The controls can be made to work with courage and determination."

According to Miss MacDonald federal government spending is the largest, single contributing factor to inflation today."

She pointed out there has been a 22 per cent increase in spending over the last year and that looking for dollars had spent as much in the last six years ($120 billion) as had every other government in the previous 190 year combined.

When the Prices Review Board was set up it was given a $400,000 budget. This year the budget is $2 million, representing a 500 per cent increase. And that's all Beryl Plumtre and her board have done for inflation," said Miss MacDinald.

Miss MacDonald was not without recriminations for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. She said he and his government "prize power more than the truth and that the Liberals have to be thrown out with the voters."

"They don't consider inflation seriously and they've been looking for solutions.

"All Trudeau is doing is offering negative criticisms of Mr. Stanfield's positive proposals," to come to grips with inflation, said Miss MacDonald.

Miss MacDonald is remembered as the Opposition's shadow cabinet as government critic of Northern and Indian Affairs. She recently won reconmination from her home riding.

Two Hurt In Collision

Two Belleville residents were treated for minor injuries at Belleville General Hospital and released last night, following a car-truck collision at the intersection of Highway 14 and County Road 9.

PC Mike Doucette of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, reports that William Grimson, 78 Village Dr., and Daisy Adamson, 8 Ernest Cr., were injured when the car they were travelling in collided with a dump truck driven by Robert Mullen, of Hastings, around 4:45 p.m.

The McMillan truck was north bound on Highway 14 and was attempting to make a turn to go west on County Road 5 when it collided with the Grimson car which was southbound on Highway 14.

Kendall Heads Potato Club

Clare Kendall has been named the new president of the South Hastings Potato Club. Vice-president is Neal Harder, secretary Dianne Jarrel and news reporter Vicki Holmes.

The new slate of officers was named at a combined meeting with the field crop club held at the Stirling agricultural office board room.

KKK at Museum?

The Ku Klux Klan and Sir John A. Macdonald shared the limelight last night at the monthly meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society. Lenny Williamson and Harry Mulhall, two area journalists who have knowledge of the Quinte area's history, entertained approximately 50 local history buffs with talks on the Ku Klux Klan in the Belleville area and the John A. Macdonald political picnic in Belleville in 1878. Mrs. Williamson added a special theatrical touch to her talk by entering robed in an authentic KKK mask and hood.

Flett a Leaf

Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday they have acquired right-winger Bill Flett from the Stanley Cup champions, Philadelphia Flyers. Leafs gave up forward Randy Thornton and defenceman Dave Furtier. The deal was made Monday but could not be announced until Flett, holidaying in Puerto Rico, was notified.

Age Clarification

WHA Expects Some Answers

TORONTO (CP) — Dennis Murphy, president of the World Hockey Association, was to meet with Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) officials today to determine whether the WHA will draft 17-year-olds at the amateur draft Friday.

Murphy said the WHA and the National Hockey League had similar agreements with the CAHA that no junior hockey player under the age of 18 would be drafted.

He said it was the WHA's understanding that any player 18 as of Dec. 31, 1973, would be eligible for drafting, and all players who turn 18 during 1974 would not be eligible.

Murphy said the league wants to "sit down" with CAHA officials to find out what their agreement is with the organization, and to determine if the WHA was violating their agreement with the CAHA by drafting players who were 17 years old at the end of last year.

"We've had a good relationship with the CAHA, and I'd like to see it continue," Murphy said.

Bill Hunter, vice-president and general manager of Edmonton Oilers of the WHA, said there are many "excellent players" who will become available for the league that it can draft 17-year-old players.

If the CAHA rules that the WHA was not violating the rule by drafting the 17-year-olds, "then you can rest assured that we'll be doing the same," Hunter said.

Before the league begins its expansion draft today, general managers and directors will meet to discuss possible rule changes for the 1974-75 season.

Murphy said one of the items on the rules committee agenda will be elimination of the centre red line to "speed up the play."

The expansion draft is being conducted to stock two new clubs scheduled to begin play this fall—Phoenix Roadrunners and Indianapolis Racers.

Each of the 12 existing WHA teams was permitted to protect two goaltenders and 14 other players. Protection lists were frozen May 15, and Phoenix and Indianapolis team officials were given a list of the available players for drafting early Wednesday morning.

Cincinnati Stingers, who will not take part in league play until the 1975-76 season, protected only 11 players, and Houston Aeros kept 13 on their protection list.

Cincinnati will participate in Friday's amateur draft, and will choose third behind Phoenix and Indianapolis.

London Application Awaiting Decision

EDMONTON (CP) — Eastern Football Conference owners met Wednesday to discuss details of the application by a London, Ont., group for a franchise in the Canadian Football League.

After about four hours they had not reached any conclusions except if they had they weren't talking about them publicly.

Western Conference owners met and said later they were generally in favor of the application.

A meeting of the executive committee today will discuss—and perhaps vote on—the application. To be admitted the EFC must be unanimously in favor of expansion to five teams from four while three of the five WFC teams must vote in favor.

Dr. Wes Muncie, WFC president, said his group is "favorable in all for several reasons."

Muncie, president of British Columbia Lions, said the addition of London would "make for easier standardization of procedures."

While he was obviously in favor of admitting London—and he has a vote—Frank Gibson of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, president of the EFC, didn't seem as optimistic.

NOT FIRM

"We're not taking a firm position as a conference," he told a news conference after their meeting, which lasted more than two hours longer than the WFC meeting.

"We didn't see the proposal of the London group until we got here a couple of days ago. There are many details to be looked at. I don't know that we'll make a decision on the application at this meeting."

Developer Bob Harris, heading the London group, is carrying around a certified cheque for $25,000 in his wallet. He said he would like to receive approval in principal from the meetings, which wind up Friday.

Marathon Draft No Secret

MONTREAL (CP) — This year's National Hockey League secret amateur draft is turning into a marathon session.

A league spokesman announced Wednesday night that eight rounds of drafting had been completed by the 18 NHL clubs and 143 players had been selected in two days. The drafting was scheduled to resume today at 10 a.m. EDT.

Last season, 168 players were chosen in a six-hour session. The difference between 1973 and 1974 is that last year's draft was open and conducted in a Montreal hotel room while this year's is supposed to be a confidential draft by telephone.

"One of the things they (the teams) don't have an advantage of, they don't know who has been selected by the other clubs until it's their turn," Brian O'Neill, executive director of the league said Wednesday.

"At that time, I've been given them the 18 names that have been selected since I last spoke to them.

"So then they take those names and it takes a little longer to examine where they stand. When they had the open room type of draft, they knew as they went along."

The NHL had hoped to gain an edge in signing the top amateur backs by switching to the closed-door format. It was hoped the rival World Hockey Association, which holds its official amateur draft Friday, would be kept in the dark as to what players had been selected by the NHL teams.

But so far, with the first-round selections announced almost as quickly as they were chosen, the NHL's ploy has failed.

"It's just incredible . . . we were reading the names in the newspapers and hearing them on the radio as we were still drafting," O'Neill said.

"The clubs aren't even supposed to exchange information but it's quite clear they're doing it. Of course, they're most affected (by the picks that have to pay them (the players)."

"Agents would have a hard time piecing it all together. They would know a man has been selected and they would know by which club, but they would have a hell of a time trying to put it all together, because we don't even tell the clubs themselves who has chosen what."

Some clubs announced their top draft choices, while others refused. With almost every player selected in the top two rounds represented by an agent or lawyer, it did not take long for unofficial lists to take form and information to be exchanged.

Washington Capitals, who had first choice in the opening round, selected Greg Joly from Regina Pats. Three hours after Joly had been selected, the Caps' hails held a news conference to announce the fact.

HUNGARY IN UPSET

SZEKESFEHERVAR, Hungary (CP) — Hungary upset World Cup contender Yugoslavia 3-2 Wednesday in an exhibition soccer game played before 15,000 at Videoton Stadium. The Hungarians bounced back from a 0-2 halftime deficit against the Yugoslav team preparing for next month's World Cup soccer tournament.

Fight Night In A.L.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California's baseball players were no Angels Wednesday night.

Outfielder Bobby Valentine started a fight that ignited a melee with Milwaukee pitchers.

Valentine won the battle but the Angels eventually lost the belligerame, 7-3, when George Scott delivered the final blow with his bat in the ninth inning.

In the other American League games, Texas Rangers blanked Cleveland Indians 3-0, Baltimore Orioles beat Kansas City Royals 10-3, Minnesota Twins nipped Boston Red Sox 5-4 in 13 innings, and Oakland A's defeated Detroit Tigers 4-1. Chicago and New York were rained out.

Jackie Brown, making only his second start of the season, pitched a three-hitter to lead Texas over Cleveland in another baseball game spiced with a brawl.

The Rangers, meanwhile, managed seven hits off Cleveland's Fritz Peterson, 3-3, including Jim Sundberg's run-scoring single in the second inning. The Rangers chased Peterson in the seventh inning with a two-run uprising.

The brawl in the game started when Texas' Lenny Randle laid down a bunt and threw an elbow at Cleveland pitcher Milt Wilcox along the first base line. Cleveland first baseman John Ellis tackled Randle and a fight ensued between the teams as both benches emptied. Texas manager Billy Martin then came into the fray and was knocked on the seat of his pants before he and order was restored.

BREAK SLUMP

Baltimore jumped on Steve Busby for four runs in the first inning and exploded for six more in the seventh, breaking a four-game losing streak by beating Kansas City.

Mike Cuellar, 6-3, scattered 10 hits for his sixth straight complete game victory, ending the Royals' five-game winning streak.

Red Carew scored from third on Diego Segui's one-out balk in the 13th inning, giving Minnesota its victory over Boston.

Carew had reached first on a force-out bouncer and moved to third on Larry Hisle's single before Segui balked home the Twins' winning run.

Sal Bando rapped three singles and drove in two runs as leading Oakland over Detroit.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on a double by Ron Cash and a single by Aurerelio Rodriguez.

Rookie John Summers singled home a run in the Oakland half of the first to tie the score, Bando singled home a run in a two-run third for Oakland and knocked in another with a base hit in the fifth.

Expos Fold Up In 9th Inning

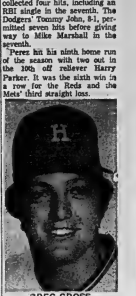
MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Watson's tie-breaking two-run single with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning gave the Houston Astros a 5-3 triumph over the Montreal Expos Wednesday night.

Tom Walker, the third Montreal pitcher, walked Greg Gross with two out in the ninth and Roger Metzger singled him to second. A walk to Cesar Cedeno loaded the bases and Watson followed with a single to center.

It was Houston's third consecutive victory and fifth in the last six games. The setback prevented the Expos from moving into first place in the National League's East Division. Montreal took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning against Claude Osteen when Ken Singleton tripled home Willie Davis and scored on a single by Bob Bailey.

Houston tied the game against Ernie McAnally in the fifth. Doug Rader singled with one out and, after Tommy Helms popped out, Osteen blooped a single to centre. Gross scored both runners with a triple down the left field line that just eluded the lunging Bailey.

Osteen put the Astros ahead 3-2 with a run-scoring double in the seventh but the Expos tied it in the bottom of the inning on Jim Cox' RBI single.



Bob Robertson, Pittsburgh's slump-ridden first baseman, helped destroy San Diego Padres Wednesday night by driving in five runs with two two-run homers and a single in the Pirates' 13-3 baseball victory.

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers turned back St. Louis Cardinals 5-2, Cincinnati Reds edged New York Mets 3-2 on Tony Perez' 10th-inning homer, Atlanta Braves nipped Philadelphia Phillies 1-0 in 11 innings, and San Francisco Giants defeated Chicago Cubs 3-4.

Robertson's slugging paced a 14-hit attack that backed the pitching of Jerry Reuss who gave up five hits, two of them homers by Nate Colbert and Clarence Gaston.

Reuss Cry bruised Los Angles from behind with a three-run homer off Bob Gibson in the fifth inning and Bill Russell collected four hits, including an RBI single in the seventh. The Dodgers' Tommy John, 8-1, permitted seven hits before giving way to Mike Marshall in the seventh.

Perez hit his ninth home run of the season with two out in the 10th off reliever Harry Parker. It was the sixth win in a row for the Reds and the Mets' third straight loss.

GREG GROSS

New York pulled into a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning on successive home runs by Cleon Jones and John Milner off Don Gullett. Parker came on in the 10th after starter Jon Matlack left for a pinch hitter.

Atlantic pinch hitter Vic Correll singled home Ralph Garr from second base in the 11th inning against Steve Carlton.

Garr opened the inning with a double, only the fifth hit off Carlton, and Darrell Evans popped out attempting to bunt. However, Dusty Baker was purposely passed and Correll drilled a single to left-centre, driving in his first run of the season.

The Giants scored four times in the first inning on Garry Thomasson's two-run double and Dave Rader's two-run single, but needed Bobby Bonds' homer in the seventh to beat Chicago. Reliever Randy Moffitt pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the ninth by getting Jerry Morales and Carmen Fanzone on force plays at the plate and retiring Vic Harris on a pop foul.

Butkrus Suing Bears

CHICAGO (AP) — Middle linebacker Dick Butkus sued Chicago Bears for $1.6 million in damages Wednesday, charging the National Football League club with breach of a five-year contract.

The circuit court suit charged that the Bear management did not provide him with medical-hospital care promised in a contract he signed last July 5.

It also said the Bears refused to play Butkus, an all-time NFL star at his position, this year and for the remaining years in the contract.

Butkus said in the suit that he was severely injured in a game in November and that orthopedic surgeons and the team physician examined his injured knee and said he was unable to perform the services required of him by the contract.

The suit said doctors told Butkus he "may well never again be in the necessary physical condition to play professional football."

Broadloom Wins

BYBF Blanks Robert Lambert

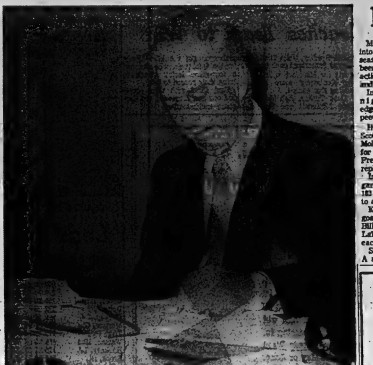
It was run scoring time last night in the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League, with 42 base runners making it all the way around in two games at the Alemite

In the first game, BYBF whitewashed Robert Lambert Construction 15-0 while Belleville Brookloom outslugged Simpson-Sears, 23-8.

Sue Morton fired a one-hitter on the Yorktown mound, striking out 13 and walking none.

Suzanne Robert and Janice Lucas shared the loss on the Lambert rubber, giving up 11 hits. They struck out five and walked nine.

Sheila Smith led the way at the plate for the winners, with a home run and single, with Joyce McFarland collecting a double and single. Marj Reid and Donna Preston each had two base hits.



Judy Scanlan had the only hit off Morton.

Belleville Broadloom outhit Sears 21-6 in taking the win. Maryanne Ellis led the way with two home runs and three singles. Heaten Smith had a home run, double and two single, while Norma Fuller collecting a triple, double, and single.

Chris Paquet had a triple in a leading cause for Simpsons, with Diane Genereaux doubling. Other hits, all singles, went to Nancy Pound, Jeanne Garvin, Brenda Wood, and Bernice Ryan.

Maryanne Sills picked up the win, striking out 10 while issuing five free passes. Joanne Garvin absorbed the loss, striking out five and walking one.

The winner of the Belleville Broadloom 50-30 draw was announced last night for the month of May. The winner of $150 is Sheila Genereaux of 20 Grier Street.

He'll Have Added Responsibility

Carr-Braint Heads CWF

By ALAN TEBWORTH
Sports Staff

With many years of weightlifting experience under his belt, both as a competitor and coach, Ken Carr-Braint knows the sport.

He has been one of Canada's top authorities on the sport for many years, coaching several National teams in International competitions, including the Olympic Games, Pan-Am Games, Commonwealth Games and many World Championships, as well as running his own Apollo Barbell Club here in Belleville.

And all this time, paying his way from his own funds. Now, he has taken on an even bigger job in being elected to the presidency of the Canadian Weightlifting Federation.

Not only is that job itself a demanding one, co-ordinating weightlifting between provinces across Canada, but the task is even more time consuming for the term Carr-Braint will serve.

The reason — the 1976 Olympic Games, which will be held in Montreal. Carr-Braint succeeds former president Philip St. Cyr of Montreal and has the responsibility of running the weightlifting competitions at the Games.

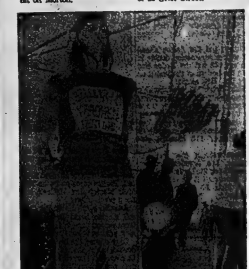
The regular two year term of office for the president was lengthened for this time around to two years and six months, specifically for the Olympics.

Carr-Braint observes "it's no light undertaking, and I certainly thought twice about taking the position". He was elected at the Annual Meeting of the Federation in Vancouver.

He combined a holiday with the convention, driving out and back.

Also held in conjunction with the meeting were the Canadian Championships, in which a pair of Belleville lifters were entered.

Ron Hayes in the feather-weight section, and Paul Barnett, in the light-heyweight division were the Quinte Area representatives.



Hayes came up third best in Canada in his division, combining lifts of 180 pounds in the snatch and 248 pounds in the clean and jerk for a 428 total.

The winner, Yves Carnaghan of Quebec City, a silver medallist for Canada in the Commonwealth Games last December at Christchurch. New Zealand, had a 500 pound total on lifts of 220 and 280 respectively in the snatch and clean and jerk.

Barrett fared well also, placing fourth in Canada with a total of 383 in his light heavyweight section. His separate lifts were 26 in the snatch and 325 in the clean and jerk.

The winner, Chris Dariotis of Vancouver, had lifts of 286 and 358 for a 644 total.

Gary Walt, also fo the Apollo Barbell Club of Belleville was to have been lifting as he had qualified for the Commonwealth Games Trials. However, an injury to his knee which forced him out of the Commonwealth Games also forced him to go out the Canadian finals.

Sue Morton — One-hitter

Post Office Undefeated

The Post Office remained undefeated in Belleville Industrial Softball League play last night, tying CNR 3-3 to pick up their ninth point out of 10 in play so far in the young season.

In other games, the Quinte Hotel Leaders bombed Constellation 14-3, while the Independents whitewashed Mead's 9-0.

Norm Lockhart was once again the big gun for the Posties, firing five hit ball on the mound. He walked but two and fanned five, bringing his total to 41 in five games this season.

Wayne Casselman was equally as efficient on the CNR rubber, allowing only five hits, striking out seven and issuing three free passes.

Lockhart helped his own cause at the plate, cranking a four bagger to lead the Posties in hitting. The other hits, all singles, went to Dale Campbell, George Johnson, Gord St. Louis and Jim Burke.

Robbie McMurter, Jerry Hill, Bob Wannamaker, Jim Murray and Perry Soule each had a single for the Trailmen.

The Leaders pounded out 17 hits in taking the victory from Constellation, with winning pitcher Mark Sheridan allowing only two.

Sheridan led the winners with a home run, double and single, with Norm Tellock doubling twice and adding a single. Mike Tereschuk had a triple and base hit in his total, with Vic Corbeil hitting for a double and single.

John Maloney, Bob Wilkes, and Larry Perras each had a pair of singles, with Bob Strob adding a base hit to round out the attack.

Mike Callaghan and John Thompson were the only Constellation hitters to reach Sheridan for hits.

Sheridan set 16 men down on strikes while walking a pair. Jim Thompson took the loss, walking two and not recording a strikeout.

Ten errors is the Independent's — Mead's game made for a sloppy contest with the winning team recording six of the miscues.

Jim Northey and Earl Colton shared the victory, giving up seven hits. They walked three and fanned the same total.

Larry Waite started on the Mead's rubber, going four innings, giving up six runs on 11 hits before being pulled from the game. He walked one and failed to strike out a batter.

Harold Wilkinson came on in relief of Waite, allowing three runs on two hits. He walked a pair and fanned nine.

Gerge Foote had a home run and single to pace in collecting a triple and single. Earl Colton had a double, with Paul Trumpour and Dave Steiy adding two hits each. Bob Dafoe and Northey each had one hit apiece.

Blaine Young and Jim Sopha had the only extra base hits for Mead's, both doubles. Tim O'Connell had a pair of safeties for the losers, with Rick May rounding out the plate work with a base hit.

Lacrosse Teams in Action

Minor Lacrosse has swung into high gear for yet another season, with six games having been played in house league action, three each on Tuesday and Wednesday night.

In a game played Tuesday night, Police Association edged Dairy Queen 4-2 in a peewee contest.

Hugh Northey, John Frantz, Scott Vincent, and Steve Molenat each tallied one goal for the Police, while Danny Prevost and Craig Saxby replied for Dairy Queen.

In the first of two midget games played, Union Local 183 and A and D Esso played to a 6-6 draw.

Kerry Reid fired a pair of goals to pace the Union, with Bill Donald, Pete Drake, John LeBarge, and Chris Morden each accounting for one.

Six players shared in the A and D scoring, with Roger Chapman, Wally Inwood, Brent Walmsley, Chris Rutledge, Terry Thompson, and John Smith each tallying a marker.

In the other Midget match, Picton defeated Trenton Rotary Kiwanis, by a 4-3 count. Joe Bouvette recorded the shutout in the Picton nutmen.

Kevin Whipple fired a pair of markers for the Prince Edward team, with Trevor Cleave and Don Sharpe adding the others.

In Wednesday night action, Quinte Mall topped Dairy Queen 7-1 in Novice League play. Richard Bone had the hat trick for the winners, with Darrell Skaits and Ken McCormick adding two goals each.

Sandy Gerrard scored the only goal for Dairy Queen.

Team No. 3 had little trouble in disposing of Bob's Sports girl's team, defeating them by a 16-0 margin.

Scott Riddell led six goals to lead the way, with Allen Hall and Danny Duffy each potting three. Gerry Healy had a pair, with Mike Celnar and Gerry Haggerty rounding out the score with one each.

Jeff Runciman fired six goals in leading his Tweeny-Food City team to an 11-6 win over Bud Gil Appliances. John Armstrong, Larry Inwood, John Belanger, Steve Vincent, and Tim Kelsey each scored one.

Doug Rainboth had the hat trick for the Applancemen, with Allen Hackett, Kevin Gow, and Mike Veney each bagging a single.

Green Cross have the right products for a perfect Lawn

Green Cross fertilizers are specially formulated to help make caring for your lawn a simple and rewarding task. Our fertilizers for instance have a light weight vermiculite base, so that a 22 lb. bag of Green Cross fertiliser will provide feeding for 5000 square feet of lawn. It would take 80 lbs of an ordinary heavy base fertiliser to cover the same area. Our vermiculite base does more than act as a base for other chemicals, it's a good for your lawn on it's own; in fact many gardeners use mercuilte as a straight soil conditioner.

All Green Cross lawn fertilizers contain a non-burning gradual-release nitrogen to start greening your lawn early, but with long lasting effect. Phosphorous and potash are also included to resist disease and stimulate vigorous growth and strong sturdy roots.

To determine how much fertilizer you need, multiply the length of your lot by the width and subtract roughly 1500 sq. ft. for the area occupied by your house.

Use Green Cross Products on your lawn, they are made by the lawn and garden experts.

Green Cross Lawn Green. One of the most effective fertilizers available for use on lawns. A complete lawn food with a balanced formula containing nitrogen, phosphorous and potash to promote a healthy green lawn. A 22 lb. bag covers 5000 sq. ft. Also available in 11 lb. size.

Green Cross Weed 'n Feed with KILLEX. This is the ultimate weed control product. It is a lawn food with all the ingredients to make your lawn green and healthy. The Killex will control those tough weeds such as chickweed, clover, dandelion, creeping charlie and many others. A 22 lb. bag covers 3000 sq. ft. Also available in 11 lb. size.

Green Cross Killer. Eliminates over 15 hard to control weeds including chickweed and clover as well as dandelions, plantains, etc.

Green Cross Weed-No-More. Kills dandelions, plantain and other broad-leaf lawn weeds.

Green Cross Killex-Aerosol. The ideal "spot weeder" for "touching up" the lawn.

Green Cross Ani and Grub Killer. An effective way to control ants, grubs and cutworms.

Everything He's Got

Giving It everything he's got, 17-year-old Vince Boutilier grimaces as he directs ball away from his goal during Bay of Quinte Soccer Association game Wednesday. Vince, a student at East Northumberland Secondary School, gets his first taste of action in goal. In spite of his determination, Brighton lost to Cooney's Haulage of Bayside, 3-2.

House League Softball Schedule in Full Swing

Stirling Sheet Metal downed Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate 17-13 in a peewee game played in the Belleville Minor Softball League Monday night. Mike Allan had a home run for the winners, who were pitched to the win by Tim Fobert.

Peter Doornbos had a pair of singles in a losing cause, with John Anderson adding a triple.

In Tuesday night pee wee action, Police Association downed Chase's Grocery 9-4. Bill Wallbridge had a home run and single to pace the winners, with Kirk Putnam adding a triple and double.

John Munkittrick fired the win, striking out six.

Daryl Brennan led the losers with a home run and triple, with Steve Lowry adding a four bagger and single. Ian McWilliams took the loss, fanning six.

Westgate Carpet whitewashed Dixie Lee 15-0 in a Wednesday game. Tim Pomfret had a grand slam home run and seven RBI's for the winners, with Kevin Ferrill contributing two triples and a single. Jamie Millar got the victory, allowing only five hits, whiffing eight.

Mike Miller took the loss on the Dixie Lee rubber, striking out 10 as well as being the top batter, with a pair of singles.

Stephen Licence put it to Pino's Texaco by a 35-5 margin with Dave McKinney tossing the win. He struck out six and allowed three walks.

Steve Moore led the way at the plate for the winners with a home run, four singles, and a double. Reg Hunt had a circuit clout and three base hits.

Bob Morton had three singles for the losers.

In action on the East Hill, William Belch and Son Construction edged Howard and Robert Printing 12-11. Angelo Lentini and Timmy Lott shared the win for Belch's.

Pitcher Rusty Downey had two home runs and a triple for the losers.

Belleville Plaza dumped O'Neil Stationery 11-2 in the other game played last night.

Traffic Jam at Top In BQSA Standings

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

Competition for the top rung in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association standings showed no signs of abating in Wednesday night league play.

Cooney's Haulage of Bayside gained a share of first place, with Belleville Golden Mile Optimist by edging Brighton 3-2 at Trenton. Golden Mile and Cooney's each has six points.

Plying at the Ontario School for the Deaf pitch in Belleville, Parsons Cleaners moved up to second place by blanking United in a battle of Belleville clubs. Parsons has five points.

At Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, the home team credited a two-way tie for third spot by shutting out Trenton Panelas 2-0. CFB and United each has four points.

The picture will change again Thursday tonight's action. Golden Mile has a good shot at sole possession of first place, meeting winless Warkworth. And Tony's, undefeated in its only two starts, will attempt to stay on Olympica' heels when the team visits Trenton for a match with Whitley Insurance.

Cooney's, with only a pair of ties to show for its efforts through the games last season, continued its impressive showing this time around by logging its third win in four starts.

Brighton did not go down without a struggle, in this duel between two clubs loaded with talented secondary school athletes.

Twice, the Brighton squad battled back from one-goal deficits to equalize but when Cooney's took the lead for the third time, late in the game, the visitors could not come up with the tying marker.

Corey Godee opened the scoring. The Cooney left winger found the mark with a hard drive from a difficult angle.

Fred Stewart put Brighton on even terms and it was 1-1 at the half.

Cooney's made persistence pay off as the team regained its one-goal advantage in the second half. Wayne Haggarty finally put the ball past Brighton's goalie Inez Boutilier after two or three Haulage players had a go at it and missed from close range.

Marcus Arris and Jerry Walkers teamed up on a well executed play to again put Brighton back on even terms. Arris delivered a perfect ball on a free kick. Walkers connected with a well-placed header.

It wasn't until late in the game that Cooney's took the lead for keeps. John Debison was he marksman, besing Boutilier after the goalie had made a fine save on Haggarty.

Boutilier, a 17-year-old East Northumberland Secondary School student, was making his first start in goal. He lacked experience but was not short on try.

The Parsons - United confrontation was a bruising contest. The losers lost David Hadley who was ejected from the game by referee Peter Crowie. Hadley was given the heave-ho for fighting.

After a scoreless first half, Ralph Kollars potted a pair and Tom Britton clicked for one to account for Parson's goals.

Goalie Rick Hurst notched his third shutout in four starts. He's allowed only one goal in league play.

Halfbacks Ron Ludolf, Phil McSherry and Bill Lucas backed Hurst's effort with some solid work of their own. The pick of the losers were defenders Steve Ormsby and Colin Barry.

CFB waited until the late going to pull out the win over Panelas. Fifteen minutes remained to play when centre forward Ron Burkowski clicked for the winner, cole Porter added the insurance tally 10 minutes later.

Panelas, still looking for its first win, carried the play in the first half but couldn't get the ball past CFB goalie Adrian Delyzer who came up with his usual steady game.

Successful Raceway Driver

Jack Harry - A Happy Trainer

By ALAN TESWORTH
Staff

Jack Harry would rather train horses than drive them, and with the results he has shown in the field, he may well get more work in that important part of the business than he does driving.

A heavy equipment operator with the Department of Transportation and Communication, he has lots of spare time to devote to his hobby. During the winter, he works all nights, allowing him to train horses during the day, while in the summer, he is available from about 4 p.m. on to work with the horses.

Among his triumphs with local horses is Presto Danny, now owned by Cam Wannamaker of W and B Stables of Prince Edward County.

A gelding sired by Hawthorne, an excellent producer in this area, Danny simply could not get started while with his previous owner. Harry bought the three-year-old, had him racing within a month and a half, and sold the horse to Wannamaker for a good price.

He has done the same with the two horses he owns, that is prepare them for the track.

Presto Demon, a four-year-old with only one race last year, when she broke stride will be qualified next Friday night.

The other, Tornado Hanover, a six-year-old gelding Harry bought from Joe Hogan of Kingston six weeks ago, will likewise be qualified in about two week's time.

Harry, 31, was born and raised on a farm, and has always been around and enjoyed being with horses. His early experience was gained with work horses, later moving on to riding horses. He moved into the area of training of the horses that race formally about three years back obtaining his driver's licence last year.

He earned his licence on Colvin's Doyle, the first horse he owned. He purchased Colvin's for his reputation as a sound, workable horse.

"Two or three others had driven Colvin's for their licence, so I did that as well," states Harry.

And although he is happiest training horses, driving is by no means left out entirely.

He drives regularly at Peterborough's Kawartha Downs and Kingston's Frontenac Downs, as well as the Belleville circuit.

Included in his regular drives are such well known names in preferred races in this area as Call Me Bill, Charley Mc and Dan Beverly.

On Call Me Bill, he has taken three out of five races for owner Bob Rochon, recording a mark this year of 2:05.4, at the Peterborough track.

Jack is itching for the day when he can make the big jump from a so-called 'regular' job to the lure of the horse racing business, but he says "it's now a big jump; it would take a lot of thinking".

Exercise Time

Jack Harry of Belleville walks his horse, Presto Demon, a four-year-old gelding, after a light workout last night at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway oval.

The 31-year-old Harry, who says he likes training horses more than driving them, plans to qualify his horse in next week's races.

Whole New Liberal Platform Promised

CAMPBELLTON, N.B. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday promised that a "whole new Liberal platform" will be introduced before the July 8 election to be centered on his whistle-stop campaign through Eastern Canada.

"We have all the things just ready," he told 1,000 persons who turned out to greet the train in Bathurst, N.B., and these proposals would be put before the Canadian people.

The prime minister, accompanied by wife Margaret and youngest child Sascha, wound up a day of campaigning through New Brunswick with an overnight stop here in preparation for the journey today to Montreal.

It was basically a quiet, easy day for Mr. Trudeau who left his DC-9 campaign jet in North Sydney, N.S., Monday in favor of an old-fashioned rail trek through the region.

Other than the promise made at Bathurst there was little new in his camaign rhetoric as he stopped at Amherst, N.S., Moncton, N.B., and other centres en route to this northern New Brunswick city.

The prime minister returned to his two favorite themes—the Progressive Conservative proposals for wage and price controls and the expense of fighting an election that the Liberals say is unnecessary.

The Conservative freeze was "a great hoax" that would create more problems than it solved. "Just remember this when you think of price and wage controls," he said. "Think about it when you get your own wages. Think about that."

Mr. Trudeau also leaned heavily on federal aid to the Atlantic region, citing industrial development, and measures to ensure eastern consumers are not charged more for petroleum products than other Canadians.

The region was now experiencing a net increase in migration of about 6,000 people a year instead of the traditional emigration to larger centres in Central Canada, he said.

Lewis Calls PM 'Awkward Pugilist'

TORONTO (CP) — The theme was familiar Wednesday night as David Lewis, federal New Democratic Party leader, won his personal nomination in York South.

The feeling acclaimed as NDP candidate in the Toronto-area riding, Mr. Lewis renewed his attack on the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives, whom he said has undergone a metamorphosis.

"In 1968 he was the bubbling swinger, then in 1972 he became a boring philosopher and now, in 1974, he's become an awkward pugilist."

The new, fighting Trudeau image confirms the belief of some people that the prime minister can be reckless and arrogant, he said.

"It didn't take long for Pierre Trudeau, the new politician, to revert to his old style, a style of arrogance and audacity. How the man could tell a Nova Scotia audience that the budget on which he was defeated was going to help Canadians living on pensions . . . and on middle and low incomes is simply unbelievable."

The style of arrogance and audacity" in the campaign for the July 8 election while a Conservative government would only hurt wage-earners.

His Wednesday night speech continued the double-pronged criticism of the Liberals and Conservatives, but he had special words for Mr. Trudeau

Turner Applauds Stanfield's Move

HALIFAX (CP) — Robert Stanfield was "hominated personally Wednesday night for the July 8 federal election after settling a party dispute in Moncton and reiterating a Progressive Conservative campaign promise to raise old age pensions for the needy.

The Conservative leader flew to his home city for a triumphant rally at Queen Elizabeth high school following an unscheduled stop in Moncton, N.B., where he said Charles Thomas will run as the party's official candidate.

He made the announcement after meeting with local party officials and confirming his earlier decision to reject Mayor Leonard C. Jones as a candidate.

In Ottawa, the Conservative leader was praised for his stand by Liberal Finance Minister John Turner.

"By this action, which took a great deal of courage, he has taken bilingualism out of this election," Mr. Turner said at his own nominating convention in Ottawa-Carleton.

Mr. Jones, an opponent of the party's bilingualism policy, won the nomination narrowly Monday night at a convention called by the local Conservative constituency association.

Facing reporters after the meeting, Mr. Stanfield said he has a responsibility to "do all within my power" to give leadership that will foster unity and harmony in the country.

"I'm fully prepared, if necessary, to risk my leadership and the prospects for electoral success on this issue."

At his overflow rally here, he told a cheering audience a Conservative government would raise old age payments for the most needy to $202 a month.

Bell Comes Under Fire For Internal Financing

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada was accused Wednesday of asking users to pay for expansion programs which should be financed through investment the reaction of investors to inflation, said William Graham, a lawyer representing the Association of Municipalities of Ontario.

Mr. Graham agreed with testimony by Bell witnesses that an inability to raise equity capital—issuance of new shares of stock—is "the nub of Bell's current problem."

He argued that Bell has placed too heavy a reliance on raising capital internally and this has made Bell appear to be a bad investment.

The hearing before the Canadian transport commission's telecommunications committee now is in the final stage. Bell has already presented its closing argument and intervenors are giving their summaries.

Lake Erie Fishermen Had Good Year in 1973

DUNKIRK, N.Y. (AP) — Commercial fishing is on the upswing in Lake Erie, and it might get better with the help of New York state, one fisherman says.

He, like his colleagues who earn their living by catching yellow walleye pike and yellow perch, want to use nets with smaller mesh size. State law now limits the size to 2½ inches.

"If they don't drop the size we'll be in bad shape, out of business," says Captain Stanley Case, a fisherman for 35 of his 51 years.

Meanwhile, the 1973 catch was reported the best in New York's waters since 1962 and catches this year have been described as excellent.

William Shepherd, supervising aquatic biologist, in charge of Lake Erie fisheries unit for the state department of environmental conservation, says the 1973 take totalled 273,000 pounds.

Most were yellow pike and yellow perch.

Fishermen receive from 55 to 61 cents a pound for pike and 35 to 40 cents for perch. The housewife pays about $1.60—a pound for filleted pike and $2.30

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope celebrated his 71st birthday by recalling his childhood days in Cleveland when he helped his brother in a butcher shop.

"I did everything," he said Wednesday. "I plucked the chickens and ground the ham burger, and when things were slow, I posed in the window with an apple in my mouth."

Hope got a telegram from President Nixon and a standing ovation from the 740 persons who paid $100 each to honor him.

Proceeds went to the United Service Organizations, the service group for which he has made many tours to visit servicemen.

Hope was quick with the political one-liners for which he is famous.

"Watergate is giving dirty politics a bad name," he said.

Hope said he felt sorry for his friend Nixon. "The president called Dial-A-Prayer the other day and they hung up on him."

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk show host Dick Cavett said Wednesday night he is refusing an Emmy television award because it was not announced on the Emmy awards program.

Cavett sent a telegram to the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences that said:

"I find it strange that you didn't find time for the award in your awards show. Since you didn't find room for it in your 2½-hour program, I can't find room for it in my four-room apartment."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Cicely Tyson decided to do a movie, it's a decision made for love, not money.

The slender black actress has turned down more parts than she has accepted because "I set high standards for myself and even when the going got tough, I stuck by those standards."

It paid off Tuesday night when she won an Emmy for her portrayal of the title character in The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman. The television play won an Emmy for the best drama special.

The two-hour film told the life story of a black woman freed from slavery at the age of 10 who spends the next 100 years fighting for her race.

"While reading the book, I never thought of her as a person who didn't exist," she said of Jane Pittman. "I fell madly in love with her. She was so spectacular."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linda Blair and Helen Reddy come from disparate backgrounds: Linda a Connecticut teen-ager with a normal life of dates and horse shows until her sensation as the spirit-ridden girl of The Exorcist; Helen, descendant of a theatrical Australian family, a singer-songwriter who sold $7.5 million worth of records last year.

Now Linda is playing her second film role in Airport 1975, as a girl en route across the United States for a kidney transplant when a 747 jet is disabled in a collision. Helen, performing in her first film, is the "singing, flying nun" who befriends her.

Linda, 15, is bright and cheerful in Airport 1975, her manner far removed from the horrid child she portrayed in The Exorcist.

Helen, 32, was singing on the stage of the Tivoli Theatre in Perth, Australia when she was four.

She toured with her parents later appeared for two years in a television musical revue and finally decided to try the big time in North America.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — District Judge Lawrence Feloney has dismissed charges of open and gross lewdness brought against 12 persons connected with the play "Sweet Eros."

Charges of fornication against Lisa Ingalls and Joel Polinsky, two stars of the show, were continued to June.

The pair was arrested along with the others May 22 when state police interrupted the play, following a scene in which they appeared nude in a simulated sex act.

Judge Feloney, in dismissing the lewdness charges, noted that children were excluded from the paid performance.

Film Portrays Maverick Cop

The unconventional policeman, Serpico, is coming to the Quinte Mall's Cinema One on Friday.

Paramount Picture's Serpico, the explosive true-life drama of New York City police will open at the Cinema One with two shows at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Friday, May 31.

The Dino De Laurentiis presentation recounts the detective's determination to fight the corruption and bribery rampant among his fellow law officers in New York City.

Appalled by the extent of the blight that infects a large and powerful organization, Serpico struggled with a staggering moral dilemma and eventually blew the lid off the corruption system by divulging the shocking details to the New York Times where the expose led to the formation of the investigating Knapp Commission and an internal house-cleaning of the entire system.

Based on the recent best-seller by Peter Maas, the movie stars Al Pacino in the title role.

Pacino, who received an Academy Award nomination for his performance in The Godfather as well as the National Society of Film Critics Best Actor Award for the same film, is joined by a cast that includes Tony Roberts, John Randolph, Jack Kehoe, Barbara Eda-Young and Cornelia Sharpe.

The Poolside Gang
...Join Them!
The fun is just the price of a day room at The Four Seasons. We have the pool... cool and sparkling clean, places to lounge, places to sun. We also provide a play area for the kids as well as tennis courts and other games. We give you a bright and happy room (doze or watch TV in air conditioned comfort if you want!) and we take care of everything you need — food for the mood, refreshments and what-have-you. If peace and quiet are your wish, there's plenty available around our grassy lawns and flower beds.
Join the Poolside Gang any day of the week from mid-morning to 6.00 p.m. Day room charge is $10.00 (based on four adults). Extra adults $2.50 each. Maximum of six persons to a room — children under 14 are free. Call 968-3411 in plenty of time to reserve your room.

BIRTHS

HILLIWELL — Doug and Sandra (nee Ramsay) are pleased to announce the safe arrival of Jennifer Ann on Thursday, May 13th, 1976 at Belleville General Hospital. Proud grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Ramsay, Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hilliwell, Kingston. Second grandmother, Mrs. Mae Ramsay, Belleville.

VERRALL — Rick and Meryl are happy to announce the birth of their daughter, Jennifer Lee, on Thursday, May 20th, 1976 at Belleville General Hospital. Proud grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Wright, Belleville and Mrs. B. Macnab, Toronto.

IN MEMORIAM

POPE — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Norman Wesley Pope, who passed away May 20th, 1973.
Proud how we dearly miss him.
Sadly do we feel his loss.
Lonely is our home without him.
Up, up, Lord, to bear the cross.
Sweet memories are all we have left,
Memories of a dear loved one.
Yours Sadly, Morgan and Henry.

BRADSHAW — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Ivan Bradshaw who passed away on May 20th, 1972.
We watched you suffer, we heard you sigh,
But no one could do was just stand by.
For when the time came, we suffered more
Than you from inch of pain you ever through.
So if you have a mother,
Cherish her with care.
For you will never know heartache,
Till you see her vacant chair.
—Ever remembered by sons, daughters and families.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pirch.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

SHAWANO'S TOPS FOR INVESTMENT

In today's skyrocketing prices, Shawano is an outstanding investment.

Many lot owners have seen the value of their land increase by 100% or more.

Buying a lot at Shawano is an even better investment than ever before, for three reasons. One — the province is running out of recreational land.

Two — sale of crown land for cottages is halted.

Three — Provincial planning regulations have restricted private developments.

You can still buy a big, ½ acre lakefront lot at Shawano from $6,000.00 to $14,500.00 with 10% down and excellent financing.

Shawano is the beautiful 1,000 acre wilderness recreational area in the historic Highlands of Hastings, 32 scenic miles north of Madoc via highway 62. Marvellous swiming, boating and fishing.

NOTICE

NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Corporation of the Town of Deseronto will on the 11th day of June, 1974 at the hour of 8 o'clock in the evening of the said day, in the Council Chamber in the Municipal Building in the Township of Tyendinaga and there or thereafter as may be required by the Council, consider the following by-law:

A by-law to authorize the borrowing of the sum of $100,000.00 for the purpose of acquiring land and premises, create, issue and sell debentures for the said amount and to levy a special rate for the payment of part of the principal and interest thereof and to be repayable in the Regional Municipality of Hastings as Fire Protection Grant.

AND TAKE NOTICE that the said Council proposes to pass the said by-law and that it is not its intention to alter the same and the said by-law will be passed without further notice unless a petition requiring a vote to be taken by said Council is presented to the Clerk before the date of the passing of the by-law and that the said Council may not exercise its said powers to pass the said by-law until the expiration of the first year from the date of the passing of such by-law unless the said petition is first presented to the Council and the said Council has obtained the assent of the electors thereto.

AND TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Corporation of the Town of Deseronto will meet in person or persons at the time or a time to be appointed by the Court of Revision to hear and consider all complaints that may be made to the said By-law, and that any person or persons may attend at the said meeting and be heard thereon.

DATED at the Town of Deseronto this 24th day of May, 1974.

John C. Miller, Esq., Barrister and Solicitor, Deseronto, Ontario
Solicitor for the Corporation of the City of Belleville

CP News Roundup

Rip-offs Raise Ire

VANCOUVER, (CP) — Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the federal food prices review board, said Wednesday consumers do not mind paying a fair price for food but feel they have been victimized during the last year.

She said consumers have disrected their anger not at prices themselves "but at increased prices which they see as the result of rip-offs . . . .

Addressing delegates attending the annual convention of the Canadian Grocery Distributors Institute, Mrs. Plumptre said if a price increase is clearly justifiable "we have found the consumer prepared to accept it with reasonable grace."

She added that a consumer is usually "pretty certain when he smells a rip-off."

Mrs. Plumptre said the food industry must do a better job of communicating its problems to the consumer.

She said while food price increases may slow down somewhat in the short term, "I have little doubt that in future years Canadians must expect to pay an increased proportion of their income for food."

Contest Fatal

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two men who tried to settle a long-standing dispute over who could drink the most died after losing the long contest, police said Wednesday.

Each of the men, Walter Wade, 39, and Eugene Cole, 32, consumed more than a quart of gin, but no winner was named because the man appointed as "timekeeper" lost track.

Police Chief Tommy Ray said Cole died Monday after being jailed and Wade died the next day in a hospital.

Supply Land

GUELPH (CP) — The ministry of government services has announced that 700 acres of surplus land at Guelph correctional centre will be made available to the city for housing, industry, recreational and conservation use.

Andras Says PCs 'Cop Out' on UIC

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Robert Andras accused the Conservatives Wednesday of copping out in their call for an inquiry into the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC).

Mr. Andras said the Conservative party has repeatedly asked for an inquiry into the UIC.

But he said two parliamentary committees have discussed matters involving the UIC on 12 separate days since 1972 and the government has allocated four parliamentary days for debate on amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

"Nevertheless, throughout this entire period, the Conservatives have never once taken the opportunity to call an opposition day, as they are entitled to do, to set forth their own policy on this question."

No Lady

REGINA (CP) — Judy Lallarsh says she is no lady so don't call her one.

The former federal cabinet minister told the Saskatchewan Registered Nurses Association that she gets angry about washroom doors with signs saying ladies when the doors to companion washrooms say men.

"I think 'where's the one for me?' My mother was a lady, but I don't think I'm one.

"I do all sorts of things ladies aren't supposed to do. I curse and swear."

She said the term for the female of the species is women, not ladies or girls. She calls the latter term a "putdown."

"I'll be 50 at Christmas and I'm not a girl."

Outlook Good

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y. (CP) — The economic outlook in Canada is good, Claude Bennett, Ontario's minister of industry and tourism, said Wednesday.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, May 31 -

Aries (March 21-April 19) Count to 10 before you say what's on your mind to your husband or boy-friend. He's cranky, too.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Persons you'll be working with today won't come up to your expectations. Cross words could ensue, especially if you get bossy.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) All your good resolutions about not spending more than you should will go by the boards today. The "I gotta have it now" will take over.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If things aren't done exactly your way at home you'll be difficult for the family to get along with.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Mental work will prove frustrating for you today. Better to set it aside if you can. Do something more physical.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One of your outside interests is going to cost you more than you planned on. Have a little extra put aside.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're involved in anything competitive today and hope to win, you'll have to overcome stiff competition.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid persons who try to force their philosophies on others. You're not in the mood to have someone tell you how to think.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A friend is going to anger you. He's not as open and aboveboard with you as you are with him.

Capricorn (Dec. 23-Jan. 19) It's important that you have a good opinion of yourself so you won't be hurt by something another may say about you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your way of doing certain things today may not be the best. Don't be too insistent that others follow your orders to the letter.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You will find someone extremely appealing. You'd be better off not to be so interested. This relationship will produce sparks.

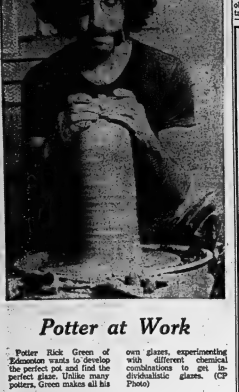
Drive-in Superchurch 'Retailing' Religion

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a big, diversified operation, with output geared to demand. It's in a pleasant setting, with easy accessibility, ample parking, obliging staff and a huge patronage. What is it? A shopping centre? A supermarket? No, it's a church.

"We're in the business of retailing religion and effective business principles should be applied to doing it," said Rev. Jr. Robert H. Schuller, founder and senior pastor of the Garden Grove, Calif., Community Church.

It's a combination sit-in, drive-in superchurch, whose success has sparked more than 50 drive-in churches across the United States and whose ballooning growth has been keyed by Dr. Schuller to satisfying the clientele.



"In a voluntary society like ours, people will ignore you if you don't give them what they want and need," he said in an interview. Offering his own version of supplying to suit the market, he added: "Find a hurt and heal it.

"People today are looking for greater confidence and self-esteem in a time of emotional and spiritual hurt. They feel disfranchised, alienated and dehumanized in a non-caring society. It's a time for healing—for encouragement and reassurance."

Concentrating on that vein in his services and leaving specific Bible teaching to supplementary adult classes, he has built up a congregation of more than 6,000, a staff of nine clergymen, 1,200 trained lay workers and a television audience of millions.

The church started from almost nothing in 1955 when Dr. Schuller, then a newly ordained minister of the Reformed Church of America, was allotted $500 to start a West Coast congregation. Surveying the prospects, he unconventionally decided to rent a defunct drive-in theatre.

The setting has swelled into a 22-acre landscaped garden of trees and splashing fountains, a 13-storey office building topped by a 90-foot lighted cross and an amphitheatre that seats 1,700 inside, with spaces for 300 cars outside.

Edmonton Man, 23 Seeks Perfect Pot

EDMONTON (CP) — Rick Green has his forearms in clay and his eyes fixed firmly on the future.

He wants to develop the perfect pot and find the perfect glaze to cover it.

At 23, he has time to fulfil that ambition.

"It's a one-man show," said the former social worker who now does pottery at home. "That's what I like about it. a one-man job." He finds great satisfaction in knowing that his pieces are entirely his own creation.

He said in an interview that he virtually gave up social work to follow his dream. He became frustrated with the pace at which government was moving in the field, started "throwing clay" at the University of Alberta students' union studio for diversion and found it was for him.

"Of all the crafts, pottery has the most magic to it."

Rick has been in pottery full-time for a year and admits that he'll never get wealthy at it in the early years.

"What you're able to do in a week is how you'll live that week. If I do it for money alone, it loses something. Caring is very important.

"Sometimes I get too perfect for my own income. If I don't really like something, I won't sell it."

Rick's tendency to be a perfectionist and his constant experimenting with ideas and colors for glazes result in long hours in his studio.

"I'm typical for Scandinavian and three-dimensional styles now."

Rick has taught a city pottery class and now teaches beginner and advanced classes at the students' union studio.

"I teach people to use body dynamics." He feels this is important for getting free-flowing pieces so that the design will speak for the pot.

"Most stores had got into the rut of buying stereotyped pieces and people had become accustomed to buying that kind of pottery. It perpetuates the cycle of stores buying from big-name potters and the general public buying it because they've seen nothing different.

"Most potters I know sell to stores because they have to, not because they want to. If I'm good they'll eventually come around.

Rick markets his pots through direct selling, the students' union, and frequent house shows. At a recent house show he had more than 200 pieces on display.

"I think people buy my pieces because they're different and people like different things.

There are three types of clay that potters use—low, medium, and high fire. Rick uses medium-fire clay from Medicine Hat.

"Most potters use the high-fire clay because it's a fast process." he said. He uses the medium variety because "fast things happen" with it.

"The process of forming your pieces on the potter's wheel can be a most frustrating experience if the clay hasn't been "wedged" properly to give it consistency and remove the air bubbles." Up to an hour can be spent "wedging" the clay, depending on the initial consistency.

"Throwing clay on the pot-ter's wheel to form your piece can be compared to yoga—it involves mind and body; you must have your mind in a lot of different shapes.

"Sometimes my fingers seem to have eyes; I occasionally close my eyes while throwing."

After drying for approximately a week the pieces are ready for a low firing in the kiln.

After the firing, the "bisqueware" is safe—not fragile—and can be stored for any length of time.

When a glaze has been applied to the piece, the final firing is done.

"This is where the fire takes control and you have to sit helplessly for a day or a week, depending on the size of your kiln."

Not many potters have their own "recipe" for glaze colors—they use a basic recipe or hire people, usually chemists, to do their chemistry for them.

"I guess I'm kind of a chemist; I make all my own glazes."

Experimenting with different chemical combinations to get individualistic glazes is time-consuming. He occasionally takes time off and does nothing but test glazes.

"Lots of times you get glazes you don't expect so I write down formulas because sometimes they're hard to get back.

"I use blue a lot. I have a good blue. No one else in Edmonton has a good blue."

Golan Heights Silent for Now

GENEVA (AP) — Syria and Israel signed a disengagement pact today outlining plans to end the fighting on the Golan Heights and move toward lasting peace in the Middle East.

A half hour after the signing, the guns that boomed across the bleak and barren front for the last 81 days fell silent, an Israeli military spokesman said.

Artillery duels that started in the early morning continued intermittently past the deadline and finally fizzled out altogether, correspondents reported from the front.

A United Nations spokesman said all signatures were completed at 6:45 a.m. EDT after a 45-minute delay caused by Syria's apparent reluctance to sign the pact in the presence of reporters.

The snag developed about 30 minutes earlier after Israeli representatives had signed the disengagement agreement. The Syrians, expected to follow, sat still and made no move.

At that time Lt.-Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo of Finland, commander of the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East who chaired the meeting, announced a 15-minute recess. Reporters were asked to leave the marbled council hall of the Palais des Nations, the Geneva UN headquarters.

And shortly thereafter the problem was cleared up, and the agreement negotiated by United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger in a marathon 33-day peace mission was signed.

The signing ceremony started after Siilasvuo hailed the separation agreement as a "giant and courageous step" toward achieving lasting and durable peace in the troubled area.

As the military delegations signed the agreement in the building where Israel and Egypt signed a similar pact last January, military spokesmen in Tel Aviv and Damascus reported new fighting today between their armies.

The Tel Aviv command said Syrian gunners fired on Israeli positions in the heights, which the Israelis returned. Two communiques from the Damascus command said early artillery fighting led to tank encounters and heavy rocket exchanges.

It was the 81st consecutive day of fighting along the 40-mile Golan front.

Under the terms of the agreement, its signing was to signal a halt to the fighting and the start of steps to implement a prisoner exchange.

On Saturday, Israeli and Syrian military delegations begin five days of talks on the disengagement timetable and on precise demarcation lines for thinning out of forces. The troop separation agreements says all its provisions are to be implemented by June 12.

Israel and Syria formally endorsed the pact Thursday, one day after agreement by the negotiating teams was announced in Jerusalem and Washington. The Syrian endorsement came at a 10-hour session of President Hafez Assad's governing socialist Baath party and Israel approval on a 75-to-36 vote in the Knesset, or parliament.

Syria generally has been the most radical state in the quarter-century-old Arab struggle against Israel. U.S. sources feel its acceptance of disengagement may help ease Arab bitterness and open the door to a resumption this summer of the Geneva peace conference started at a session adjourned last December. Syria refused to take part in the talks at that time.

Union Jacks Gone

Irish Share One Enemy

BELFAST (AP) — Two years ago the Union Jacks which flew over Protestant strongholds in Shankill Road and Sandy Row attested to an unshaken allegiance to the British Crown and faith in the United Kingdom.

Today, the same flagpoles defiantly fly the red and white of Ulster, and the Protestant militants of the Ulster Workers' Council are sounding almost as anti-British as their sworn foes, the Roman Catholics.

This is the political paradox of Northern Ireland, the bloody five-year feud between Protestants and the Catholic minority has given them a common enemy—the British—and, increasingly, a common drive for independence from Britain.

"We will eat grass first!" chanted defiant Protestants as they paralysed Northern Ireland with a 15-day general strike and shattered the delicate Protestant-Catholic blueprint for power-sharing. The toppled coalition government of Catholics and Protestants was the whole basis of Britain's political design to beat the Catholic-based Irish Republican 'army's guerrillas.

By giving Catholics a share of power, London hoped to woo them away from backing the outlaws. And by giving the Irish republic's government a tiny voice in northern affa irs through an All-Ireland Council, it hoped to take some of the steam out of nationalistic fervor for a united, Catholic-dominated Ireland.

But the council was shelved during the strike, and after 12 days of economic paralysis the moderate Northern Ireland governors folded.

The British design lies in ruins. Now, with the celebration bonfires still burning in Belfast's Protestant back streets, the question is: What next?

More Tapes Sought

Nixon Warned by Mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee has subpoenaed tapes of 45 more presidential conversations despite President Nixon's insistence he will turn over no more Watergate material.

Along with the subpoena, approved by a 27 to 11 vote Thursday, the committee sent Nixon a letter saying his refusal to comply might itself provide grounds for impeachment.

It rejected Nixon's attempts to deal more harshly with the committee, which has moved to seek an immediate impeachment vote for contempt of Congress when tabled 27 to 9. One is recommend citation for contempt but delay House action until later was tabled 27 to 11.

The committee also rejected, 23 to 15, an effort to open some of the impeachment hearings to the public next week. The vote is expected to keep the hearings closed at least two weeks longer.

Issuance of the committee's fourth subpoena against Nixon with only one dissenting vote demonstrated the bipartisan opposition in the committee to the White House strategy for fighting impeachment.

"He's stonewalling," said Representative Thomas Railsback (Rep. Ill.), borrowing a term made popular by the White House transcripts.

Representative Robert McClory (Rep. Ill.), noting that anson, the things the committee is investigating are allegations Nixon obstructed the justice department, the Senate Watergate committee and the special prosecutor in their inquiries, said:

"His current conduct does not make it easier for this member to conclude that such allegations are without merit."

Railsback and McClory were among eight Republicans who joined in directing Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem., N.J.) to issue the order to Nixon. The letter warned that a continued refusal to comply with committee subpoenas will permit members to conclude he is withholding damaging evidence.

The new subpoena calls for 45 tapes of June 18 Watergate tapes originally requested April 16. Most of them also have been subpoenaed by special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who has asked the Supreme Court to rule on his right to them.

On another Watergate front, President Nixon has chosen in risk the dismissal of criminal charges against two former top assistants rather than turn over evidence for their defence in the White House plumbers case. In a second Watergate move the White House sought to block an early hearing before the Supreme Court on another attempt to obtain Watergate evidence still under Nixon's control.

The high court may rule today on whether to assume jurisdiction in that case. Jaworski seven men are accused of covering up the Watergate breakin.

Jaworski, pressed by a Sept. 9 starting date for the cover-up trial, is seeking to bypass the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in his attempt to obtain tapes and documents of 64 presidential conversations.

A U.S. District Court has upheld Jaworski's subpoena of the 64 tapes, and he wants the Supreme Court to consider the case immediately. The White House wants the case to follow normal appeals procedures.

In the plumbers case, former presidential aides John Ehrlichman and Charles Colson and three others are accused of violating the civil right of Dr. Lewis Fielding. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist at the time the former Pentagon analyst leaked the Pentagon papers to the press.

Fielding's office was burgled in 1971 in an attempt by the White House plumbers group to turn information about Ellsberg.

In the cover-up case, the White House said in a brief to the Supreme Court that the jaworski should avoid a "rush to judgment."

In another evelopment, Jaworski said his investigating force has not uncovered any criminal conduct by executives of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. in the 1971 settlement of anti-trust cases against the company.

Passengers Survive High-speed Wreck

INGERSOLL, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian National passenger train going through town at 80 miles an hour collided with a freight train Thursday, but none of the 70 passengers was seriously injured.

Seven persons remained in hospital and 49 others were treated for minor injuries and released.

CN officials said the six-car Tempo, heading for London and Windsor from Toronto, was thrown from the track when the last 13 boxcars of a 22-car CN freight derailed and veered into the passenger train's diesel.

With a grinding scream of metal the trains flew off the track amid dust and debris, while the front nine cars and the engine of the freight remained on the rails.

The wreck occurred at about 2 p.m. in front of the CN station in this town 19 miles east of London.

CN yardmen who witnessed the crash said the freight, eastbound from Sarnia to Hamilton, was travelling at about 40 miles an hour. They estimated the combined impact speed at about 120 miles an hour and feared many casualties at first.

Bob Taylor, a CN employee, said he was watching the trains approach when he heard a loud bang.

He said he saw a boxcar skidding along the tracks and heard another "explosion" when the rear half of the freight train piled into the passenger cars. The Tempo's diesel had its nose driven into the railbed and its cars jackknifed along the tracks.

"There were all kinds of noise and debris flying around through the air," Mr. Taylor said. "I don't know what caused the crash, maybe a broken axle or a broken rail."

Witnesses said injured passengers crawled from the wrecked cars which were strewn at all angles.

"I thought I was done for," said passenger Phyllis Flynn of St. Catharines. "I thought my baby was going to be a motherless child."

They were not injured.

Ingersoll residents said the railway at one time was restricted in the speed of its through trains within town limits.

The CN just roars through now," said one onlooker.

"A CN spokesman in Toronto said the Canadian transport commission had years earlier given approval to "permissible speeds" of 75 to 80 miles an hour.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the commission said investigators have already been sent to the scene to determine the cause of the wreck.

Kettles Raise Query

OTTAWA (CP) — Why did it take so many years to find out that water boiled in some electric kettles was polluted with lead?

Why have not more people shown up with the poisoning if the kettles are truly a health hazard?

Have thousands been suffering mild forms of lead poisoning that has gone undiagnosed for years?

Scientists and health experts are juggling these questions here. Even since before the startling findings that some household electric kettles are potential health hazards.

Some of the answers indicate a lack of imagination in protecting the public from environmental hazards. Others point to science knowing little about the effects of lead in the human body.

The lead hazard in water boiled in electric kettles was not found sooner because nobody apparently thought to look, says Dr. W. A. Mansell, chief of the toxicology department of the federal health protection branch.

Did Stanfield Fumble?

Missed!

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield grimaces as he drops a football while in North Bay.

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Any suggestion that New Democrat premiers support the conservative wage and price control proposals is false, NDP Leader David Lewis said Thursday.

In a statement to reporters aboard his campaign bus, Mr. Lewis said Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield was wrong when he said the three New Democratic premiers privately might support such a program.

"It's totally false and reprehensible to suggest any of the NDP premiers support his policy. . . . Mr. Stanfield is leaving on a reed that isn't there."

A 90-day wage and price freeze followed by 18-months to two years of lesser controls is a key plank in the Conservative platform for the July 8 election.

Mr. Stanfield said Wednesday night that news reports indicate that at the 11 premiers attending the three New Democrats, would go along with a federal controls program.

Mr. Lewis said he was told both premiers Ed Schreyer of Manitoba and Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan both followed Mr. Stanfield's statement with denials that they support the policy.

Premier Dave Barrett of British Columbia had not yet been contacted "but I have no reason to doubt he'll take the same position."

"The freeze policy is melting under poor Bob," Mr. Lewis said. "He can't get the support of his own party so he's leaning on others where he has no authority to speak for."

Blakeney Begs to Differ

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney's office issued a statement Thursday denying that the premier in any way supports federal Conservative policy on wage and price freezing.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield accused Wednesday night that there are indications Mr. premiers, including Mr. Blakeney, support his policy of wage and price controls.

The statement from the premier's office said the premier was unavailable for comment but quoted a speech he made last week considering that Conservative policy of freezing prices and wages for 90 days will not work.

In the speech, the premier said Canada and American experience shows prices would simply shoot up again after the temporary freeze ended. Manufacturers could hold back deliveries but workers could not make up for wages lost during the freeze, he said.

The premier repeated his calls for a prices review body with power to control price increases, selective price controls on key commodities, lower mortgage rates, subsidies on essential foods, and increased help for persons on low incomes.

Signs Answer?

CORNWALL (CP) — A Canadian National Railways official urged municipalities Thursday to place stop signs before railway level crossings to help reduce accidents.

J. R. Burns, CNR Rideau area manager, told the Cornwall Lions Club that about 40 per cent of level crossing accidents are caused by motorists running into moving trains.

He said the ultimate solution would be to eliminate level crossings in favor of grade separations but this task would be immense even though funds are available through a federal government agency.

News Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto lawyer John MacBeth today was named Ontario's new labor minister. Mr. MacBeth, 32, PC—Toronto York West replaces Fern Guindon who is resigning to run in the eastern Ontario riding of Stormont-Dundas in the July 8 federal election.

Mortgages to Soar

TORONTO (CP) — Interest rates for first mortgages might soon rise as high as 12 per cent, Ernie Assaly, president of the Housing and Urban Development Association, said Thursday. Speaking at the association's spring meeting, the president also said tight money and soaring interest rates will result in fewer starts than the estimated 260,000 anticipated at the beginning of the year.

HENRY KISSINGER

Peace Envoy Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Kissinger returned home early today, ending his 34-day peace mission that on three separate occasions nearly collapsed over Syrian and Israeli refusals to compromise.

The United States state secretary arrived in Washington nearly five hours before Syrian and Israeli generals met in Geneva and signed the agreement that will separate their armies on the Golan Heights.

A United Nations spokesman in Geneva said the agreement was signed at 8:45 a.m. EDT after a last-minute delay caused by Syria's apparent reluctance to sign the pact in the presence of reporters had been cleared up.

Kissinger was to meet today with President Nixon and then brief congressional leaders on his latest success at shuttle diplomacy.

One topic for discussion between Nixon and Kissinger will be the president's coming trip to the Middle East.

Sources said Thursday that Nixon has tentatively decided to begin his Middle East trip the week beginning June 9.

Car Lands On Roof

Two Cornwall residents were treated for minor injuries and released from Belleville General Hospital late yesterday morning after the car they were driving east along Highway 401 went out of control and struck a rock face near the Salmon River Bridge.

Officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police report that Helen Sharron, 27, and a passenger Mark Sharron, were injured when the car they were driving blew a tire and crashed into the rock face.

The car which sustained an estimated $1,500 damage, came to rest on its roof facing west in the east-bound lane.

The accident occurred a 11:35 a.m. yesterday.

Gas Station Broken Into

Thieves made off with nearly $60 from the cash drawer at the BP service station at 220 North Front, Street sometime early yesterday morning.

Belleville police report that the service station owners returned to work at 8:35 a.m. Thursday to find that someone had broken a pane of glass in a south side window and had slipped the lock on a door.

The money that was stolen was in a cash box in the main office.

The building had been locked at 10 p.m. Wednesday night.

Man Injured in Crash

A Trenton man, Timothy John Masterson, 18, received minor injuries in a car-motorcycle accident at the intersection of North Front Street and College Street shortly before noon yesterday. Masterson was driving his motorcycle north North Front Street when he collided with the rear of a motorcycle north North Front Street when he collided with the rear of a motorcycle north North Front Street when he collided with the rear of a

Andras Slams Opposition Economics

NAPANEE — Price and wage controls espoused by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield would be an "absolute disaster," Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras charged here Thursday night.

At the same time he rounded on New Democratic Party proposals for a two-price system for home goods and exports as "stupid" and "immoral".

Inflation is a serious world problem and the cost of food — aggravated by universal shortages — is worrisome, the minister admitted, although Canada was faring better than most of its partner developed nations.

But there is no "slick phrase" or "magic wand" that will solve the problem, Mr. Stanfield was putting on an "incredible performance" by sticking with his program of wage and price controls, although his explanations of it are now shifting, charged Mr. Andras.

Experience in other countries have proved the controls formula doesn't work, he said. Latest statistics show Canada's inflation rate at 9 per cent.

"Teh United States, when it put price and wage controls in, had five per cent inflation. Right now they've taken them off and they have 10.4 per cent. Britain has 13.5 per cent and it's bad . . . controls."

"It wouldn't work, it's been proved it wouldn't work. So why is Mr. Stanfield off on that? He stays on it until July 8."

Mr. Andras said some Conservatives had rebelled against the controls program and Mr. Stanfield with "his fuzzy economic theories" was leading a disunited party.

NDP leader David Lewis' two-price plan would maintain cheaper goods on domestic markets at the expense of trading partners, he warned.

Canada imports $23 billion in goods — including food — and, per capita, is the highest world trading nation.

"It sounds pretty neat. But if we did this . . . how quickly do you think the countries that sell and export to us would take to retaliate? Then we'd really be in a bind."

Mr. Lewis recently called for doubling of Canada's foreign aid, said Mr. Andras.

Then he wants to turn around and sell our goods, to people we're giving foreign aid to, for higher prices.

"It's not only economically stupid. But it is absolutely, in my opinion, immoral. Absolutely immoral."

No one should campaign on a slogan that suggests there is some "simple, easy solution" to inflation. Supplies — particularly food — must be increased to offset the problem.

He accused the NDP and Conservatives of pulling the plug", on government to launch an election Canadians didn't want; it came at a time when there was much of "considerable urgency" to be done.

As a result, said Mr. Andras, he goes "into the election angry, and mad and somewhat disgusted."

Lawrence Nominated In Northumberland

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

PORT HOPE — Allan attorney general turned federal MP, won the uncontested endorsement of Northumberland - Durham Progressive Conservatives here Thursday night.

Mr. Lawrence, in accepting the nomination for the July 8 general election reflected on his first term as a "tension-filled and terribly unproductive parliament."

He pointed to the 1972 election as a "personal defeat for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau — integrity would have called for his resignation."

Lincoln Alexander MP for Hamilton in the last parliament was keynote speaker. In fiery fashion he told delegates: You don't want charisma, you want brains in a national leader. So he (Stanfield) stutters. What the hell has that got to do with picking a leader?"

Hees Goes National

George Nees has the national campaign trail for the Progressive Conservatives today.

He leaves for Alberta where Saturday he will campaign in Red Deer and Medicine Hat; Monday in Swift Current and Moose Jaw; Tuesday in Lloydminster and Vermilion; Wednesday in Edmonton and Winnipeg, Man.

He returns Thursday to his Prince Edward - Hastings riding and Friday will be present at CFB Trenton for a change - of - command ceremony. Saturday he will be at the official opening of a conservation recreation facility at Macaulay Mohawk, ain and lake in Trenton for a Vimy dinner at the Trenton Legion. Sunday Mr. Hees will attend a sea cadet inspection at Trenton.

Chinese Christian Speaker

The first Chinese Christian leader to be invited to spend an extended time in the People's Republic of China was speaker at the Quinte Chapter of the Full Gospel Businessmens' Fellowship at the Four Seasons Hotel.

David Wang fled to Hong Kong from China in 1957 and has since supervised research program aimed at gathering information on the Christian church under the Communist regime. As general director of Asian Outreach, he heads a missionary program for all Asia.

Grace Stalker Wins Liberal Nomination

Lennox Grit Choice

Woman Will Fight Tories' Dominance

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

NAPANEE — Male dominance of senior politics in this area crumbled last night as local Liberals chose their first woman candidate to stump Frontenac, Lennox-Addington for the July 8 federal election.

Selected to challenge long years of Conservative supremacy was native daughter Grace Stalker — much involved in a broad range of Ontario public affairs. She defeated two male contestants on the first ballot at a crowded, enthusiastic convention.

Mrs. Stalker was fully aware of the break with custom as a woman seeking the nomination to carry the Liberal banner in what she called a "Conservative riot of almost a century" — an area where Toryism has been long dominant.

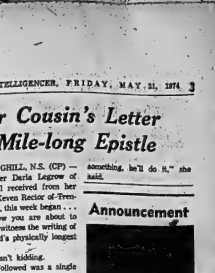
But at least, she puckishly reminded the Liberal room crowd at Prince Charles School: "No Liberal woman candidate has ever been defeated in this riding."

For any campaigner, the riding is a fairly formidable territorial challenge. Its 40,-000 voters are spread through rural communities in an area reaching 150 miles from the Bay of Quinte into the Ottawa Valley and looping east past Kingston. Its most recent Conservative incumbent has been Douglas Alkenbrack, of Napanee.

At 56, Mrs. Stalker is making her first bid for elitoral office — but she is no newcomer to public affairs. Her credentials are a long list of memberships on consumer and rural task forces and committees. Among her involvements: The Ontario government's task force on housing; rural health representative to the Consumer's Association of chairman of an Ontario Federation of Agriculture committee pressing for Unemployment Insurance Act changes; OFA executive member.

Mother of six children, she and her husband, Roland, operate a lagre 190-acre egg farm in the Bath area.

Selection of Mrs. Stalker came earlier than some party organizers had predicted.



The men contesting the nomination were (1) William Murray, 36, a real estate broker in neighboring Ernestown township, who quit 10 years of municipal affairs because he said his company was planning so much local development he feared too many conflicts of interest as a councillor and deputy reeve; (2) Ross Baker, farmer and tourist operator from Arden in the north country of the big, rural riding.

The conjest, expected to run to two ballots, attracted a endance of more than an estimated 1,200, the biggest Liberal convention here in years, said organizers, in what has been a Conservative bailiwick.

But Mrs. Stalker told the crowd, various developments in recent years had brought many new voters into the riding.

"This is a whole new ball game," she said. "People are concerned about issues and don't want another election. We have not been defeated in this riding by Conservatives, but by indifference and apathy of many of the voters.

Constituency campaigning begins in earnest after this weekend when the Conservatives endorse their candidate. The convention is set for Cloyne north of Kaladar. Earlier the New Democratic Party chose Napanee-area resident Bud Acton, a Kingston high school technical teacher as candidate.

Plan Tighter UIC Controls

NAPANEE — Distribution of unemployment insurance must be based on tighter controls and service is deserving recipients, Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras said here Thursday night.

The minister, responsible for jobless insurance administration, spoke only briefly on the issue at a nominating convention of Frontenac - Lennox and Addington Liberals. He said he had already delivered a major address on the controversial subject the day before.

In that speech he had outlined tightening amendments planned for introduction to parliament before the government fell in May.

Intent of the changes was to ensure genuine applicants receive benefits "quickly, without hassle". But there able to work "and who will not work will not get unemployment insurance".

"I mean what I say," said Mr. Andras, over the loud applause of a packed auditorium at Prince Charles public school. "We have to maintain the balance between good service . . . and good control."

Her Cousin's Letter A Mile-long Epistle

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP) — The letter Darla Legrow of Springhill received from her cousin, Keven Rector of Trenton, Ont., last week began . . . "And now you are about to begin to witness the writing of the world's physically longest letter."

He wasn't kidding.

What followed was a single sheet of correspondence exactly one mile long.

Keven wrote the letter on 21 packages of 25-inch-wide New Year's streamers glued together and rolled onto a metal reel.

It was mailed Jan. 4 but did not arrive in Springhill until Wednesday.

Darla, a Grade 7 student, said her cousin, a Grade 12 student, wanted to get his name in the Guinness Book of Records, so he spent 180 hours printing the giant letter by hand.

She said she and Keven have been writing "goofy letters to each other since he had been back home last summer."

"When he sets his mind to something, he'll do it," she said.

Never-Never Politics

It is still never-never land where the federal election is concerned.

Prime Minister Trudeau has latched onto a useful gimmick with his travels by train. His opponents are probably wishing they had thought of this first, with its thrust at the real grassroots and discovery of communities off the beaten track.

Mrs. Trudeau has been along too with baby Sacha and, as we have pointed out before, this is the stuff of election campaigns.

However, it does not tell us much about Liberal competence or rather, the lack of it, in the running of the nation's affairs. It says more of charisma and personality than it does about this country's policies and what is going to be done about the major issue of inflation.

Mr. Trudeau has been quoted as saying that the Liberals would bring inflation under control if re-elected. "That I pledge to you," he declared.

But how? He did not elaborate, saying only that he was confident he had a "grip on the problem."

A grip on the problem? Is it not more likely that his words are but a snow job, as unrealistic and unconvincing as charisma and personality and a turning-on-of-the-voter by charm alone would be in determining who should rule the country on July 8?

What about Government spending? Why is it that, to our knowledge, neither the Prime Minister nor his colleagues have made any attempt to explain the well-documented and reckless extravagance of recent years — one of the main factors in our present inflationary situation?

And if no one has asked, then it is about time someone did. Time also to ask about that "humanitarian" aid program: The moral and monetary support being extended to "liberation" movements in Africa and to assist "victims of racism in Southern Africa," forgetting that racism is a two-way street and that all the money may be doing is knifing our own kith and kin in the back. Better that this kind of money be directed toward those programs which are trying to relieve starvation in the drought-stricken lands of the Sahara where the need is pressing and immense.

It is in the direction in which this country is heading, under the Trudeau government, that is so suspect in many minds. Where are we going anyway? There is drift, in fiscal matters at home, and we have these strange alliances in parts of the world where alien systems make mischief and engage in subversive practices.

These are some of the things that concern us and which should be in voters' minds when they come to make a decision — hopefully after some concrete policies have supplanted the somewhat desultory politicking we are witnessing today.

Untimely Death

The dreadful tragedy of children meeting violent death before their due life span has never been demonstrated so forcefully as it was in the recent massacre of Israeli students by Arab terrorists.

But what of the routine, barely noticed incidents that bring death to people of all ages on the highways and byways of this country. In the past week or two we have heard also of fatalities involving young children running into the path of vehicles. Two have been in the Quinte area.

It is too late to save these unfortunate youngsters, but let parents increase their vigilance where their children are concerned. Make sure also that the young people know such basics as stopping and looking in both directions before crossing the road, and to avoid running onto the road after a stray ball, or for any reason at all.

Let the police and schools redouble their efforts too and perhaps the combined effort will pay off in parents and young people who are more aware of their responsibility where traffic is concerned.

Answer To Veteran Senator's Faux-Pas

Stanfield Expresses Country's Debt To Diefenbaker

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA There was a moment so fleeting in the rowdily roaring House of Commons on the day the New Democrats toppled the Liberals from power that it could have flashed right by your eyes, unnoticed and unread.

Fleeting it surely was, but of all the things that happened that astonishing day — except of remark, but I take this occasion Parliament itself — it could be the one with the most profound effect on the outcome of the July election.

Right now, most Parliamentwatchers and campaign-trailers seem to agree that again it could be close.

So it is just possible that three sentences spoken that day by Conservative Leader Stanfield, in his best speech since entering Parliament eight years ago, could make the difference. They were:

"There is one matter relating to my past that I do want to speak of, and I think this is the proper place for me to do it.

"... and referring to the very regrettable references made to the Right Honorable Member for Prince Albert (John Diefenbaker) by Senator Gratian O'Leary on national television.

"I now make that statement myself and my party from that kind of remark, but I take this occasion to restate our debt to the Right Honorable Gentleman for the great service he has rendered to this country, to Parliament, and to our party."

Even some of the Liberals — and most of the New Democrats led by Stanley Knowles — applauded, hammering their desktops and sending a thunder of hearty "Hear, Hears" lofting up to the linen print ceiling of the Commons.

Even the Conservative front bench, four seats from Mr. Stanfield, sat John Diefenbaker, glowing.

What had Senator O'Leary, a most respected elder statesman of the Conservative party, said that should deserve such a stern public rebuke?

Really not much, not when you know the brilliant but often puckish Gratian O'Leary gets carried away by his flashing words and sometimes says things he does not always mean or say the way they sound.

It was a sort of throwaway line, tossed off when the Senator was discussing the question of the Conservatives — if they win — luring "a devil of a lot" of bureaucrats, and the failure last time they held power of the then Prime Minister Diefenbaker to clean civil service house.

How are you going to do it, Senator O'Leary was asked, and came through with the troublemaking line:

"We can find ways. Just replace them. That's all. Easy. That should deserve such a stern Gord rest his soul. He's dead so far as the party's concerned."

Odd thing is, it was John Diefenbaker who appointed Gratian O'Leary to the Senate.

The situation presented Robert Stanfield with an opportunity for which, perhaps, he has been waiting years.

For all of Parliament has been acutely aware of the bitterness still gnawing like acid in the political stomachs of so many Conservatives, eight years after the party's "Toronto Mafia" stripped Dief of his leadership and presented it to Stanfield.

Dief was deeply hurt and the would has been slow to heal: his own band of partisans in the Conservative caucus has been unforgiving.

If Dief was not exactly "alienated," as the currently fashionable word for it is, he was not especially enchanted either particularly at election time, when he could have campaigned nationally and made such a winning difference to the party, but confined his efforts largely to his own riding and neighboring Saskatchewan constituencies.

In the 1968 campaign, and again in the '72 race, Conservatives dreamed of Stanfield and Dief, arm in arm on the platform, as a team, one the leader, the other the former Tory Prime Minister, dean of the Commons, and household name all across the land.

Now Dief is dead. But even at 78 is the most formidable force in Parliament and perhaps on the platform — with Stanfield, finally, having paid public tribute, in the Conservative where it counted so, to the Old Chief's remarkable record of national public service.

So Tories in saying their prayers these nights are pleasing that with the old Warrior it may be "once more into the breach, dear friends ..."

Nearly One Million Canadians Are Still Inadequately Housed

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The market for new housing in Canada is beginning to cool down, after years of hyperactivity.

That doesn't mean that all Canadians are adequately housed. Roughly three-quarters of a million families are probably not.

But the signs of house-buying fever are diminishing. Here are some of the factors that are combining to slow the pace of market activity:

—Prices have risen beyond the reach of a substantial proportion of potential home-buyers.

—The cost of borrowed money is the highest ever. But despite interest rates that nearly upward from 12 per cent, private lenders appear to have less money to invest in mortgages.

—Serviced land is in increasingly short supply.

—Governments are trying to take the speculative element out of the residential housing market. Ontario, for example, has introduced a 50-per-cent land acquisition tax and a 20-per-cent foreign purchase tax.

Now that home buyers no longer have the assurance of an inevitable profit, they tend to be more careful and seek a greater attention to price.

Last year's boom in single family dwellings—14 per cent more starts than in 1972—tapered off a little in the first quarter of this year, when starts were running 10 per cent ahead of January-March, 1972.

Indications are that the pace has continued to slacken in the second quarter, and that total starts will fall short for full-year 1974 may be in the neighborhood of 1973's 250,000.

Construction of rental apartment units is especially weak, probably because of the opposition of tenant groups and consumer activist organizations, the imposition of rent controls in British Columbia and Quebec, and the possibility of a rent freeze in other parts of Canada.

Starts on multiple-unit buildings rose only two per cent in 1973, and will probably decline this year.

Anything that discourages inflationary speculation is probably in the public interest. But the no-growth trend in construction could prove to be a decidedly mixed blessing.

It is welcomed by a good many property-owners, who would, figuratively, like to pull notice of resale signs and have out newcomers.

It is also welcomed by tenants in older housing who are in danger of being displaced to make way for high-rise apartments.

But on a broader basis, a no-growth period in residential construction should be a cause for concern and not just to those faced with the loss of employment in the construction and building-material industries.

A country with a rapidly rising urban population, a substantial part of which is already inadequately housed, the prospect of a still more acute housing shortage could have serious social consequences.

Governments must become more imaginative and less hidebound in their housing policies—or risk much worse problems in the future.

Election Interest Lacking

By DON O'HEARN
Deseret Park Bureau
Thompson News Service

TORONTO — The Federal election isn't arousing the interest around here that one might expect.

Despite the fact that it is agreed that the final result will probably be pivoted around Ontario, and that therefore all parties should be putting in that extra effort in her province, a good many members seem pretty well-disinterested, or at least not very eager to get out and work.

In fact when the election was first announced it was widely rumored that the session would cut off in mid-June rather than run to the end of the month so that member could work.

But now the feeling seems to be that the session probably won't be cut short, because not enough members are really interested.

For those who don't want to work the sittings of the house can be a good excuse, of course. They can say they are too busy.

Most surprisingly, it is said this even applies to the NDP.

One piece of scuttle-butt even says that many of the NDP'ers are indifferent because they feel this federal vote is a lost cause—that their party will be at a low point in it.

This speculation simply isn't to be believed.

The majority of NDP members are dedicated party men and not the type to be slowed down by the possibility of losing.

If they were, the party would have withered years ago.

Most of the members, one would say, will be knee-deep in the campaign as it gains momentum.

With the other two parties there probably will be less participation.

Premier Davis and Bob Nixon as leaders will be making a contribution.

But probably not too many of their supporters will be doing very much.

And still probably make some token effort. And then there will be exceptions, perhaps a good many of them, who will really pitch in.

But for the most part the run of the mill of the parties will probably do the necessary and little more.

What this illustrates, once more, is that there really is a great gap between federal and provincial party, particularly with the PCs and Liberals.

Portugal's New-found Freedom Shows

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Two weeks ago Portugal's largest newspaper O Seculo (The Century) published the following exuberant headline on the inauguration of Gen. Antonio de Spinola as head of the new provisional government. "a different government for a different country."

Reading through O Seculo, free to print what it wants for the first time in its history, one can read of the day-by-day liberalization of all the institutions of Portuguese life.

There were the two small front-page stories in the same issue about the arrest of a leading socialist for the first time in 47 years and the release of a number of people who worked for the secret police or PIDE under the former dictatorship.

That's an estimate which also goes back almost 45 years to include both the corporate state of the late dictator Antonio Salazar and of his recent successor, Marcelo Caetano.

In its back pages are some of the more encouraging, understatable, developments which freedom for Portugal was bound to bring about, namely demands by the long-controlled trade unions for higher wages and better working conditions.

The major threat comes from 200,000 textile workers and the skilled workmen at Lisnave, the huge ship repair and overhaul facility in the port of Lisbon for the super-tankers.

Meantime Gen. Antonio de Spinola, the tough guerrilla fighter, Portugal's most decorated soldier, a once-young veteran of the Spanish Civil War (on Franco's side), continues to surprise the world with what his military regime has done.

He remains the man who overthrew the dictatorial system of which he was a hero. He was overwhelmed with the conviction that the lords' (Lusitanian) line in Africa against the guerrillas would not work and but continue to weaken an already shaky Portugal at home.

Therefore the promotion of an army and its leading general actually bringing about the promises for liberalization made on winning their case has taken place for the first time in our modern age in Portugal. And this remains an all-most unique experience which we will watch carefully.

Last week a further event, apparently impossible a few weeks ago before Spinola threw out the Caetano dictatorship, was the face-to-face negotiations between his representatives and the guerrilla governments of Guinea-Bissau.

In the two larger territories of Mozambique and Angola, the guerrillas have been opened and Freilme (guerrilla) supporters are free to move around, even criticize in the liberated Portuguese African press the course of events.

It's Africa which brought about Gen. Spinola's change of heart more than Portugal and it will be in Africa where his unadventurous but mixed military-conservatives - socialists and even Communists will survive or fall.

The possible new threat to it is from the whites in the territories, not from the still determined guerrillas. In Angola where a rich minority, almost self-sufficient and a society of white Africans of Portuguese origin has grown up, there are stirrings for independence, but under white rule.

Such a development could make Angola into an Algeria of the south with the white settlers winning rather than losing as they did in Algeria, because of support, perhaps military from Rhodesia and South Africa.

Kingston Festival Runs Two Weeks

Kingston Whig-Standard

Festival Kingston, a two-week program of interesting displays and performances in the arts coupled with a full schedule of exciting sporting events, should not be interpreted as another addition to the already impressive list of tourist attractions in the Kingston area. While visitors will no doubt be welcome to enjoy most if not all of the many facets of the Festival, its principal purpose should be gauged by the pleasure and cultural enrichment gleaned from the participants, both amateur and professional.

The festival commenced last weekend and will run until June 9. Most of the events are free and the few admission fees to others are, without exception, reasonable.

While there are a total of about 14,700 tickets to be sold for the various events, members of the Festival Kingston Association executive committee to "advance sales" has been poor. Perhaps the recent burst of fine weather has people thinking about other things. Or perhaps Kingston is not yet capable of supporting this sort of sophistication.

But one way or the other, the organizers of Festival Kingston are to be commended for bringing this valuable enterprise to this community. We urge all residents of Kingston and the surrounding areas to take advantage of this unique opportunity.

Quinte Labor Council And The UCS

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Quinte District Labor Council really should show a little more concern for Belleville's established hierarchy. The Lord Mayor's refusal to be standing on their heads in fright even before Ian Reilly's notice of resignation and the boycott of the United Way Appeal has been discussed.

UCS president, Virginia O'Rourke, is concerned that the resignation of the QDLC should be "fully informed" before they act. In a roundabout way she is suggesting that they don't know what is behind closed doors) that most people have only read bits and it is what is going on — that's probably why so many citizens don't contribute.

I am sure that the executive of the QDLC will also want to be sure that any decision they come to will be based on all the facts". "All the facts include such tiresome details as exactly where all the money has gone.

It may make the agencies concerned upset that the "same players" are involved in asking the same questions day in and day out — that's unfortunate. But these factual areas of concern are forthcoming the same questions will likely be asked.

One wonders if all the fuss is really because "social planning" is the "mandate of the general public!" would go by the board if taxpayers money were not available. The more I ponder the question the more inclined I am to the opinion that the real concern is to protect the fantastic salaries that are paid to the professionals on the staff. I am not saying that they are not good men or that they are not worth it — but I really question whether or not we are getting our money's worth over for "social planning".

If these organizations received getting rid of the professionals and used the volunteers it is very likely that the services to the community could still collect the funds needed and still have the public understanding. But you know as well as I do that there is no intention of ever doing this. These organizations are, and have been too long in the playthings of the wealthy of the city who love to grace the boards and be seen associating with members of the "right" causes.

None of these boards carry any of the "needy" they talk so much about — they appoint properly amenable persons, mostly lawyers, doctors, or the fanatical few who are the more affluent members of the community. Even then the odd token appointment for window dressing but it does not amount to a row of beans.

No, we are not playing political favors at all but there has only been one team for years in the area and we can't get on it. When we are trying to say is, that there is no need for all these highly paid bureau-cra-ts do such a simple job. If there is, then those who need the help should be the ones to pay them. If that's politics, lets have more of it.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

It may have been the error of a poor postal clerk who got his geography mixed, or else perhaps a lovely censor who faced south when he tossed The Ontario Intelligencer into the mailbag for Cuba and inadvertently sent the journal on a trip to Scandinavia, but suffice it to say that a mailing clipped from a wrapper of the issue of 18 edition, sent to J. The long journey on horseback from Belleville to Washington has been the accomplished by Miss Gwen Lazier of this city, the courier bearing an invitation for the President of the United States to visit Belleville at the time of the Bicentennial of Canada celebration here next month. Lord Mayor Mikel received a telegram from Miss Lazier stating that she arrived in Washington safely, and that she had arranged to ship the faithful horse, Pat, back to Belleville and she will return home by rail. Men. Can milk really give you extra vitality?

Too few men realize the nutritional powers of milk as a food, and the resulting big contribution it can make to an adult male's vigour. Read why milk is, indeed, a man's drink...not just a child's.

Nature's most nearly perfect food.

Milk is just about the best all round package that Nature has ever come up with: a source of more nutrients you need, in better proportion, than any other single food.

You didn't know that, did you? Well, you've got plenty of company. Many adults think milk is only for children.

This idea is wrong and needs correcting. No one ever outgrows the need for milk.

Throughout all adult life, milk contributes significantly to the health and vitality of the man who drinks it regularly.

Increased vitality means increased enjoyment of life.

No man anywhere lives under greater pressures than the North American male. Ours is probably the fastest, most competitive society that has ever existed.

In short, it takes a lot out of you. Increasing your vitality level, therefore, can help you give it all you've got...because you'll have more "got" to give it.

An extra resource of stamina to draw on when the going gets tough.

Or of pep for leisure activities. (Lives there a man with soul so dead that he can't think of interesting things he could do with some extra drive at his disposal?)

Every glass of milk you drink gives the kind of solid nutritional support your body needs.

To help you have stamina to zip through the "must" parts of your day...with vigour left over to enjoy the fun parts.

Milk as part of an adult male's fitness programme.

Powerhouse though it is, don't expect milk to work miracles. Especially alone.

Robust health only results from a sensibly balanced kind of life. Enough sleep. Enough physical activity and exercise. Enough of the right foods.

Meat-and-potato men, this means you. You also need to eat fruits and green vegetables, cereals and milk. Every single day.

And milk. Too important a food to be ignored by any adult desirous of achieving health and fitness.

Nutritional facts about milk.

Milk provides many nutrients essential to adult health--and, importantly, provides them in a balance correctly proportioned to the body's needs. Milk is rated an excellent dietary source of NO LESS THAN FIVE essential nutrients:--

Calcium. Adult bones and teeth continue to need calcium to stay in good shape.

Protein. A very important health factor. Not many people realize that milk provides high quality protein.

Riboflavin. Another factor in maintaining adult health.

Vitamin A. Milk is an excellent source of this important vitamin.

Phosphorus. Another factor needed to maintain the health of adult bones and teeth.

In addition to these five, milk is a good dietary source of THIAMIN. In most cases VITAMIN D has been added in Ontario.

This is why milk has earned the description of "Nature's most nearly perfect food". And why it is so important that adults realize that they, too, need milk. Each day.

Getting back into the milk habit.

Relax. You don't have to revolutionize your way of life to enjoy the extra vitality that milk can help provide.

All you have to do is make room for it somewhere in your daily food intake.

You can add a glass of milk to whatever you have for breakfast. Or take a midafternoon milk-break instead of a coffee-break. Or have a soothing nightcap of milk. Or drink it with a meal, any meal.

Just remember that EVERY DAY is what it takes to get the most out of milk.

So that milk can help you get the most out of life.

Yes, you. A man who thought you'd long outgrown it.

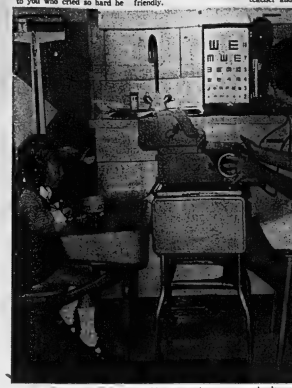
Milk



Milk can help a man get more out of life.

Getting Ready for the First Day

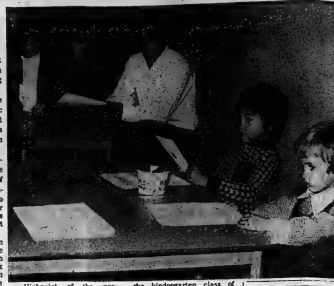
The first day of kindergarten.

When we started school it was cold turkey all the way. New shoes that pinched and a starched dress or unaccustomed tie. The kid next to you who cried so hard he threw up. Room temperature milk at recess and a nap on the floor with a blanket from home.

These days things in kindergarten are both more sophisticated and more friendly.

Right now, for example, three long summer months from the first day of school, members of Belleville's kindergarten class of '75 are touring their schools-to-be, meeting the principal and teacher and, most important, having a health assessment conducted by public health nurses and registered nursing assistants.

A joint program of the board of education and public health unit, this is the first year a health assessment has been added to kindergarten registration.



The day starts for preschoolers when they meet the principal or vice-principal of their school. She or he conducts a readiness test to determine whether the four or just-turned-five year old is mature enough to start school.

The child and parent then meet a public health nurse who conducts a thorough physical examination to check for problems from toe-tag in to underweight. The children are referred to their family physician if a problem exists. The public health nurse also conducts a developmental test to determine gross motor skills, fine motor co-ordination, social and language skills. The kids drop raisins into a little bottle, stack blocks, identify colors and concepts in the test.

Later, an audio and vision test are conducted.

To check their hearing, the children wear headphones through which they hear sounds of various pitches. They drop colored blocks into a container whenever they hear a sound. Vision is checked through the use of an illiterate eye chart which use only the letter E; the child must indicate which way the "finger" point.

Finally for the kids at least, comes the high point of the program when they visit the kindergarten in progress to watch the "big kids" at their learning games.

Highpoint of the pre-school health assessment program for future kindergarteners is the visit to the class they will attend in September. Tracy Butcher, just five, and Nadine Van Haarlem, four, watch the kindergarten class of Karen Schermerhorn at Park Dale Public School. Their respective parents, Mrs. Bernie Butcher and Arie Van Harriem sit in, too.

Hearing and vision are tested in the Board of Education-Hastings and Prince Edward County Health Unit pre-school health assessment program just beginning this year at Belleville public schools. A physical examination is part of the program as a developmental test. Here Tracy Butcher has her hearing tested by Sharon Drukop at Park Dale Public School.

The Rednersville Women's Institute celebrated their 65th anniversary in the Church Hall May 23, at a meeting attended by more than 100 women from other Prince Edward County W.I. branches.

Edith Cairns, president, and Mabel Soderdesk, past president greeted guests at the door.

The floral decorations were arranged by Florence Waterhouse and a pot of yellow mums was provided by Audra Brickman in memory of Emma Brickman.

Marion Townsend, secretary-treasurer, introduced the head table guests: Frances Young, district secretary-treasurer; Phyllis McFaul, district director; Mrs. McFiggan, guest speaker; Evelyn Barber, provincial board director; Audra Brickman, former branch, district, and area president and director, and Edith Cairns.

After Evelyn Barber welcomed the group, Edith Cairns gave the announcements about coming events, including the June 4 trip to Oshawa and the June 19 Bloomfield meeting in honor of Shirley Vincent.

A sing-song took place before Mrs. McFiggan, camera and horticulture enthusiast from Cobourg, talked about a recent trip to the Smoky Mountains of Tennessee, showing slides to illustrate her commentary.

A large birthday cake decorated with the Institute motto was served at the lunch.

The May meeting of the Canniffon-Corbyville Women's Institute took place in the Institute Hall, chaired by President Gertie Bowers.

It was decided to again sponsor a baseball team during the summer. Plans were made for the June potluck supper. Janet Latch won a draw for a poncho.

Edna Welsh presented a program about the mining areas in Hastings County, complete with slides of the different mines. She described the history and current operations of the iron ore mine at Marmora, the talc mine at Madoc, the marble quarries at Actinolite, the satalite mines at Bancroft, and the old gold mine at Eldorado, now marked by a provincial plaque.

Many Marmora residents attended the annual Hymn Sing presented by the Junior Choir of St. Andrew's Church May 22.

The choir members, dressed in Centennial costumes, served desserts to the audience before assembling in the auditorium to sing.

A purse of money was presented by the choir to Rev. John Peters who accepted on behalf of Dr. Robert McClure for his mission work in Borneo.

Roses were given to Jessie Killian, Sandra Mitchell, Bernice Smith and Diane Cole for their assistance during the past year, and a serving tray was given to Barbara Sandersen in appreciation of her leadership of the choir.

Emmanuel Church, Foxboro, was the scene of the afternoon wedding may 11 of Dawn Edw., 23-mber and John Edward Allen.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Bamber, Foxboro; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen, Kingston.

Rev. Abel Parsons officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire gown of chiffon over taffeta with pointed neckline with yoke and collar of appliqued lace. A bolette cap held her double veil and she carried red roses.

Mrs. Eric Sager, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Brian Allen, Kingston, the groom's sister in law, and Cathy Metcalfe, Kingston. They wore coral red printed crepe gowns and carried yellow mums.

Brian Allen, the groom's brother, of Kingston, was best man assisted by ushers Dale Bamber, Foxboro, and Gus Tsaklis, Kingston.

A dinner dance followed the ceremony at the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Club.

Following a wedding trip to Quebec, the couple took up residence at 38 Meadowbrook Road, Toronto.

One of our summer pleasures is to take a daily walk through Corby Park.

Its tulips, roses, pansies, lilies to name a few of the many kinds of flowers seen there are among what is termed, and we quote: "the pleasure that daily living holds . . . the stuff by which happiness can be sustained."

The question arises: Who is responsible for producing such quality of beauty and pleasure? To whom are we as citizens indebted for this joy in our lives?

Can you guess his answer? "The Marigold..."

Blue Jeans Are Big Business Now

ROME (Reuter) — Spring has come to Rome, bringing tourists to the cafes, tulips to the flower stalls and, every where you look, blue jeans.

Blue denim jeans are such big business in Italy that the battle to corner the market has virtually reached street warfare.

Three different Italian manufacturers — Jesus Jeans, Fook and Queen — have gone to extremes in billboard publicity.

Jesus Jeans' ads show the denim-clad, shapely bottom of Donna Jordan, former starlet with cult film-maker Andy Warhol. The ad carries the biblical quotation, "If you love me, follow me."

Quarry advertisements show a man fully clad in denim, including umbrella, tie and bowler hat, next to a Botticelli-style woman naked save for a strategic denim fig leaf.

But Fook has the last word in audacity with a nude figure, shown only from waist to mid-thigh, with a largish denim fig leaf. The advertising blurb says: "Fook for Adam and Eve—real jeans, meaning uni-sex jeans. The catch: Which is the real Eve—or a youthful Adam?

The battle of the billboards actually began in the United States, says the man who started it all here, Dilando Nicchi, president of a Milanese advertising agency.

Last year, Nucini's firm raised eyebrows with another advertisement for Jesus Jeans, reading, "Thou shalt have no other jeans before me."

L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican daily newspaper, attacked the advertisement as tasteless but sales quadrupled.

"We chose that slogan after we saw that the sales of Levi denims had soared in the U.S. after their advertisement appeared showing the Statue of Liberty dressed in jeans," Nicchi explained.

"Jeans always used to be identified with cowboys and the wide-open spaces. But then ,with advent of hippies and the worldwide youth rebellion, wearing jeans came to be identified with being anti-establishment.

"We picked on religion as the symbol of the Italian establishment."

The sole protest so far to the current campaign comes from the religious magazine Il Borghese, which put Donna Jordan's backside on its front cover last week with the sarcastic comment: "The newest Easter message for children."

The very success of such publicity campaigns might prove the kiss of death for jeans as a fashion. But, as one Italian manufacturer was quick to point out, the fad is moving on through Europe and his company's exports to Britain and France have soared this spring.

"We don't feel the market is saturated," he said. "European jeans are still evolving. In particular, they are changing shape from the American product.

"They are also becoming more personalized. Buying a pair of jeans used to be like buying a picture frame—it's all very standardized. From the basic pair of jeans the purchaser adds the rest."

Last year wearers patterned their jeans with embroidered designs of palm trees, cigarette packets, and female profiles.

The trend this year is, for women, maxi or midi skirts in denim, often with lace—manufactured, hand-made or antique. The price—from $35 to $60.

One of the biggest sellers with the youngest set is stiletto-length denim pinafores trimmed with multi-colored ruffles.

Radical Techniques Get Results for Her

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Irene Kassorla says her professional life essentially started when she was 42.

That was after she developed techniques which enabled her to generate speech from mute, autistic children, thereby markedly altering children's schizophrenia.

While attending the University of California at Los Angeles she was assigned hospital observation duties.

"I went back to my school and wrote a paper saying doctors are rather psychopathic at 'such and such hospital,'" she said in an interview.

After the papers were graded and handed back, her professor asked, "Who is Irene Kassorla? May I speak with you for a moment?"

"I thought he was going to do something awful," Kassorla he said. "Look, what do you want?' I told him I wanted a patient and I wanted to try out my own ideas, which of course was absurd because you don't get a patient for another 10 years—when you're close to graduation."

She got a patient, nevertheless, and within a week she was able to get remarkable results from a sick little girl.

By simply reversing what was done at the hospital, Dr. Kassorla said she reinforced healthy responses, ignored the bizarre, and the child got better.

"Before, doctors would see a psychotic doing something crazy and say, 'Oh, that's all right! I'd say, 'Hey, that's crazy, why the heck are you doing? Stop it!'

"I'm never dishonest with such a person. I give him reality, and this is what is important about my techniques—treat the psychotic normally and he acts normal!"

For three years she continued work with autistic children. Then in 1965 she was invited to further her studies in London by Hans Eysenck, professor of the Institute of Psychiatry at the University of London.

In London "again very marvelous things happened." she worked with a 52-year-old patient who hadn't spoken in over 30 years. She recalled he was like a rock but that she was able to get him talking after 31 days.

"The papers got hold of it and started calling me 'miracle worker.'" Then the BBC came to me and made a couple of documentaries on my work with this man."

Dr. Kassorla returned to the United States and instructorship. While in Los Angeles she was asked to do therapy sessions at a television station. She says she thought it was an excellent idea because most people undergo the same kind of difficulties as the psychotic.

"The psychotic will act crazy, using it as a language, and very often we respond to it," she explained. "But, with normal people, psychotic behavior is not as easy to see because it is not as magnified. The psychotic is different only in frequency, intensity, and volume.

"With normal people there's the same tendency to bury feelings of inadequacy and insecurity, and that's when one begins to feel different from others and starts to distort reality.'

"Everyone fails," she added.

"Everybody feels inadequate at times and everybody feels afraid. But the difference between a successful person and a mediocre person is that the first one goes right on trying after a failure. The other sits back and waits until he's no longer afraid."

Edmonton Nudists

'Relationships Improve When Clothes Come Off'

EDMONTON (CP) — Ernie Robinson, his wife and their two children are dedicated to the principle that human relationships improve when people shed their clothing.

Mr. Robinson is president of the 100-member Hellos Edmonton, a nudist club that has been operating since the 1940s and offers its members facilities for sunbathing, sauna, sports or just relaxing.

Only about half of the club's activities are done in the nude, Mr.,Robinson said in an interview. The remainder are social occasions at which clothes.

Hellos is one of two clubs in Edmonton and one of about 1,000 in North America affiliated with the American Sunbathing Association. He said there are unknown numbers of private clubs and non-affiliates.

The Edmonton club looks for family groups rather than single members.

Nudists come in every age from newborn to, in the case of Helios, 84. Their most common trait, Mr. Robinson said, is an ability to talk with their mates and children openly about the physical differences between the sexes and communicate easily on most other subjects.

"Nudists have got rid of a lot of the social hangups."

Mr. Robinson said nudists become nudists for a host of reasons, most important of which are:

—A desire for fellowship with open, friendly people.

—A desire to associate with people who feel it is healthy mentally and physically to be nude.

—The need to get away from their stereotyped roles in life, take off their clothes and be themselves for a while with people who want to do the same thing.

"Whether a nudist is a wealthy lawyer, a ditch digger or a housewife, they all look the same and the cut of their clothes can't act as a social barrier, he said.

Mr. Robinson emphasized that the nudist club is no place to look for wife-swapping swingers.

He said a fully-clothed person is far more sexually stimulating than a group of naked ones because once people take off their clothes they leave nothing to the imagination.

This was especially important for children who see not only what the sexual organs look like but how they change over the years and how they develop during puberty.

It was much easier for a young person exposed to the opposite sex to adjust during the teen years than for one who can only imagine what is hidden under the clothing.

Nudism is never used for exhibitionism, shock or embarrassment, he said, adding that he considers streaking a fad which does not especially interest him.

Hellos operates a summer camp where various sports, especially swimming, are available. In winter, it holds dances, parties and indoor swims and saunas at a city pool.

Man Coaxed to Marry A Poor Husband

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I was left with five children to raise when my husband left me. Now I have been going with a divorced man who is very bitter about his previous marriage. He talks about his kids and every once in a while they run away and go to his folks' place. His family is really close, and they are good to my children and me too.

This man will take me out steady and then out of a clear blue sky I don't hear from him for two or three weeks. Then all of a sudden he phones and our romance is on again.

He told me once that I should find another guy because he'll never get married again and I want to get married again now. Every time I do go out with somebody else he is quick to start phoning and taking me out again.

I love him and I want some advice on how to get him to want to get married again or if it's worth it.

Too Indefinite.

Dear Too Indefinite: Better talk to yourself, consider pros and cons. Decide which you want most — the man, or indefinite marriage.

He has been badly hurt and you can't blame him for dreading a possible deep hurt again. A man who has to be coaxed and pushed into marriage won't make a very good husband, will he? Either put up with the present relationship or break it off, leaving yourself free to find a marriage partner. Then go ahead. Regrets about what might have been are a mere waste of time.

Dear Doris: I liked that letter from Past Forty. I feel a clinic for older women, such as she is getting started, is a step in the right direction. So many women are clueless about what is happening to them, which makes the whole thing more fearful than it needs to be. Not to mention their families!

I am enclosing a quarter for a copy of your "Facing Forty".

Shurl.

Dear Shurl: The newspaper, for one, is certainly a time of anxiety for many otherwise healthy women. Nevertheless, it is helpful.

I am sending you our leaflet which lists booklets for further reading on the second half of life, by the way, if any readers would like to tell us a bout recently published booklets they have found helpful, tell us, will you?

Confidential to Uptight: Pay attention to your doctor and your dentist. Headaches for what they are: tension headaches. And he is doubtless right in saying that you can't change your husband much after 25 years of marriage.

How did you manage to link up with such an unpretentious, uncommunicative person? If there is still some love there, try to shut your TV back and find some peace within yourself. It may be vile to do this through your church, or you may find it helpful to take up Yoga, which teaches relaxation and meditation. In other words take time out to think.

A social case worker could help you look at your life realistically and to find yourself squarely. Try one!

(Get Doris to help you take a new look at what's bothering you, writing in care of this newspaper. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Church Women Step Forward

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The 115th synod of the Anglican diocese of Huron voted Tuesday to allow women to become wardens of the church.

A total of eight members of the clergy and 11 lay delegates—eight of them women—opposed the motion. There are 93 clergymen and 615 lay delegates registered for the synod.

Another resolution that would allow lowered the age to 18 from 21 for the appointment of a warden was defeated.

Ann Landers

Virgin Wife Needs New Doctor

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are in our middle 30s. We have been married nearly a year and we love each other very much. Our problem is a real one. I swear I am not making it up. We have never had intercourse.

On our wedding night we tried but nothing happened. We tried a few more times but still nothing happened. When we returned from our honeymoon I went to our family doctor. He said I was perfectly normal but sometimes it takes more effort and more trying.

Well after a month of "effort and trying" we gave up. I'm ashamed to go back to that doctor.

George is a swell guy but I am not fare whether he considers himself inadequate or if he figures I'm to blame. He seems to be a little upset with the doctor—thinks we should have been given more help. Please Ann is this problem uncommon? I don't think it's fair for George or to me to go on this way. What do you suggest?—Virgie Wife

Dear Wife: For heaven's sake, woman, go to another doctor! And make sure it's a gynecologist this time. You can be helped and I urge you to find that help immediately. Your doctor should have asked you to check back with him until it achieved the desired results. The "problem" isn't that complicated.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been reading your column for many years, but the most helpful bit of advice I ever got was that off-beat "hint" from a reader on how to fall asleep when you are tense.

She said the tongue is one of the strongest muscles in the body and when a person is uptight the tongue usually tenses up. Her suggestion—to relax the tongue in the middle of the night and it's away from the roof or from the teeth—was just terrific. Bless her. Bless you.

I tried it that very night and had the best night's sleep in ages. You're a gem Annie old girl.—Jim From Atlasa

Dear Jim: Thanks honey. I like you, too. Pleasant dreams.

Dear Ann Landers: You give advice to everybody. Will you please pass on the following to those people who goes for supermarkets as well as high-class department stores.

1. Cut out the canned music. Only an idiot needs to have his eardrums assaulted hours a day. (Saves electricity too.)

2. Put on more checkout signs and enforce them. Even though there are signs some people smoke anyway. Simply instruct your salespeople to ask customers to put out their cigarettes. It will reduce your cleaning costs and cut down on losses from burned merchandise.

3. In grocery stores have separate checkout lines for those who want to pay by check. The check-cashers take twice as long.

4. Don't have turnstiles inside the entrance. People with arthritis or other physical handicaps find these barriers terrible inconvenience. Thank you.—Exhausted Shopper

Dear Ex: Here's your letter and every point you have made sounds reasonable to me. Thanks for writing.

Skid Road Home for Nun

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sister Antonette of the Franciscan Sisters of Atonement calls the privately bartered men of Skid Road "my boys."

Off and on since the Depression, Sister Antonette has opened the door of the small convent adjacent to Oppenheimer Park and handed out sandwiches.

Now inflation has hit the bread line as the spiralling cost of living has forced many to harder each day to give out good cooking sandwiches.

But somehow the Lord provides; she says, and somehow a meal hasn't arisen.

The Franciscans don't receive funds from any regular source. All the money needed to feed up to 400 men a day comes from donations.

"Now and again people lecture us about how we shouldn't help the needy—that we're just condoning indolence—but we don't ignore that."

The sisters buy day-old bread, end cuts of bologna, pieces of cheese . . . anything to make a sandwich. Each man is given four sandwiches—two with meat and two with peanut butter or salmon or whatever has been collected.

At the beginning of the month, when welfare cheques have been issued, the queues drop and only a couple of hundred sandwiches are given away.

At the end of the month, when money is tight on Skid Road, the queue becomes considerably longer and sometimes food is taken from the nuns' table if the sandwiches run out.

Occasionally a destitute woman will arrive at the door asking for money. This poses a problem.

Stanfield Under Fire

VANCOUVER (CP) — Distance is not stilling the controversy that has developed in the Maritime Provinces over Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's rejection of Moncton mayor Leonard Jones as a PC candidate.

As the Conservative leader moved across the country to begin a two-day British Columbia swing in preparation for the July 8 federal election the Jones problem came with him.

In Saskatoon Thursday two listeners on an open-line radio show pressed him on the matter, one calling it irresponsible and another saying he was a bit of a hypocrite.

The Conservative leader landed here following a 19-hour cross-country jaunt from Halifax, marking the Saskatoon area stopover that was also long enough for him to take some pokes at Liberal ministers and New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

Responding to long-heard complaints that grain delivories, he described Justice Minister Otto Lang, cabinet spokesman for the Canadian wheat board, and Transport Minister Jean Marchand as persons who wouldn't be able to hold their jobs in industry.

Today he participates in an open-line radio show, makes a visit to Government House, Vancouver Island and returns here in time to make a speech in suburban Surrey at night.

On the open-line radio program, Mr. Stanfield reiterated that as a matter of principle he could not accept Mr. Jones, who opposes Conservative policy on bilingualism.

One woman said that Jack Horner, the maverick Conservative who was MP for Crowfoot, Alta., in the last Parliament, speaks against party policy and is not kicked out of the party. But the same attitude was not shown to Mr. Jones.

Meanwhile, one of the Conservatives who do not see eye-to-eye with Mr. Stanfield on matters of bilingualism, nonetheless declined to criticize him for his action against Mr. Jones.

Norval Horner, brother of Jack and MP for Battleford-Kindersley in the last Parliament, said reporters he disagrees with many aspects of official bilingualism, including the printing of public documents in the two official languages in the West. He said he would disband the office of Keith Spicer, the official language commissioner.

But pressed by the reporters, he declined to criticize Mr. Stanfield for rejecting Mayor Jones, a strong opponent of the Official Languages Act, which provides for use of two official languages in the public service.

Mr. Horner was interviewed in Biggar, Sask., a small agricultural community about an hour's drive from Saskatoon. There Mr. Stanfield received an enthusiastic reception with a speech that mirrored remarks by John Diefenbaker, criticism of ministers responsible for agriculture, trade and jobs at Prime Minister Trudeau and Mr. Lewis.

He said a vote for the New Democratic Party or for Liberals in the election is a vote for more of the same—a reference to the last minority Parliament, where the Liberals were kept in office by the NDP.

"If these two gentlemen (Mr. Lewis and Mr. Trudeau) want to govern, they should get together in the next Parliament. I think it is time for us all to move the mattress over to the other side of the House," Mr. Stanfield said.

He painted a picture of Mr. Lang as "first discouraging the growing of wheat and then seeking all he could get to meet market demands. Meanwhile, Jean Marchand said transportation was in a mess and could not move the grain.

Students Get $38 Million

TORONTO (CP) — James Auld, minister of colleges and universities, announced Thursday that his ministry has budgeted $37.8 million for student aid programs for the 1974-75 academic year.

Almost $33 million has been set aside for the Ontario Student Assistance program.

Mr. Auld said that all forms, pamphlets and literature about the program have been revised this year so that students and their parents can understand more clearly how the amount of the loan is calculated.

The program will be advertised in weekly and farm newspapers to bring it to the attention of students who might not otherwise hear about it.

Mr. Auld added that the ministry has run a pilot advertising program in the Italian language media in Ontario to determine whether this method will provide ethnic groups with basic information about student assistance.

A new program was introduced this year to provide short-term emergency loans and loan and bursary programs launched in 1973 for part-time students will be continued.

Mr. Auld also announced that more than 1,000 Ontario graduate students have been awarded scholarships. The scholarships offer students $800 a term, plus the amount of their tuition fee for a maximum of three consecutive terms.

The awards were made on the basis of academic merit, determined by a selection board.

Colleges Boosted

TORONTO (CP) — Additional grants for Ontario's community colleges totalling $3.6 million in the 1974-75 academic year were announced in the legislature Thursday by James Auld, minister of colleges and Universities.

He said "dramatic increases" in enrolment have placed a substantial burden on the colleges because their operating grants are based on the previous year's enrolment.

The minister told the legislature the full-time enrolment at the 22 community colleges increased 10 per cent in 1973 over the previous year and the forecast is for an annual growth of eight per cent.

Support Increased

TORONTO (CP) — James Auld, minister of colleges and universities, said Thursday his ministry is proposing a 14-per-cent increase in operating support to Ontario's universities.

In addition to this increase, supplementary grants of more than $6 million will be shared by Carleton Lakehead Laurentian, Trent and York universities and the University of Waterloo.

These additional grants are being provided after recommendations of the former committee on university affairs.

A total of $2.8 million, to cover the special costs of university programs for Francophone Ontarians, will be given to the University of Ottawa and to Laurentian and York universities.

Airport Not Definite

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario can't build a new airport on Toronto Island without the approval of the federal government, John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communications, said Thursday.

Commenting on reports that the provincial government was pressing for a second airport there, Mr. Rhodes said no decision had been taken by any level of government as far as he knew.

Kerr Claims Drug Suspects Tipped Off

TORONTO (CP) — Patrons of the Landmark Hotel in Fort Erie, Ont., were tipped to the presence of undercover RCMP operatives by hotel employees shortly before a dawn raid, Solicitor-General George Kerr said Thursday.

Mr. Kerr, speaking outside the legislature, said there will be "a full and open inquiry" into the May 11 raid in which 43 of 115 patrons were stripped and searched.

All 36 women present in the hotel were stripped by police-women.

None of the women was named in the four drug charges that resulted from the raid by 50 police.

Both Liberal and New Democratic Party members demanded Mr. Kerr's resignation over the incident and what they say is his apologist attitude for the police methods.

Mr. Kerr said the Ontario Police Commission will investigate the raid.

"I realize full well that the legality of the actions of the police is not an issue in this instance and there is general acceptance that the police acted within the law," said Mr. Kerr.

However, he said he was concerned that the police decided to automatically search all females on the premises.

He told the legislature that two employees at the hotel have criminal records and that at least one employee has been convicted of possession of drugs.

"During the course of the evening police officers inside the hotel were apparently recognized and a number of patrons left," said Mr. Kerr.

"One officer was told when the actual raid took place 'you fellows are too late, we knew the police were coming and one guy came around and collected most of the drugs and left before you came in'."

Outside the house, Mr. Kerr suggested police were probably frustrated when they failed to turn up a large quantity of drugs.

Police Intelligence reports had indicated that this location "was being used as a halfway house by traffickers who were pushing drugs to teen-agers," said the minister.

However, Mr. Kerr said he was concerned about laws which allowed police to conduct massive stop-and-strip searches. They are a holdover from the days of organized crime and prohibition.

Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) said he wasn't happy with the minister's report to the House and called for his resignation.

TV Creates Cynics

TORONTO (CP) — Television has helped spawn cynicism among children, says a report made public by the Ontario government Thursday.

"The generation of children brought up with television has shown an intense cynicism towards the state of the world and social reality as portrayed by television," the report said.

The report, a survey of public attitudes ordered by the ministry of transportation and communications, recommends that telecommunications policy should take into account its potential effect on children "especially the capacity of television to create cynicism."

It also said that next to face-to-face conversation, life telephone emerged as the second most valued form of communication.

"Except in northwestern Ontario, people do not judge the costs of telephone service to be high in relation to the benefits derived from it," the report said.

The report also said that conventional mass media are unable to satisfy the wide variety of area and interests arising from the varied cultures found in Ontario.

It recommended that communications policy "should recognize . . . dissatisfaction with non-existent (minority) programming which contributes to the social alienation of considerable segments of the population."

The report also said children rely heavily on television for finding out what the world is like but they do not seem to recognize the effect television is having on them."

Land Tax Approved

TORONTO (CP) — The government's controversial land speculation tax got final clause-by-clause approval Thursday night.

The legislation, which would impose a 50-per-cent tax on land speculation profits, now needs only third reading and royal assent before going into the law books.

LARGELY CATHOLIC

Roman Catholicism is the largest single religious denomination in Canada, comprising 45 per cent of the population.

Turner Tees Off On Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner blasted Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and the Conservative party Thursday night for what he called a two-faced economic stance and policies that would lead Canada into a recession.

At the nomination meeting in Ottawa Centre for Liberal MP Hugh Poulin, Mr. Turner said that following his February, 1973, budget, these Conservative "foes" said government economic policies were not a parsimonary enough and called for higher expenditures and a larger projected deficit.

"That shrill voice could not have been more wrong," Mr. Turner said. "In the event, our real national output grew by 7.1 per cent last year, the largest in 17 years and the second highest after Japan in the industrial world. Employment grew by a record 3.2 per cent with the creation of 430,000 new jobs.

"By the fall of 1973, their monumental error of judgment became apparent to the Conservative party. Then they spoke from their other face," charging that government policies were too inflationary and calling for more restrictive fiscal and monetary policies.

Mr. Turner said Mr. Stanfield now is calling for restraint and promising a conservative government "prudent to the point of frugality."

"But he does not oppose the measures responsible for half of the increase in government spending this year—those aimed at moderating the impact of inflation on Canadians—and he does not indicate the slightest idea about making a substantial cut in the other half."

Mr. Turner said the Conservatives "don't bother to explain" how they could tighten fiscal policy, cut taxes and at the same time increase expenditures.

"The only effect of their stated policy, however, could be to slow the growth of production and employment."

He said Mr. Stanfield's call for a tighter money supply "could only . . . drive interest rates far above their present, already-high levels."

It would also discourage demand and slow the capital investment needed to increase supply and "get at the root of the inflation problem."

The Conservative proposal of a 90-day wage-price freeze and a follow-up control period of 18 months to two years also would "retard growth of output and employment," Mr. Turner said.

He criticized Mr. Stanfield for not spelling out specifics of the proposal and cited news reports indicating that Conservatives are deeply divided over the freeze-control program advocated by their own party."

Man's Body Recovered

Two Belleville firefighters, Jack Finkle and Hyrone Helen, found the body of Arthur Donald Peterson, 35, yesterday as they were boating in the Bay of Quinte opposite the Point Anne shore.

Peterson had been reported drowned last May 18, after he fell into the Moira River from the top of the CPR trestle near Dundas Street West.

Members of the Belleville police department's scuba squad had spent a considerable amount of time searching the mouth of the river and the Bay in the past two weeks in an attempt to find Peterson's body.

The two firefighters, who were out in their private boat, found the body shortly before noon yesterday and towed it to Pt. Anne and called police.

LaSalle Ambulance attendants took the body to the Belleville General Hospital where it was identified and Dr. W.F. Bates performed an autopsy.

Wrecking Site Can Be Dangerous

Bata Likes Hydro Line

Bata Industries Ltd. has come out in full support of Ontario Hydro's preferred route for a 500,000-volt transmission line as the only one of three that would least interfere with the company's redevelopment plans for Batawa.

Gordon Hanna, a Bata company representative, presented a brief to that effect before the Soland Commission inquiry into the 100-mile bulk power transmission line between Lennox Generating Station and Oshawa Thursday.

Hydro's preferred route presented to the commission in the past two days, passes north of Batawa in its routing of the Trent River.

In Sidney, the line moves west in the fourth concession before dropping into the third concession to follow the TransCanada Pipeline to the Trent. A rejected line situation alternative would have crossed the Trent between Batawa and Frankford.

Bata plans to mold the two communities into one large developed residential area.

"If a Hydro line was built across the development," said Mr. Hanna, "it would be detrimental to our proposal."

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Friday.

Thursday, May 30, 12:04 p.m. service call to the corner of North Front Street and College Street to clean up gasoline spilled in a car-motorcycle accident.

Thursday, May 30, 7:12 p.m. cardboard fire in a trailer at the rear of Bud Gill's Appliances, 260 Coleman Street, no damage.

Thursday May 30 8:11 p.m. mattress fire at 298 Coleman Street, minor damage, fire caused by smoking in bed.

Thursday, May 30, 11:40 p.m. malfunction in alarm system at Doctor's Hotel, Station Street, no damage.

Trespassers in Danger At Point Anne Site

Destruction fascinates as much as construction.

At least, that's the worrying experience of contractors now emptying and wrecking abandoned Canada Cement-Lafarge complex at Point Ane.

The heavy industrial facilities sprawling over 200 acres are in various stages of demolition and hold numerous dangers for trespassers, says E.D. Harvey, project manager for the U.S. contractor, Standard Machine and Equipment.

Trouble is people persist in wandering on the wrecking site and have even evaded security guards, says Mr. Harvey.

He's even had to call provincial police to warn young people off.

Major concern is that strangers, unacquainted with the extent of demolition could be seriously hurt amid the building wreckage and equipment, says Mr. Harvey.

"There are places here where people who don't know the work could get hurt. With the size of the job something could fall on a trespasser and they could lie there for days maybe before someone might find them. "It's particularly dangerous at night.

"This is a demolition job and must be respected as such. No trespassers are allowed."

The problem becomes acute on weekends when the numbers of the curious multiply.

Last weekend, despite the presence of a security guard, trespassers entered the site and smashed the cab window of a 140-ton crane, with a bar. The bar also struck the brake on the crane's block and tackle. The block, weighing about a ton, crashed 25 feet to the ground.

"Had it fallen on anyone around the crane they would have been killed," said Mr. Harvey.

He said he has considered advertising in hopes of getting the danger warning across to the public.

More than 30 men now are employed on the site which is to be levelled in two years.

Special Events For Centennial At St. Andrew's

St. Andrew's Church in Belleville will begin celebration of the centennial of the Presbyterian Church in Canada at 8a 11 a.m. service Sunday. The service will coincide with the opening of the 100th General Assembly in Kitchener.

Highlights of the Sunday service will be special music by the choir, all of whom will be dressed in the costume of 100 years ago. A tenor will be guest soloist. The congregation has also been invited to wear period costume and there will be a display of centennial banners made by members of the church school. A reception of new members will take place and a coffee hour will be held following the service.

The St. Andrew's congregation, 14 years old, is planning something special for each month of centennial year. A highlight will be a Burns Night in January, when the Scottish background of Presbyterianism in Canada will be commemorated.

The octdoor name board of the church has already been changed from gold on black to the centennial colors of white lettering on a divided blue and red background. The red is from Canada's flag, and the blue has always been the Presbyterian color. The centennial official symbol includes the maple leaf and the burning bush for Presbyterianism.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada was the name agreed upon when the various branches of Presbyterianism in Canada came together in union on June 15, 1875 in Montreal.

Students Elect New Officers

A year-old students' organization, the Belleville district chapter of the Future Secretaries Association met at the reservation centre, Pinnacle St., May 28 for its annual election of officers.

They are: president, Kristina Stakevicius from Moira Secondary School, vice-president, Rosemary Doran from Centennial secretary, Anglea Akey from Moira, treasurers, Nancy Lupenette from Quinte

Guest speaker was Les Backus, head of the business department at Quinte Secondary School.

Plans were completed for a car wash June 1 at Belleville Plaza.

Letter to OMB Protests City Buying Land

A Belleville citizen has protested the Moira River Conservation Authority's purchase of the Potter property west of Belleville.

Clarence Young has asked the Ontario Municipal Board for an impartial investigation "to ensure that the purchase is necessary . . . the price is a fair and equitable price . . . and there is not and will not be any conflict of interest."

The Potter property is being sold to the Moira River Conservation Authority by Ernie Potter for $700,000. The city of Belleville, township of Sidney and the provincial government are sharing the cost over a two-year period. The province will bear the major share of the cost.

"There have been suggestions, which have not been denied, that this property was offered a short time ago to a well-known local developer for $300,000 and he turned it down," said Mr. Young in his letter to the OMB.

"I share the feelings of a large number of residents that this purchase should be the subject of a referendum."

Traffic Lights Go On Monday

Traffic signals on North Front St. at both Tracy St. and Valleyview Cres. will be activated Monday.

Police will be posted Monday to assist motorists and pedestrians until they become familiar with the new lights.

The new lights, like most of those installed recently in the city, will show the "no walking" red hand symbol at all times. That walk symbol will not show until the pedestrian activates the button on the post.

A spokesman for City Hall's traffic department said most pedestrians don't realize they can't cross the road until they push the button.

Traffic on North Front St. will not stop at the Tracy and Valleyview intersections until the signals are activated by loops under the road on those streets. The loops are activated by a car pulling up to the intersection.

However, during peak periods, from 7 to 9 a.m. and from 4 to 6 p.m. and on Thursday and Friday nights, there will be a 90 second lag between the time a car pulls up to the intersection and the green light flashes on.

Belleville Expert Off to Brussels

A Belleville industrialist left for Brussels, Belgium Friday to spend two months establishing the music boxes and barrel organs in the possession of the Royal Conservatory of Music museum there.

Frank Foley is a well know collector of old mechanical music devices. He was asked by the curator of the Brussels museum to assist with their collection and help, among other things, to date the objects.

"I think it's an honor that Europeans came to Canada for assistance of this type," said Mr. Foley.

Mrs. Foley and two children will follow later when school ends.

Tyendinaga Wants Corridor Shifted

Ontario Hydro's 500,000-volt transmission line from its generation point near Bath to Oshawa should straighten a mile existing services corridor in the Tyendinaga Township, Reeve Leonard Walsh told the Soland Commission hearing Thursday.

Reeve Walsh suggested the Hydro right of way should be within a 3½-mile wide band of southern Tyendinaga township that already holds two pipelines, Highways 2 and 401, and the Canadian National Railway tracks.

Hydro's preferred route passes through the township north of this multi-service corridor that begins almost immediately north of the northern boundary of the Tyendinaga Reserve, the reeve said.

Utility officials said Thursday Hydro's preferred route basically follows the multi-services corridor concept in its location.

John Sedgwick of Hydro's transmission line department, told the hearing the Hydro right-of-way comes close to the TransCanada Gas Pipeline, the upper limit of the corridor.

At the township's east end, the right-of-way is approximately 1,500 feet from the gas line, in the west about 1—1¼ miles. Hydro's route enters the township in concession two and leaves in concession three.

Winning Draw

Dr. Charles Best, left, co-discoverer of insulin, drew the winning ticket Thursday in Toronto on the lottery for the Diabetic Children's Camp. With him are Laura Shettell of Belleville and Mrs. Best. Winner of the $20,000 top prize was Ted Powell of Waterloo.

Hydro Promises Little Disruption

Selective cutting of vegetation, restoration and reforestation of areas inside the right-of-way for Ontario Hydro's 500 kV transmission line are the major methods to be used to diminish the visual impact of steel towers.

In a brief submitted to the Soland Commission Thursday, forester Tom Griffiths outlined procedures the provincial utility would take to restore rights-of-way following work on the Lennox Generating Station to Oshawa route.

Trees and other vegetation would no longer be cut from the entire right-of-way. Only vegetation on the lower site would be cut.

On the right-of-way only trees within 15 feet of the maximum sag of conductors would be removed.

After work was complete, crews would replant compatible vegetation and seed roads used to gain access to the tower sites.

The approximate 110-mile right-of-way would be maintained by Hydro through annual patrols, tree pruning and use of herbicides.

During Thursday's hearing before the commission there was little cross-examination of Mr. Griffiths.

Thurlow Farmers Want Line Moved

Thurlow farmers feel Ontario Hydro's 500 kV power transmission line should not be sited over good agricultural land, township reeve Horace Casey said in speaking before the Soland Commission hearing Thursday.

Farmers have spent generations clearing the land said Reeve Casey, "It seems ridiculous to us to place more obstacles in the way."

The Soland Commission is currently in the midst of public hearings geared to gauge reaction to Hydro's recently announced preferred corridor for a 110-mile line stretching from Bath to Oshawa.

Through Thurlow, the line proceeds just south of the fourth concession road, jogs southwest west of Honeywell Corners and enters Sidney township at approximately the middle of the fourth concession.

In making his submission before the hearing, reeve Casey requested the eventual Thurlow farms, the land is mostly bush and pasture.

As now proposed, Hydro's route would cross the best farm land, he said.

"The feeling among farmers is that the land is already clear and it would be clear sailing for anyone," he said.

Bus Stop Shelter

This Emily street area woman makes use of one of the two new bus stop shelters placed on city bus routes last week by the Belleville Transit Commission. Above shelter is near the corner of Bleecker and Emily, while another is placed at the corner of West Moira and Yeomans. Six of the "see through" shelters have been ordered for the convenience of city bus riders.

Argos Sign Eben

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran flanker Mike Eben today signed a three-year contract with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

The rangy pass-catcher has been a steady performer for the Argos since returning to the Eastern Canada club from Edmonton Eskimos in 1971, the year after he earned all-Western honors.

Deceptive speed aid concentration are the 28-year-old Eben's forte in a game where 180 pounders are in constant danger of being cut down by defenders.

Mike joined the Argos in 1968 after an outstanding career with the University of Toronto Blues where he was named the top Canadian university player.

Toronto obtained his playing rights from British Columbia Lions who had made the Chesborn Eben No. 1 pick in the previous year's university draft.

Used sparingly before being traded to Edmonton in 1970, Mike has been consistent since returning, catching 30 passes for 572 yards and three touchdowns in 1971; 46 passes, 581 yards and four major scores in 1972 and 36 passes, 617 yards and four touchdowns last season.

He was named to the all-Eastern team in 1971.

Expos Handed 4-3 Loss

Houston Produces in 10th

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tommy Helms' title-breaking single in the 10th inning lifted Houston to a 4-3 victory over Montreal Expos Thursday night, extending the Astros winning streak to four games.

In the only other National League game played, Chicago Cubs defeated San Francisco Giants 5—3. The American League had no games scheduled.

At Montreal, Milt May led off the 10th against Clyde Wright, 1-1, with a single. Bob Gallagher bunted for a sacrifice and, both runners were safe when first baseman Hal Breeden threw too late to second trying for the force play.

After Doug Rader lined out, Helms delivered his winning hit to centre field, giving reliever Jerry Johnson his second victory without a defeat.

Willie Davis tied the game with a three-run homer in the eighth inning for the Expos. Larry Dierker, who had checked Montreal on four hits through the first seven, gave up a pinch-single to Boots Day with one out in the eighth, then walked Ron Hunt.

Mike Jorgensen popped up before Davis drove a shot into the homer of the baseball season over the right field fence.

Houston pushed across a pair of first-inning runs when Mike Torrez pitched himself into trouble. He walked leadoff batter Greg Gross, gave up a single to Roger Metzger and walked Cesar Cedeno to load the bases.

Torrez then hit Bob Watson with a pitch to force Gross home and Metzger scored on Cliff Johnson's grounder.

Houston made it 3-0 in the seventh. Gross walked, took second on a bunt and held up as Cedeno beat out an infield hit. Both runners moved up on a passed ball. Watson was walked intentionally, then John Montague replaced Torrez and Johnson hit a sacrifice fly.

At Chicago Bill Bonham, getting a chance as a starter for the Cubs in his second full major league baseball season, calmed down after being pecked apart by 11 San Francisco hits, controlling a balk and unleashing a wild pitch, and came away with a 5-3 victory over the Giants.

He got it because he also showed enough strikeouts, several when he needed them most, and because Jerry Morales manager Whitey Lockman said he "wasn't close to yanking him, except in the ninth inning after Tito Fuentes opened with a single."

Garry Maddox then flied out, so Lockman said he decided to let Bonham pitch through the next batter before considering a change . . . and the next batter, Ed Goodson, grounded into a game-ending double play.

NEW PRESIDENT

OTTAWA (CP) — San Allen has been elected president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association for a two-year term, it was announced Thursday. He replaces Don Gilchrist of Ottawa who resigned earlier this year. Allen has held various executive positions with the association.

PLAYERS SUE

PARIS (Reuter) — Tennis players Evonne Goolagong of Australia and Jimmy Connors of the United States sued the French Tennis Federation Thursday for refusing to allow them to play in the French open championships. French lawyers Robert Badinter and Bernard Jouanneau asked a court dealing with urgent cases to rule that the federation should accept both players in the draw for the championships starting next Wednesday. The federation has refused to allow Miss Goolagong and Connors because they are under contract to the World Team Tennis (WTT) organization.

READY TO HELP

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is prepared to contribute up to $20 million for the 1976 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Thursday. Lalonde said Ottawa is ready to pay one-third of the capital costs of the estimated at about $31 million. He said the government share of $10.3 million could be increased if necessary.

LEAFS CLAIM HASSARD

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Hassard, 19, who played with Wexford Raiders in the Ontario Hockey Association Canadian Junior A league the last two years, said Thursday he was drafted in the sixth round by the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs. Hassard is a left winger, is the son of Bob Hassard who played with the Leafs between 1950 and 1953.

BLUES SIGN HESS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Firstround draft choice Dave Hess signed a contract with St. Louis Blues Thursday. Hess, 19, was one of four defencemen picked by the Blues and the 20th player chosen over-all in Wednesday's National Hockey League amateur draft.

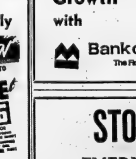
AWARDS PRESENTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Pepin and Bernie Parent Thursday were presented the Jean Charles Daoust and Gil-O Jullien awards respectively as the country's outstanding amateur and professional athletes of 1973. Pepin won a silver medal at the Commonwealth Games in Christchurch, N.Z., last summer and Parent was the spark that carried Philadelphia Flyers to their first Stanley Cup victory as National Hockey League playoff champions. The awards are given annually by Le Droit, the only French-language daily newspaper in the Ottawa area.

Drennan Fashions No-hitter

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Bill Drennan pitched a no-hitter to lead Burlington to a 4-0 win over Hamilton in an Ontario Baseball League game Thursday.

Drennan walked three batters as he chalked up his third victory against no defeats. One batter reached first base on Burlington's only error, but Hamilton failed to advance a runner beyond second base.



Losing pitcher Wally Dick, who has won two and lost four, gave up 11 hits to Burlington and was replaced in the final inning by Jim Thompson.

Ross Shepherd, Joe O'Neill hits each for Burlington, and second baseman Hal Kemp got the game's only extra-base hit with a double.

Burlington scored two runs in the first inning and singles in the fifth and sixth.

Drennan also pitched a no-hitter for Richmond Hill when Canada defeated Singapore 4-0 to win the world football championship in March, 1973.

Seven Under Par, Watson Leader In Kemper Open

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tom Watson, an articulate 24-year-old now in his third season on the pro golf tour, matched the course record Thursday with a seven-under-par 65 to take the first-round lead in the $250,000 Kemper Open.

Australian veteran Bruce Crampton was one shot back at 66 in this designated tournament, one of three events on the schedule this season in which all of the game's leading players are required to compete.

Watson says he has been in a position to win "three, maybe four times this year," and he is getting impatient.

"I had a chance to win last week in Memphis," said Watson, who has collected $62,000 this season but still lacks his first tour title. "I had a chance to win in Los Angeles and I was in pretty good shape in San Diego.

"My trouble is that I've been inconsistent.

"Patience is one of the hardest things for a young player to learn," continued the Stanford University psychology major.

Bert Yancey and Bob Murphy each birdied the last three holes during his 11 years at Tech.

for 67s and a share of third. Robert Green, a first-time winner this year and runner-up in last week's Memphis Open, was in a large group at 68.

At 69 were Ben Kern of London, Ont., Billy Casper, Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins. Kern had a wildly erratic round that included eight birdies, three bogeys and a double bogey.

Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Masters champion Gary Player, 67-year-old Sam Snead, Lee Trevino and Lee Elder were in the group at 70.

Johnny Miller, the reigning United States Open king and the sensation of the tour this season with five victories, was at 71. Defending title-holder Tom Weiskopf could do no better than match par 72 in the hot, muggy, and almost windless weather.

ROBERTSON TO COACH

Balint Gets Win

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Dick Balint's four-hit, 12 strikeout pitching led St. Catharines to a 5-1 victory over Niagara Falls in an Ontario Fastball League game Thursday.

The losing pitcher was Jake Neufeld, who allowed four hits and four runs in seven innings. He was relieved by Walt Sopiewski, who gave up a run and two hits.

Larry Hancock with a home run and single, and Balint with a triple and a single led the St. Catharines attack. Ed Neudorf accounted for the lone Niagara Falls run with a homer.

With the official faceoff last night, handled by Alderman Joe Cox, the South Central Lacrosse Association got under way for another season in Belleville. Handling the faceoff for their respective teams are Belleville's Ken Donaldson (left) and John Fusco (right) of Garrard Road Peewees. The local squad opened the season on the right foot with a 6-5 win over the visitors.

A Win and a Loss

First Taste of Action For 2 City SCLA Teams

Playing in what has been described as the "finest minor lacrosse league in Canada", Belleville teams opened their second season of South Central Lacrosse league play last night.

The league, which includes such centers stems from as Peterborough, Oshawa, Cobourg, Whitby Ajax, Scarborough, and Garrard Road, is rated as the top league in Ontario, by the OMLA, on the basis of the number of provincial championship teams from the Association.

The Ajax midget team of his year is a good example. The team has been together since novice, with the squad picking up three provincial titles and three runners — up spots in the past six years.

Belleville now has to compete in the same league with these teams, and should provide adequate competition in the fifth year of operation for minor lacrosse in the city.

In Ontario Minor Lacrosse Association playoffs later in the year, the Belleville teams will be classified under different categories than teams from Peterborough and Oshawa.

In the game last night, the local teams split a pair of contests with Garrard Road. The Peewees took the first game of the twin bill by a narrow 6-5 score. The Bantams were edged 6-4.

Jamie Robertson and Danny Prewer each picked up a pair of goals for the Belleville Peewees in their win, with Jamie Forester and Danny Houstow adding the singles.

Five players shared the Garrard Road scoring, with Bob Kenabash, Jason Chisolm, Paul Jacobs, Peter Pipher, and John Fusco each getting the ball into the net.

Six players shared in the scoring for he Garrard Road Bantams, with Dave Sawyer, Rick Gallas, Grant Millier, Kevin Demille, Dave Jocobs and Don Mineret each potting one.

Danny Duffy, Alan Hackett, Doug Rainboth, and Guy Haggarty each scored once for Belleville.

Thirty-one penalities were assessed by referees Wally Uhruck and Jerry Vincent, with the winners taking 19 of the total, which included a game misconduct and two ten minute misconducts.

Four in a Row For Latta Squad

Latta picked up their fourth win in as many starts in South Hastings Baseball League Standings Wednesday night, edging Melrose 2-1 in one of three games played. In the others, Hamilton defeated Read 4-1 and Shannonville and Reserve played to a 4-4 deadlock.

Reg Albrams went the route for Latta, allowing just three hits. He fanned two and walked three.

John Pepper struck out seven and walked a pair but took the loss, giving up five hits.

Wayne Harrison did two-thirds of the hitting for Latta with a pair of base hits, while Barry Culkin singled for the other hit.

Rick Meagher had the only extra base hit for Melrose, with a double. Randy Pascoe and Bruce Pascoe each had a single apiece to round out the hitting in the six-inning contest.

Bob Robb get the win for Cannilton, with Doug Stewart going five and one-third innings and taking the loss for Read. Bob McKenney pitched the final two innings for Read.

Warren Hay had a double for Cannilton, the only extra base hit in the game, with Bob Robb, Larry Adams, Gafney Adams, and Bob Neilson adding singles.

Bob Sherry, Carm Milligan, and Buddy O'Connor each stroked a base hit for Read.

In a rained out game from the first week of the schedule, played last night, Cannilton triple shut out the scorers on Reserve, 6-2.

Ken Abrams fired the win for Cannilton, allowing six hits, striking out nine and walking none.

Dave Green and Gord Hill shared the loss, each going three innings. They gave up 10 hits, fanning 10 and walking four.

Bob Robb had three singles to pace the Cannilton attack, with two hits going to Ken Abrams and John Tweedy, George Tweedy, Garnie Adams and Bob Andrew each had one hit.

Ken Barnhardt had a double and a single for Reserve with John Green, Bob Green, Mike Maracle, and Gord Hill each making one hit.

Frankford Curling Club Executive

FRANKFORD (Special) — Paul Spurrell will head up the Frankford Curling Club as president for the 1974-75 season. The club elected its executive recently at a banquet and dance.

Vice-presidents are Gib Gilmour and Don Jones; secretary, Donna Morris and treasurer, Joyce Jones.

Bill McKee is the games captain; Bill Payne is in charge of bonspiels and Betty Boulter will serve as ways and means conveners. Equipment manager is John Suderman; early league captain, Ray Rumney; late league captain, Ray Bauer, and director of publicity is Pat Welch.

Auger's Back In the Groove

It took four games, but Auger's Men's Wear finally recorded its first win in Quinte Fastball League play last night, defeating Devolin Motors 5-1. In the other contest, Rollins Construction took its fourth win in a row, dumping Bardon Supply 4-1.

Auger's spoiled Devolin a fourth inning run before coming up with four of their own in the third and one more in the sixth.

Darryl Cramp scored the Devolin run after he had singled. Ray Lumsden sent him to third, with Tom MacDonald's double driving the run in.

Steve Barker started the fifth inning rally for Auger's with a fielder's choice, a walk, a double by Jack Jury, and a home run by Larry Mavety adding up to the four runs.

Bob Swan started for the winners, allowing the one run on six hits before giving way to George Ferguson. He struck out one and walked none. Ferguson came on to get the win, picking up nine strikeouts in the three and one-third innings he hurled, walking one.

Ron Hill took the loss, giving up seven hits. He fanned four and issued three free passes.

Rollins got runs in the second, third and two in the fifth. Ken Demille took the win, allowing three hits. He fanned three and gave up one base on balls.

Jamie Hunter gave up seven hits in defeat, striking out two and walking one.

Ralph Plane led the winners at the plate with three singles, with Dale Darvall and Demille contributing doubles. Glen Carleton and Wayne McTaggart each had base hits to round out the attack.

Gary Johnson had a triple and single for two of the Bardon hits, with Sid Davies the other batter to reach Demille for a safety.

Saturday night, the Quinte Fastball League All-Stars take on the 1972 World champions, Richmond Hill Dynes, in a doubleheader at the Alemille Russ Soule of the Ellis Juniors and Phil Lott of Devolin Motors have been selected as coaches of the team. The doubleheader will commence at 7 p.m. with admission $1.

Included in the price of admission will be a chance at two Olympic Lottery tickets.

Log Wins

Second place Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund scored its third win of the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League season Thursday night but couldn't gain any ground on front running Cooper Purinseeties.

BYBF rolled to a convincing win over Simpson-Sears at Centennial Park and in Madoc, Purinseeties beat off a determined challenge from Quinte Antenna to log their fourth win, a 14-8 decision.

Shirley Gulliver and Sue Morton stopped Simpson-Sears on one hit on an abbreviated contest. The teams played five innings.

Penny Hughes hammered five hits for BYBF, including a pair of homers. Sharon Alexander and Judy Puitz also socked a homer each.

Roseanne Coughlin had the only hit for the losers.

Saturday, BYBF will help the City of Kingston mark its Sport Olympic Week, hooking up in an exhibition contest with Smiths Falls. The game will be played at Victoria Park in Kingston at 2 p.m.

Quinte Antenna gave the league leaders a stiff battle at Madoc. The eight runs scored by the Belleville team was quite an achievement. In two previous outings, Purinseeties had given up only five runs.

Twice working out of bases loaded situations with just one out, Sandra Fleming went the distance to get the win on a 10-hitter. She struck out five and walked 12. Aileen Barr took the loss, allowing six hits while fanning one and walking three.

Leading the winners' hitting were Sue Wright, Fleming and Jane Bailey with three safeties each. Nina Flieger and Cheryl Kelly were tops for the losers, accounting for three hits apiece.

Black Diamond Wallops Intell

Black Diamond and Brooke Bond came up winners in the Industrial Softball League last night, with Black Diamond winning in a big way.

The Black Diamond crew came up with a 24-3 win over The Intelligencer banging out 19 hits in taking the victory.

Gene Francis had a homer, triple, double and single to lead the way, with Ron Bateman adding a homer and single. Jack Francis had a home run to add to the slugfest, with Bob Henderson doubling twice.

Maurice Switzer had four singles to pace The Intell with walking none.

Jack Francis took the win for Black Diamond, giving up nine hits. He struck out three and walked two.

Reg Pearson started on The Intell mound, giving way to Fred Stickle in the second. Together they allowed 19 hits, walking 18 and striking out none.

Tony Goncalves made the defensive play of the game, with an excellent shoestring catch in centre field for the Printers.

In a more closely contested game, Tom St. Jules fired the win giving up six hits. He whiffed 10 men and walked a pair in the battle.

Randy Van Norman started for PUC, going three and one-third innings. He allowed four runs on seven hits, walking six and fanning a pair.

Wilson Bulpitt went the distance for the loss, also allowing four runs, on four hits. He struck out one and walked two.

Glynn Reynolds added a two bagger and base hit.

Rick Stratton had a double and two singles for the winners, with Lou Rivers adding three base hits; Ron Green and Larry Bilham each had two singles for the winners, with Jack MacDonald rounding out the attack with a base hit.

Dave Middleton crunked a home run for the Utilities, while Ron Doubleday Bulpitt had two base hits, with Larry Green and Ron Waite striking out singles.

Evinrude 70: More Performance on Less Fuel

On the surface, this new Evinrude 70 looks a lot like last year's 65. Small. Sleek. Strong. But more hustle's been added inside. Higher compression. New super-sophisticated exhaust tuning. Better engine breathing.

The result: Five more horses. More muscle in the mid-range. More performance at the top end. All accomplished, with loop-charged efficiency that gives you even more miles to the hour and more gal to the gallon than last year's economy champ, the Triumph 65.

This motor will handle any boating activity effortlessly. Just like our 70. Another great Triumph, from Evinrude.

See the Loop-Charged Evinrude 70 and 50 hp models, and the 40 and 25 hp models at your Evinrude dealer.

Every Evinrude for '74 is designed to Conserve energy by recycling unburnt fuel into additional power. And because every Evinrude is driveless, we're keeping our waters clean too!

Now WHA Has a Shot at Amateurs

TORONTO (CP) — The World Hockey Association expects to accomplish today what the National Hockey League has spent the last three days at—drafting the top eligible amateurs.

The WHA's list of selections may include as many as 15 exceptional juniors under 19 years old, the usual age for draft eligibility.

And the WHA list will be made known immediately, unlike the NHL draft which was conducted on a secret telephone system to keep the NHL clubs knowing which players the NHL teams would be trying to sign.

The first two rounds of the NHL selections leaked out anyway and it took the league from players.

Tuesday morning until Thursday afternoon to get through 25 rounds. A record 147 players were picked by the 18 NHL clubs.

Like the NHL, the WHA's 15 clubs will each be allowed one exceptional junior draft in addition to the first or second rounds.

WHA officials had thought they'd be finished their agreement with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association called for such ex- tra exceptional players to be 18 years old.

Toronto Toros on their WHA draft, followed by draft master Ben Hatskin.

The Toros, who once played with the NHL Boston Bruins, Minnesota North Stars and California Golden Seals, was the last player taken by the Racers from New England Whalers.

Cincinnati Stingers, who start play in the WHA in 1975, have the third choice in today's amateur draft. Following in order will be Michigan Stags, Vancouver Blazers, San Diego Knights, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers, Quebec, Chicago, Cleveland, Toronto, New England, Minnesota Fighting Saints and Houston Aeros.

The WHA agreement with the CAHA calls for payments of $20,000 for each drafted player signed in the first 50 picks and $15,000 for each one selected $1-each, and Moe Joskin with one. tern.

Phoenix selected a total of 13 players, starting with goalie Tom Williams, who once played with the NHL Boston Indianapolis Racers, the other goalie drafted.

The Roadrunners and Racers took only 29 minutes Thursday to speed through the expansion draft, selecting a total of 32 players.

In the only other game, Peterborough PCOs defeated Brockville Warriors 10-11 on three goals each by Jim Johnston, Paul Evans and Randy Brian.

At Oshawa, Stan Cockerton was top scorer for Oshawa with four. Tom Weeggett and Dean Spence scored three each, Jeff Hanson, Bill Vann and John MacDonald got two each, and single goals went to Mark Kashul, Claude Dilotel, Gary Camazzola and Murray Cawker.

For Toronto, it was Ken Lane, with two, Joe Sheerin, Mike Jones, Rick Dixon, Ron Smith, Rick Bennett and John Gorsa.

At Peterborough, other PCOs scorers included Brian Evans, Mark Winarelli, Scott Plunkett and Greg Leustic, with two 247 Players Chosen But Will They Sign?

MONTREAL (CP) — Now that their three-day marathon draft of amateur players is complete, National Hockey League clubs can get down to the business of signing the record 247 players selected.

And today, the NHL clubs will learn who to the rival World Hockey Association will be trying to sign the same players.

The WHA holds its draft today in Toronto and, unlike the NHL, will release its lists for publication.

The NHL, in an attempt at keeping the WHA from using its list as a concise scouting report, conducted its draft by a secret telephone conference, monitored by league officials at their head office here.

The attempt at secrecy was not entirely successful. The firm two rounds leaked out and were published Wednesday and a few other names became known from later rounds.

NHL officials announced that a total of 247 players, will leave the previous record of 186 last year, were selected in 25 rounds, but declined to say how many each team drafted.

League officials would not say when they would release the full draft list but it is expected to be made available some time in the next two weeks.

Among the NHL picks already safe from the WHA is Greg Joly of Regina Pats in the Western Canada Hockey League.

Washington Capitals, who made Joly the first choice in the NHL selections, announced they had signed him soon after he was selected.

Joly's salary, reported to be $400,000 for five years, provides some indication of the kind of money that may be thrown around in the bidding war between the NHL and WHA.

Lawyer Alan Eagleson, Toronto, who represents six of the first-round NHL picks, said that Joly should have got more than $400,000 from Washington.

"The first-round picks are going to be wealthy young men because of the competitive aspect between the two leagues," said Eagleson.

"Last year they averaged $100,000 a year. This year, they'll average between $125,000 and $150,000."

No Thought of Compromise

$2.7 Million Price Tag Staggers London Group

EDMONTON (CP) — The conditions seemed perfect Thursday for the addition of a new team to the eastern conference of the Canadian Football League—here was a buyer and the league wanted to sell.

But the asking price of $2.7 million for the franchise. The buyers were only willing to pay about $4-million.

"That spread is too great to bridge," said Commissioner Jack Bob Harris, leader of the London, Ont., group which was applying for the franchise. "There would be no sense in wasting any more time. Hell, it makes no sense to ask for $2.7 million. They can't justify it."

Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the CFL, said the figure had been arrived at after a "great deal of discussion."

Harris said the league asked for a $25,000 deposit—which he has—on the franchise and $2.7 million to be paid on or before Aug. 26, 1974.

"They'd have that money for about 16 months, when we came back to them and the interest on it would amount to about $400,000. That means the real cost of the franchise is $3.1 million.

"It makes a hell of a lot more sense for us to build a 63,000 seat stadium and go into the World Football League. The price would be about the same."

He talked to Gary Davidson (of the WFL). I don't know what we'll do, but we're not a group that loses easily."

The political climate appeared right for expansion. Marc Lalonde, federal health and welfare minister, introduced legislation in the last Parliament to ban United States professional football League. Canada and at the time said he CFL could expand.

He specifically mentioned London as a good area for Canadian football.

The legislation died when Parliament was dissolved, and it's not expected to be resurrected. And the CFL is aware that the government thinks expansion should be a league priority.

"They can either price you in the league or price you out and they decided, I guess, to price us out," said Jim Duncan, general manager of the proposed London club.

"It would make more sense to buy into the National Football League at $16 million than into the CFL at $2.7 million. In the NFL, you get $1.4 million a year in television revenue so in about 12 years you've got your $16 million back.

"In Canada you get $100,000 a year. At that rate it would take 25 years to get back cost."

Bob Siakind, lawyer for the London group, said he was staggered when he heard the price.

"It didn't take long to turn them down. The case is closed, it's a dead issue."

Harris said he was astounded by the price.

"The last expansion, to Vancouver in 1960, was $1. I've heard of inflation, but 2.7 million per cent is ridiculous! We've already worked out at about $854,000, but we were building a stadium. We came to talk, we'd have gone up, to $1 million and left, but this leaves no room to talk.

"I think I could buy the Cleveland Browns from Sam Berger for $1.3 or $1.5, but then we'd have to go through the same hoops as we have here to get the franchise moved."

He said Berger made it clear during lunch that he wants an NFL franchise in Montreal in 1976. Now that the protective legislation had died and the CFL had turned down an opportunity to expand—because the price was too low—it would difficult or impossible to keep the Montreal Alouettes.

Duncan, out of a job, but still managing to smile, said:

"Well, I'll set new world records: the shortest contracts in football history. I was coached at Calgary for 90 days and GM here for 30 days. That's got to be a world record."

He said he'll go home to Calgary to see what the Calgary Stampeders offer jobs in the United States.

"I'll be gone pretty damn quick, like Monday. At 43 y's can't get started enough for someone to come looking for you.

"In other business, the owners met privately. Grey Cup tickets in Vancouver this year, the top price will be $17.50; seats on the south end of Empire Stadium will be $13 and those on the north end will cost $11 and $10. The only difference from the 1971 Vancouver Grey Cup game is on the south end and which are up 50 cents.

The league also amended a bylaw concerning protests. An inadvertent error by a referee is no longer subject to protest. Protesting an official's call now means a club must show proof a correct call was made deliberately.

"To stop frivolous protests, it now will cost $5,000 instead of $250 if the protest is lost," said Gaudaur.

Expansion Draft

TORONTO (CP) — Following are the players selected in Thursday's World Hockey Association expansion draft:

Phoenix Roadrunners—Goalender Gary Kurt, Cleveland; Gerry Odrowski, Michigan; Ted Hodgson, Michigan; Bob Ash, Michigan; Richard Pumple, Cleveland; Bob Sweeney, San Diego; Bernie Blanchette, Edmonton; Steve King, Toronto; Dick Sarrazin, Chicago; Terry Ryan, Minnesota; Ron Anderson, Chicago; Jack Gibson, Toronto; Jim McMasters, Cleveland; Michel Plante, Vancouver; Steve Warr, Toronto.

Indianapolis Racers—Brian McKenzie, Edmonton; Bob Whitlock, Michigan; Bob Ash, Winnipeg; Bob Sicinski, Chicago; Richard Cameron, Vancouver; Roger Bourbonnais, Edmonton; Kevin Cardwell, Minnesota; Jim Hargreaves, Winnipeg; Mike Archambault, Quebec; Billy Orr, Toronto; Gary Swanson, Winnipeg; Yves Bergeron, Quebec; Pierre Henry, Vancouver; Ken Desjardine, Quebec; Ron Morgan, Cleveland; Tom Williams, New England.

Ron McCoy Night At Ameliasburg

Ron McCoy proved to be a real asset for Wannamaker and Belly Inn Hunt Club in Edward North Shore Softball League action Wednesday at Ameliasburg. Not only did he pitch six innings of three-hit ball, he supplied the winning run with a seventh-inning homer.

It was the first home run of the PENNSL season and broke up a close struggle between the Stables squad and Reserve, Final score: 5-4.

Harold Werkhoven worked one inning for the winners. He allowed six runs all of which came without out one and walking three. McCoy gave up just two hits over the three hits. He fanned two and walked one.

Pat Maracle, Sr. went the distance for Reserve. Touched for 13 hits, Pat recorded three strikeouts and walked none.

McCoy had a pair of singles to go with his game-winning homer. Pete Morah also had three safeties for the winners. Checking in with two each were Al O'Hara, Gil Nesbitt and Bill Cannon.

Gary Thompson was the only Reserve player to collect more than one base hit. He connected for a pair.

Wednesday's other league game was called in the third inning. A thick fog made it impossible to complete the contest. The game was postponed until Sunday, June 2.

In a pair of games earlier in the week, Reserve turned back O'Brien's Tree Service 14-12, in a slugfest contest and Boily stopped Belleville Gems 9-5.

Jim McKay, Gary Klenkenberg and Pat Maracle, Sr. shared the pitching in Reserve's win. Pete Scott and Carmen Selman.

Ed Callow led O'Brien's with three safeties while Jim McCormack, Paul Wilkerson and Scott each had two.

McCoy and John Sourgeon shared the pitching for the Stables gang in the win over the Gems. Neil Coyer handled the hurling for the Gems.

Doug Findlay and Bill Cannons each banged a pair of hits for the winners. Bob Reid, Coyer, Herb Scrimshaw and Carl Yates each managed one for Gems.

Three-way Tie for Lead

LANDOVER, Md. (CP) — Maryland Arrows beat Rochester Griffins 22-13 Thursday night to create a three-way tie for the lead in the National Lacrosse League.

The win gave Maryland a 4-1 record, the same as Philadelphia Wings, while Rochester also has eight points from a 4-3 record.

John McKenna led the Arrows with five goals and Paul Sugarman scored three before a crowd of 8,048. Two goals each came from Wayne Granger, Tom Vann, Bill Coghill, Ron Roy, Vic Generoux and Pat Ryan. Jerry McKenna and Tony Golias scored one each.

Rochester got three goals from Charlie Henderson and two each from Glen Neuman, Rick Dudley and Rick Blasa. Single goals came from Dan Magee, Glen Powers, Kevin Parsons and Bill Hocuik.

11-goal Second Period Carries Green Gaels

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An 11-goal, second-period effort led Oshawa Green Gaels to a 20-8 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs in Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A action Thursday.

In the only other game, Peterborough PCOs defeated Brockville Warriors 10-11 on three goals each by Jim Johnston, Paul Evans and Randy Brian.

At Oshawa, Stan Cockerton was top scorer for Oshawa with four. Tom Weeggett and Dean Spence scored three each, Jeff Hanson, Bill Vann and John MacDonald got two each, and single goals went to Mark Kashul, Claude Dilotel, Gary Camazzola and Murray Cawker.

For Toronto, it was Ken Lane, with two, Joe Sheerin, Mike Jones, Rick Dixon, Ron Smith, Rick Bennett and John Gorsa.

At Peterborough, other PCOs scorers included Brian Evans, Mark Winarelli, Scott Plunkett and Greg Leustic, with two each.

Scoring for Brockville were Blair Campbell, with four, Dennis Maruk, with three, Bill Bolitho, with two, and Dave Hunter and Dave Wallace.

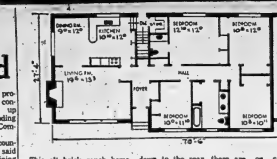
Open Tenders Bypassed

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal city council Thursday decided to allow its executive committee to negotiate directly with contractors, bypassing traditional public tenders, for construction projects at the 1976 Olympic Games site.

The five-hour meeting was disrupted by the city's white collar workers, protesting a lagging wage settlement, who shuffled into the meeting and pleaded from the public gallery.

As the debate on the controversial issue progressed, Mayor Jean Drapeau's remarks were drowned out by a fit of coughing from the disgruntled union members.



Riot police cleared the public gallery after the mayor called a recess.

City councillors agreed to the elimination of tenders in a 42-40 vote. Mayor Drapeau several times reserved them. Such exceptional measures were rare indeed, meet the tight games deadline. Expected construction costs are about $220 million.

When the executive committee first announced its proposal to deal directly with contractors, criticism flared up from many corners, including the Montreal Chamber of Commerce.

One of the dissenting councillors, Paul-Emile Robert, said "in these times of declining values the public demands an irreproachable administration, we can't afford to play with the public purse."

Council, he said, was running the risk of bringing conflict of interest charges by acting as both financier and administrator.

This all brick ranch home has a delightful proportion. With its somewhat formal hip-roof exterior, it is sure to be among the most attractive in the neighbourhood. The centre hall routes traffic directly to the three main areas of the home, namely: the formal living and dining area, the informal family-gathering area and the sleeping area.

Designed for a lot sloping down to the rear, there are two rear exits from the lower level. The recreation room located on that level has three wide floor or ceiling windows looking out onto the rear terrace — work shop and laundry are separate and a washroom with shower is only a step from the garden door. Many designs can be treated in this manner if the necessary slope is available or can be achieved by grading.

All this living area can be had in only 1,650 square feet. Of course the house can also be built on a flat lot.

Plans for Design R4-631 cost $35 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail. Two new books "Home Designs for Canadians" are available for $1.00 each by mail (see coupon below). Book 1 presents designs for home up to 1600 sq. ft. for 1 storey and split level. 1850 sq. ft. for one and one half and 2 storey. Book 2 includes larger homes and vacation homes. Economic Goals Lacking

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis Thursday called on provincial governments to co-operate in order to set a national economic policy for Canada.

In a speech to the Conference Board in Canada's 1974 business outlook conference, Mr. Davis said any talks between the federal and provincial governments on economic goals must be preceded by agreement among the provinces on what they want.

This policy, he said, "would include the promotion of a more balanced distribution of economic activity across the country in order that all regional economies develop at satisfactory rates."

Many of the problems Canada faces today, Mr. Davis said, result from the lack of any long range economic goals and an economic strategy.

The energy crisis, he said, provides an example of an issue in which provincial governments played a key role on determining overall policy.

But lack of any national economic policy in energy prevented any long-term resolution of the energy issue, the premier said.

"Instead, we have made very little progress toward the development of a new and lasting energy policy for Canada."

In an interview later, the premier said freight rates are a problem even within the boundaries of Ontario, with higher costs for shipments from Northern Ontario and the eastern part of the province.

"The only way out of this dilemma is for there to be a significant increase in inter-provincial dialogue on economic development strategies," he said.

Seeding Sagging

OTTAWA (CP) — Prairie seeding operations have fallen behind still further because of wet weather, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The late season is forcing farmers to switch wheatland into faster-maturing oilseed and coarse grain crops.

In the July 16 report on crop conditions on the Prairies, the statistics bureau said that farmers are bending in southwestern Manitoba and in much of Alberta.

"Elsewhere, the land is still too wet."

While seeding operations could become general throughout the Prairies within a week if the weather changes, farmers are about one to two weeks behind in many parts of the country's grain belt.

Customer Settles For Fries

MAPLE, Ont. (CP) — Al Leach, Ontario government executive in charge of the province's highway restaurants, met May Nicholson, waitress, over lunch this week and had some frankness dished out with his meal.

One of his party at the Voyageur, alongside Highway 400 near here asked for a $4.45 sirloin steak with a baked potato.

"You must be joking," May said, "The chef is so dumb he can't boil a potato."

The government official cringed.

The customer settled for french fries and May was back in less than 15 minutes with the food.

The lunch was to test the point made by Frank Drea, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Scarborough Centre, who told the legislature Monday that food and service at the government-contracted restaurants are "an affront to the public."

Can't Stop Barking

GUELPH (CP) — A city bylaw was declared void by Judge H. R. Howitt of provincial court, who dismissed charges Thursday against the Guelph Humane Society.

The bylaw stipulates that "no one shall allow a dog which is making unreasonable noises to remain in an unenclosed building."

Judge Howitt told the court that the bylaw exceeds its authority. He said the city ruling passed last year is based on a section of the Ontario Municipal Act, which regulates only the keeping of animals, not the noise they make.

The charges was laid against the society May 2 after a resident complained about the dogs barking in the society's kennels.

No Immediate Plans for Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Thursday there are no immediate plans for an inquiry into disciplinary methods of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

He told reporters following a cabinet meeting he is awaiting results of a meeting between RCMP Commissioner M. J. Nadon and elected representatives of RCMP officers before deciding whether to go ahead with an inquiry.

The two-day meeting, which began Thursday between Commissioner Nadon and officers' representatives, follows a two-week period during which the representatives consulted RCMP officers across the country about government proposals for improvements in working conditions.

Mr. Allmand also said he has had no official indication that RCMP officers were involved in a raid on a Fort Erie, Ont., hotel May 11 where about 115 persons were subjected to searches for drugs.

Many of the men and women in the bar were forced to strip and submit to rectal and vaginal searches in washrooms.

After being questioned by reporters about RCMP involvement in the raid, Mr. Allmand said he would check with Commissioner Nadon to find out whether RCMP officers were involved.

Published reports said RCMP officers acted in the raid, which was directed by an officer of the Niagara regional police force.

Pickets Not Discouraged

TORONTO (CP) — Three clergymen fined $10 each Thursday for trespass during a United Farm Workers (UFW) boycott of grapes and lettuce at a Dominion Stores Ltd. outlet were back on the picket line a few hours later.

Thursday evening, they marched outside a different Dominion store branch, but they did not enter the store.

Bell Rates Opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario's representative at the hearing into Bell Canada's application for higher rates said Thursday the company has not proven the need for rate adjustments.

Dan Burtnick said Bell has not released enough detail on its costs and he suggested the company may be asking basic telephone subscribers to subsidize extra services for business.

He said the situation is "as classic an example as we've ever likely to see of a clash between private interest and public interest."

A basic problem was that Bell's accounting methods did not make distinctions between costs related to monopoly operations—the telephone service—and competitive fields. Bell is a regulated monopoly, but companies in such fields as computer data transmission.

"The question is, do we know enough about Bell Canada's constructed program?"

Mr. Burtnick said the answer is "no" and he urged the interveners to gain further information are "obscured by a wall of confidentiality" raised by Bell Canada.

He said the Canadian transportation commission's telecommunications committee does not have sufficient information to judge whether rate increases are justified.

"At the present moment we do not know how much of the (Bell) budget is for basic telephone service and how much is for somethings else.

"There is some doubt about what the something else is."

Mr. Burtnick said there is a need for study of techniques used by Bell for forecasting and accounting for depreciation.

Bell has estimated that the rate increases applied for would have brought in $31.8 million in extra revenue if applied during all of this year.

The company is seeking increases to bring its rate of return on invested capital to about 8.6 per cent.

Bell, which has 4.3 million subscribers in Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories, is asking for several rate changes. These include adding 10 cents a month to the base rate for most residential users with one-party lines, doubling the local pay phone rate to 20 cents, implementing a 25-cent directory assistance charge for most residential users and increasing long distance overtime rates by one cent for each minute.

HAMILTON (CP) — In the modern idiom, Humpky Dumpty in Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland is paranoid, the Caterpillar is a dope pedlar and Tweedledum and Tweedledee are merely partners in a vaudeville act.

Thus they appeared, in any case, in an updated stage version of the children's classic in the Studio Theatre of Hamilton Place when students of director Don Colgate, Oakville, produced a two-act play called Alice and Wonderland.

Alice, played by Debi Gowan, appeared in the traditional blue gingham dress and white pinafore, but the rest of the players—who doubled in several roles—were in blue jeans and jumper tops, giving an energetic performance of mime, dance and broad slapstick comedy-acting.

Sheridan-is one of the province's regional technical colleges, and has a class of about 40 in its two-year theatre arts program.

Alice and Wonderland was advertised as an adult version of the stories of Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass, complete with the Cheshire Cat and Tea Party.

These and other favorite tales from the books appear in the play, but as broadly portrayed in today's collegiate manner that sometimes it takes a few minutes to recognize the storyline.

Of the six others in the cast, Gary McLeod—particularly as the Dormouse in the Tea Party—won the warmest applause for his ability at mimicry and comic timing.

Almost a show stopper was his depiction of the Knave of Hearts as a Richard Nixon, a used-car dealer whose best lines were, expectedly: "I just want to make one thing perfectly clear—trust me."

Alice and Wonderland closed its three-night run Thursday.

LONDON (Reuter) — American pop star David Cassidy said Thursday night he was deeply upset at the death of a 16-year-old girl who had been in a coma since her heart stopped beating during his farewell London concert last Sunday.

The singer went into hiding because of the death of Bernadette Whelan, and later issued a statement in which he said: "I am very saddened and distressed to hear of the death of Bernadette, and wish to express my sincere condolences to her family."

Cassidy said he had done everything in his power to calm the-35,000 fans, including stopping the show for 20 minutes, and cancelling the encore.

"I have played to millions of people all over the world and this is the first time a serious accident has occurred," he added.

Bernadette, who waited 12 hours to make sure of a good vantage point, was crushed as hundreds of hysterical fans pressed toward the stage. More than 700 people had to be treated after the concert.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Singer Ethel Waters is recuperating from a cataract operation.

Dr. Grady Wilson, associate evangelist with Billy Graham, said Miss Waters underwent her second cataract operation in recent months last Monday and left hospital Wednesday. She is staying at Wilson's home.

Miss Waters, associated with Graham since 1957, plans to return to her Los Angeles home next week.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Actress Jane Withers has received a $200,000 settlement over the death of her husband in a plane crash at a mountain resort airport in 1968, it was announced here Thursday.

Jane Withers, a former child star, was one of three widows who filed over the loss of their husbands while on a fishing trip, claiming the airport was a death trap.

Exorcist In Town

Since man first believed in demons, he has also believed that these malignant forces can take possession of him.

Over the past year, thousands of movie-goers have reinforced this belief and frightened themselves at the same time.

Tonight the people of Belleville get their chance to join the crowd. The Exorcist starts playing at the Park Theatre at 7 p.m.

Ron Brown, the manager at the Park Theatre says that he doesn't expect to have many problems with audiences being frightened by the movie, but, just in case there are some problems, he is trying to make arrangements to have some qualified first aid personnel on hand to take care of the queasy.

Bypass Surgery Ends in Pain

By G. C. THOSTESON MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You wrote about surgery being an expensive way to lose weight. I had this surgery (the doctor called it a bypass) two years ago.

I have been ill for the two years since. I have vomited spasms several times a week. I am seldom out of pain and have either diarrhea or constipation every day. Some days I have both.

My doctor told me I could eat anything I wanted in any quantity and lose weight. So I did and I gained 40 pounds the first year.

The second year I joined Weight Watchers and have lost 30 pounds. The cost has been $2500. I have lost all hope of ever feeling well again.—S.D.

I've had more and more inquiries about this type of surgery lately—it is a matter of bypassing one or more circulating part of the intestine so that food can pass on through with fewer calories being absorbed from it.

The whole procedure is based on an ideal situation for a hearty eater. Eat and still get thin! I'm 62 and I believe diets are in one way or another based on giving that same treatment that you can lose weight by being a glutton.

The fact is that this bypass surgery is a last resort when all else has failed. In some quarters the notion of cases it is turning out successfully on such patients is scoffed by such patients for not urging it more enthusiastically.

In some other cases it has failed. And in some there has been temporary benefit or little real change.

I present today's letter as the other side of the coin—evidence that emphasizes some of the unexpected complications that can occur in some cases.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss when and how often a woman should douche and what. Is vinegar good to use and if so what type, white or apple cider? At what age should douching begin? Should woman douche before having a pelvic exam?—Mrs. S.H.

Contrary to what was formerly believed a routine douche is not necessary and in fact is not even wise.

The best rule is to use a douche only when your doctor tells you to for some medicinal purpose—and in that case he will tell you what to use whether an acid or alkaline or medicated solution.

The natural fluids of the vagina are perfectly adequate to keep it clean so long as it is healthy. A douche is a necessary only when something is wrong with it.

As a matter of fact while the custom of the douche probably does no harm to most women it can cause trouble for some by carrying away the natural fluid lubricants that belong there.

As for a douche before a pelvic examination—don't do it—definitely not. Your doctor wants to examine you in your normal state not with various fluids and cells rinsed away.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please explain vitamin E? I'm 62 and I think I should have VITAMIN E. What food should I eat? Would too many pills be harmful?—J.P.

The only honest explanation I can give you is simply this: vitamin E is a fad that has acquired ane normous number of followers who claim that it will cure about anything you can think of.

The federal government has investigated these claims and finds them vastly exaggerated. His official verdict: that while vitamin E is a useful vitamin it is extremely difficult to find anyone who is not getting an adequate amount already since it is available in almost anyone's diet.

Reese and Dormer point out that in the ordinary bridge game West's queen of clubs would hold the first trick. He would continue the suit which upon South would take his ace and wind up with eight or nine tricks, depending on whether or not he elected to ruff the third club with dummy's six or nine.

This wouldn't happen in an expert game. West's queen of clubs would still hold that first trick, but West would stop for a short period of thought.

He would decide first that East did not hold the ace-king of clubs. With both those cards he would win the first trick in order to lead a trump. Therefore, South was marked with the ace of clubs.

How about the ace and queen of spades? South might have both those cards also but it wouldn't be likely. With ace-queen, ace and a long suit South would almost surely have made some more enterprising bid than a mere two spades.

After all that thought West would plunk the king of spades on the table at trick two and continue the suit. The defence would collect two trumps, three clubs, one diamond and 100 points above the line.

IN MEMORIAM

BOOMSHOWER — In loving memory of a dear father, Oscar Boomshower who passed away May 31, 1965.
We think of him in silence,
No one can see us weep,
But still within our aching hearts,
His memory we keep.
—Daughter Mildred, son Doug, daughter-in-law Mary and grandchildren Bobbie and Lori.

BOOMSHOWER — In loving memory of a dear father, Oscar Boomshower who passed away May 31, 1965.
Five years have passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away.
God took him home — it was His will,
But in our hearts he lives still.
—Sadly missed by daughter Mary and son-in-law Jerry and grandchildren Gary, Steven, Jerry Jr.
